AS ENGLISH MAKE PANCAKES

More Elaborate Than the American Type, But Results Are Said to Be Excellent.

English pancakes are not the simple wheat preparations to which Americans are accustomed, but elaborate concoctions. Here are two ways of making them:

For custard pancakes use the yolks of six eggs and the whites of two, a grated nutmeg, a wineglass of brandy, a pint of cream, with sugar to taste. Pass the eggs, when beaten, through a sieve into a basin, shake in the flour and mix it with the eggs. Add the nutmeg, sugar and cream; stir all well, add the brandy, then the whites, beaten to a snow. Pour the mixture into a small shallow pie dish and set it in a moderately heated oven.

When it is done and cold cut it into slices and then dip each slice into a batter made with cream, eggs, flour and a little grated ginger. Fry them in boiling lard, drain them and send them to the table garnished with half lemons and powdered sugar.

Lancashire pancakes take trouble to make, but are worth the effort. Take the yolks of ten eggs and the whites of five, a quart of cream, six tablespoons of flour, two wineglasses of brandy, one grated nutmeg, a quarter of a pound of Brazil nuts and the same weight of sugar.

Beat the yolks and pass them through a sieve upon the flour in a basin. Stir in the cream and grated nutmeg, then the butter, which has been warmed; then the brandy. Add a pinch of salt, the nut meats sliced as thin as possible, and lastly the whites whipped to a snow. Fry the pancakes in heated butter as thin as a crown piece. Dish about six, one upon another, dusting sugar between them. Serve with half oranges and powdered sugar.

TRY CRANBERRY JELL BLOCK

Not a New Idea, but It Is One That Has Seemingly Been Forgotten for Some Time.

The newest thing in cranberries is cranberry jelly, made solid and stiff, and cut in little blocks. That is not very new, but then styles do not change in cranberries as they change in skirts and bodices, and double the good old cranberry is good enough in the good old days.

If you wish to serve cranberry jelly in blocks you must make a rich, solid jelly that will hold its shape. Pour it while hot in a flat, square dish—a dripping pan, if it is enameled, for cranberries should never come in contact with tin as the acid in them affects the tin. Have a jelly an inch and a half or two inches thick and when it is cold and very hard cut it with a sharp, thin steel knife in inch-and-a-half or two-inch squares.

This is a recipe for jelly that is hard enough to block: Wash thoroughly a quart of sound cranberries, rejecting any that show a soft spot, and being careful to remove all stems. Put them in a porcelain or granite saucepan with half a cupful of hot water and a heaping cupful of granulated sugar. Cook them in a double boiler rather than over the direct heat. Then run them through a sieve and hold in the flat pan.

A good, old-fashioned rule for the amount of sugar needed for cranberry jelly is this: "Put in all the sugar you can afford to use and then add another cupful." And with very tart berries the allowance of sugar given above might need to be increased.

Green-Pea Croquettes.

Boil the peas tender in enough salted water just to cover them, put through the vegetable press, beat to a paste with a tablespoonful of butter and two of flour, pepper and salt to taste, set over the fire in a double boiler and when hot through add a well-beaten egg and cook for one minute. Set aside until the mixture is stiff and cold, then make into croquettes. Roll these in beaten egg and fine crumbs and let them stand in the cold oil or on the ice for half an hour before frying them to a delicate brown in deep fat. Drain on brown paper in a colander before sending to the table.

Stuffs for Window Hanging.

In selecting goods for window hangings the first thing to consider is the character and exposure of the room they are to adorn. For an informal treatment there are few rooms in which the printed cretonnes will not be suitable and eminently satisfactory. They possess the great merit of being inexpensive, they are cheerful in appearance and are usually of good design. In nearly every large shop may be found a full assortment of qualities and patterns.

Cookies.

One-half cup melted shortening, one-fourth cup molasses, one-fourth cup sugar, one-half cup milk (sweet or sour), one-half teaspoon salt, one even teaspoon soda, one heaping teaspoon ginger. Flour to make as stiff as cookies. Flour the hands and make little balls size of English walnut, put on tin about an inch or two apart and bake. They will spread, but should not be soft enough to run together.

Baked Hash.

One pound round steak chopped fine, five large potatoes, one large onion chopped fine. Mix well together, add heaping tablespoonful flour, season with salt and pepper. Put into buttered pan and cover with water and bits of butter; cover well. Bake in oven until nearly done, then remove cover and let brown.

COOKING TERMS MADE PLAIN

Even Experienced Housewife May Find Some Explanations Here of Value to Her.

Different terms are properly used for different methods of combining ingredients in cooking, as any one who has handled a cook book very much must know. But everyone who has tried to cook does not know just what these various terms signify. Stirring is one thing, beating is another, folding and cutting are yet others—that we all know. But what are they?

Stirring is effected with a circular motion, winding from the center. That is the technical description.

Beating is an operation which incloses air in the ingredients beaten. This can be done in any way that separates the particles of the ingredients one from another and so lets in the air.

Folding is the term applied to the motion which prevents the air already inclosed from escaping and at the same time mixes the ingredients concerned. It is this motion which must be used when whipped cream, beaten egg whites and omelette light and beaten ingredients are mixed together or with more solid masses.

Cutting is the lightest sort of mixing—hardly mixing at all. Shortening is sometimes cut into flour with a knife. But the shortening and flour cannot be mixed completely by cutting.

Keep the meaning of these terms in mind when you cook according to a recipe. Remember that an ordinary cake you stir and beat. An omelette you beat and fold, and you do the same thing to a sponge cake.

BEWARE OF TOO MUCH SALT

Overcauping in Sauerkraut Will Prevent Proper Spicing and So Spoil the Quantity Put Up.

There are two essentials which must be observed in making sauerkraut. First it must be remembered that if too much salt is used, the kraut will not sour as it should, and the quality will be impaired.

Again, some salt must be used in order to preserve the cabbage till it cures sufficiently to preserve itself. When kraut gets sour it is like pickle, and there will be no further decay.

To make the best kraut, a slicer should be used, though it may be sliced with a knife, coarse or fine, as suits your taste.

Use a clean barrel or jar, put in a layer of cabbage cut fine, then a little salt, using not more than a quart of salt to a 40-gallon barrel of kraut.

If you like the kraut to have a little dill-seed or caraway. When the vessel is full, fit a clean barrel inside, and weight with a clean stone, never a piece of iron.

If your cabbage is early, and going to waste while it is yet warm, make the kraut and keep in a cool cellar.

This early kraut will rot a little on top. Remove this every few days, and wash off the inside of the barrel and weight, with warm water, to remove the germs of decay.

When Beets Prove Tough.

Late in the winter old beets are so tough and gritty as to be unpleasant, besides which objection there is the further one of their taking so long to cook until approximately tender. A new way of preparing them may prove a welcome change, as well as overcoming these objections. After boiling the beets, as usual, and removing the skin, pass them through the food chopper, then return to the fire to reheat, adding seasoning of butter, salt and pepper. Every particle of the vegetable will then be tender, eatable and well flavored.

Stuffed Onions.

Stuffed onions give the paper bag enthusiast an opportunity to try a new dish. Parboil onions for 15 minutes. Drain and scoop out half the onion. Chop this and mix with sausage or ground meat (either raw or cooked). Season to taste and put back in the onion. Wrap each one in buttered tissue paper or a greased cooking bag and bake in a hot oven. Paste occasionally with hot water in which a little butter has been melted.

Cold Baked Bean Soup.

Three cups beans, three pints water, two sliced onions, two stalks celery (or substitute celery salt if you prefer), one and one-half cups tomato. Simmer all together for one-half hour, then rub through a sieve; add one tablespoonful chili sauce, or tomato catsup, salt and pepper to taste, and one tablespoonful melted butter rubbed into tablespoonful of flour. Roll up once and serve.

Chicken Broth.

Take a fowl, no matter how old, and when weighed add one pint of cold water to each pound of fowl. Break the bones and cut the meat small. Cover with water and add one tablespoonful of rice. After it comes to a boil let it simmer for two hours. Strain and season with salt and pepper and serve hot.

Fresh Pork Shoulder.

Take a small shoulder and boil until the bone comes out. Then make a dressing of eight small potatoes (two or three onions, one-half loaf of bread and let soak until soft. Season with poultry dressing. Wrap in white cloth and press over night. This is very nice.

Pieces for Chicken Pie.

For pulling stubble and feathers out of chicken, an effective plan can be purchased for 25 cents.

MUCH VALUE IN ONION

ONLY THING AGAINST IT IS ITS UNFRAGRANT ODOUR.

As a Vegetable, and for its Medicinal Properties, It Cannot Be Too Highly Praised—Some Methods of Utilizing It.

Once every so often the glad news is sent forth that the onion is about to be decodized by some wizard of plant life, and the wives and intimate friends of the lovers of this piebald bulb all cheer up temporarily. Unfortunately, it has been a false alarm thus far and people have gone on eating them more or less shame-facedly, trying to down the ghost with parsley, salt and ground coffee.

There are really very few made dishes that are not improved with a soupcon of onion juice or a pinch of the onion salt that can now be bought in small bottles, and as for medicinal properties they are really surprising. Onion sandwiches eaten at night will do much toward breaking up a severe cold and are also beneficial in cases of insomnia. Onion poultices are one of the home remedies for both tonsillitis and a sore throat.

Onion Sandwiches—The onion is also an important part in sandwiches not intended for curative purposes. A combination of ground raw beef and minced onion is a favorite with many men and a caviar sandwich would be a dismal failure to most of us if the finely chopped onion was omitted.

Onion Soup—Onion soup is popular in high-class restaurants, but seldom seen on the home table. As it is economical, delicious and easily prepared, it should be given a speedy trial. Chop onions very fine and fry slowly in butter. Add home-made stock or canned consommé or bouillon and let simmer for a quarter of an hour. Pour over small squares of toasted bread (croutons) and serve with grated Parmesan or Swiss cheese. This is very much more appetizing than the onion soup made with milk.

Bolled Onions—Onions of every size and variety can be bolled—after standing for a while in cold water—and served with cream sauce or drawn butter, but the young green ones which have just substituted a bulbousness for their former straight lines are considered food for the gods by most gourmets when served with white sauce.

Ammonia will remove machine oil. Melted tallow will remove ink stains.

When coal is red hot it has parted with most of its heat.

Table napkins and table cloths should never be starched.

A new broom will last longer if the strands are tied together and put into a pail of boiling water and soaked for two hours. Dry thoroughly for two hours.

Marks that have been made on paint with matches may be removed by first rubbing the mark with lemon and washing it afterward with soap and water.

To prevent glassware from being easily broken, put in a kettle of cold water; heat gradually until water has reached the boiling point. When cool, take out glass.

To extract the juice from an onion, cut a slice from root end of onion, draw back the skin, press the onion on a coarse grater, working with a rotary motion.

A small piece of butter put into rice when cooking prevents it boiling over and improves the flavor.

If cloth that is likely to fade is soaked for some time in strong salt water before going into the wash tub, the colors will be much more lasting.

If a sprig of parsley dipped in vinegar be eaten after an onion, no unpleasant odor from the breath can be detected. Try this on your friend of this healthful but odorous vegetable.

To prevent black specks from forming on doughnuts, drop a few slices of raw potato into the lard when frying the cakes. The potato also purifies the lard, removing any touch of rancidity.

Japanese Rice.

Put into a stewpan four ounces of the best rice, well washed; stir in a pint of fresh milk and add one ounce of butter. Boil until quite soft. Remove from the fire and allow it to cool. Whip half a pint of cream until quite stiff and stir it into the rice with one ounce of dissolved gelatine. Sweeten to taste and flavor with any essence liked. Put into a ring mold. When cold turn out and fill up the middle with fruit. Sprinkle with caster sugar and pile whipped cream on the top.

To Cut Marshmallows.

When marshmallows are to be cut for mince and other dishes, use a pair of scissors frequently dipped in cool water. The marshmallows will cut easily and not be mashed.—Good Housekeeping Magazine.

Marm's Cake.

One-half cup butter and one cup of sugar creamed together. Add two eggs well beaten, one-half cup milk, one and one-half cups sifted flour and one and one-half teaspoons baking powder. Flavor with vanilla.

Coal costs money. You know it. The winter's coal costs BIG money. You know that also. Yet, half of it is wasted by poor management. Oh, yes it is! Listen and be convinced.

Ordinary soft coal is half gas. An average ton of $3.00 coal contains about 14,000 cubic feet of gas—common illuminating gas. A gas which will, if properly mixed with air, burn with an intensely hot blue flame. This gas represents the best half of your ton of coal.

This unburned gas and a large portion of the heat is CARRIED UP THE CHIMNEY by the air leaking cracks in stoves of ORDINARY construction.

There is only one way to save this wasted gas and heat and that is with a

Cole's Original Hot Blast Heater

which is so constructed that it has no air leaking cracks. In this wonderful heater and fuel-saver the gas is kept under perfect control until oxidized and burned.

It is the only stove that is made tight—holds tight—stays tight.

It is the only stove that saves the wasted chimney heat.

It's the only stove that gives you a constant, steady heat with soft coal, hard coal or lignite.

It will give you all the heat that is in your coal.

It will hold your fire 36 hours without attention.

It will burn all kinds of fuel.

It is guaranteed to consume one-third less fuel than any lower draft stove of the same size, using soft coal, lignite or slack.

AND—It is sold you under a guarantee to fill all these claims.

Back of this guarantee is the credit and capital of an immense factory and it is worth to you 100 cents on the dollar.

COME IN AND SEE IT. IT MEANS DOLLARS IN YOUR POCKET AND A PLEASED CUSTOMER FOR US.

"Shorthand by Machine"

See Students Writing It

At The Covington Business College

Coppin Building

We are teaching "The Machine Way in Shorthand" to an intensely interested class. And we want you to see these students write on this machine. "The Machine Way in Shorthand" is called Stenotype, and is written on a machine called the Stenotype. The Stenotype is one of the Four Great Machines that are saving the most time today in business.

You have seen its method advertised in the great national magazines. Now come and see, in an actual demonstration, what "Machine Shorthand" is and what it is doing. See what it enables the average young man and woman to do in stenography today.

Writes Plain English Spelling

Here is a system that enables you to write "shorthand" with great speed, accuracy and ease.

For Stenotype is simply plain English spelling with the silent letters dropped. The Stenotype writes it in plain alphabet type—the kind you learned when you first went to school.

Not one of the usual shorthand characters is used.

So there is only a little to learn about Stenotype that you don't already know. Learning to write it is mostly a case of learning to write on this simple machine, which embodies only 22 plainly stamped keys.

Come see the Stenotype before you enroll anywhere else. We teach both the "Machine Way" and the "Hand Way" in Shorthand. Come decide which you want to take.

Better Salaries

There are today in business thousands of successful Stenotypists. They are Weight, Only 8 Lbs.

The STENOTYPE

The Fastest Writing Machine in the World

accurate writers and unusually fast, for this machine permits accuracy and speed with ease. And their services, therefore, command higher salaries than are usually paid for stenographic work.

Students of Stenotype upon graduation are getting a premium price for their services. Because they enter business with a degree of efficiency that is not attained by the ordinary beginner.

Millions of Business Men Now Know

The Stenotype and Stenotype are now being advertised to millions of business men every month.

Soon every business man who hires stenographers will know what Stenotypists can do.

He will know of these legible Stenotype notes which can be transcribed by any Stenotypist as accurately as by the one who wrote them—notes which are read as easily a year after they were written as the day they were taken down.

315 Colleges Are Teaching Stenotype

Stenotype is being taught today in 315 business colleges in every important city in the United States.

Thousands of students, having investigated it, are now learning to take dictation this way.

We are teaching Stenotype because its principle is fundamentally sound and right—because W. S. Ireland, the inventor, an expert Court Reporter, spent nine years in perfecting it before he announced it—and because the Stenotype and Stenotypists have gained a permanent place in business.

Come See It Today

Call at our offices today and we will demonstrate Stenotype and the Stenotype.

We will show you why so many students are studying this system. We will show you how you can write on this machine.

You are not obligated in asking a demonstration.

Bring your mother or father with you if you wish.

You will see in this system of taking dictation some great possibilities for a good start in business and future rapid advancement.

So come see the Stenotype. Learn for yourself why it means higher efficiency and better salaries.

But This Does Not Bother Mrs. Burton, Under the Circumstances.

Houston, Texas.—In an interesting letter from this city, Mrs. S. C. Burton writes as follows: "I think it is my duty to tell you what your medicine, Cardui, the woman's tonic, has done for me.

I was down sick with womanly trouble, and my mother advised several different treatments, but they didn't seem to do me any good. I lingered along for three or four months, and for three weeks, I was in bed, so sick I couldn't bear for any one to walk across the floor.

My husband advised me to try Cardui, the woman's tonic. I have taken two bottles of Cardui, am feeling fine, gained 15 pounds and do all of my housework. Friends hardly know me, I am so well."

If you suffer from any of the ailments so common to women, don't allow the trouble to become chronic. Begin taking Cardui to-day. It is purely vegetable, its ingredients acting in a gentle, natural way on the weakened womanly constitution. You run no risk in trying Cardui. It has been helping weak women back to health and strength for more than 50 years. It will help you. At all dealers.

It was a very quiet Christmas in Burlington.

The whiteness of Christmas continues its sojourn.

G. G. Hughes made himself a Christmas present of a new watch.

The cold weather caught some autos with water in the radiators. Result—perforated radiators.

Bad weather reduced the attendance at the party given by Robt. Gaines last Thursday night.

According to the figures given out Cliff Hedges pulled off a series of profitable trades during the holidays.

Several of Burlington's young people attended the party given by Miss Martha Randall, at her home, Cedar Grove, out on Woolper Heights.

The recent bazaar conducted by the ladies of Walton Baptist church was a much larger success financially than they anticipated, the bazaar clearing a little over $100.

Burlington postoffice did a tremendous business the past ten days. In fact the pace that has been set during the holidays, if kept up would soon land it among the Presidential offices.

A movement is on foot to push the Carrolton, Big Bone and Covington electric line to completion, and Jett & Co. started a renewed effort with subscription of $5,000.—Carrolton News.

B. H. Berkshire, of Petersburg, has been appointed stamp deputy at that place to succeed C. C. Graddy, who has held the position many years, and has made a very proficient official.

Mrs. John Walton, wife of Dr. John Walton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Cropper and a sister of Sheriff-elect W. D. Cropper, is lying at the point of death at her home in Home City, Ohio.

The entertainment given by the pupils of the local common school the afternoon before Christmas was attended by quite a crowd of the friends and patrons who enjoyed the efforts of the little folks very much.

On behalf of the inmates of the Boone County Infirmary, I desire to thank the Burlington Christian Sunday school for its kindness and useful presents given them Christmas day. Respectfully, F. H. ROUSE.

A valuable young harness mare belonging to R. C. Huey, of the Commissary neighborhood, was snatched in one of its fees, the injury becoming so serious after a few days the animal had to be killed to put it out of its misery.

Dr. Langdale, of Cincinnati, was called in consultation, last Saturday, with Dr. Yelton, who has been attending Mrs. Forest Brady down on Gunpowder creek. Mrs. Brady, who has been an intense sufferer for many months, was taken to a Cincinnati hospital for treatment last Monday.

In this issue John Q. Elston, has a sale of personal effects advertised. He is making arrangements to go, with others, to Mississippi to make his future home. He made a trip south last fall to inspect the neighborhood where he will locate and thinks it is one of the garden spots of creation.

Kenneth, son of John Baldon, who moved to Colorado several years ago, was engaged in the mine which produced such a horrible disaster very recently. As it happened Kenneth's shift was not on duty at the time of the disaster. His father took part in the rescue work and assisted in bringing several of the dead miners out of the death pit.

J. B. Respass, of Woodlawn, O., purchased through B. B. Hume, real estate agent, the 220 acre farm of Rev. Geo. N. Buffington on the Covington and Lexington pike, paying therefor the sum of $18,500. This is about the cheapest farm that has been sold in that neighborhood for some time. Mr. Respass is one of the leading race horse men of this country, and will arrange and equip the farm for breeding that class of stock.

On the 14th day of February a civil service examination will be held in Covington for applicants as postmaster at the following offices in this county: Lexington, Grant, Verona, Walton, Richwood, Union, Florence.

A green Christmas appeared a foregone conclusion up to about seven o'clock on Thursday morning when a few straggling flakes of snow were noticed and in a short while their number was increased materially and by nine o'clock very large flakes were falling thick and fast. The fall of snow continued all day and had it not melted it would have been six or seven inches deep by night, where only about three inches remained, and its sojourn was prolonged through several days by the fall in the temperature Thursday night and Friday.

LETTER FROM ILLINOIS.

THE OLD YEAR.

Christmas, with its gay festivities has made its annual round, and has receded into the past. Perhaps no holiday in our calendar brings so much real joy to the hearts of the people as old Christmas, the date of our Saviour's nativity. That was joyous news the heavenly messenger brought to the shepherds on the plains of Bethlehem. "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people." Whether the twenty-fifth day of December is the correct date of this important event or not, it is virtually so to the people now. While we have the authorities in this correctness coming from a large religious body, or rather the head of this body, its correctness has been disputed. We shall not discuss this question in this letter. We have bidden the old year with all its comforts and its vicissitudes a final farewell. Welcome the New Year.

THE NEW YEAR.

We stand in the threshold of a new year. What the old has been to us we know. What the new year will be and mean to us, is yet unknown. Some of us will dolefully face adversity, times as well as prosperity. But we can do and dare. The opportunity is ours to grow.

Shall we grow better in this year of 1914? Grow better in what you ask. Better in our relations to God; better in our dealings with our fellowmen; better in our trades and callings; better in our work of righteousness; yes, and better in our politics. I opine that this year, 1914, is to bring some great blessing to us if we will but "follow the righteousness." Let charity reign in all hearts throughout the year.

POLITICS.

I do not need to remark that politics is a very uncertain thing these days. The politicians are conversant with the fact that it is now, and has been for several decades, fearfully corrupt. I do not see how it can be any better now, and has been for years, notorious, with but little improvement to date. The Lorimore episode of two years ago must yet be fresh in the minds of many of the readers of the Recorder.

The Lorimore case is not an isolated one. But progressive questions are now in the air. The old party politicians, at least many of them, have been fighting back these. But what's the use? They might as well try to dam the Mississippi river. There are three political parties now claiming to be progressive: Prohibition, Socialist and the Roosevelt party. The Prohibition party, the oldest of the three, is now claiming to be the first to declare for the majority of the progressive ideas that are now looming up.

The Prohibition leaders say their party has always stood for woman suffrage. It is more than guess work that when Roosevelt declared for this reform for I call it a reform, that question revived good impetus. But candor compels us to admit that the platforms of the Prohibition party show that this party has been exceeding the privilege on certain questions. Why? We would like to know. It is claimed that the votes of the women in a late election caused some towns in the state to "go dry" which otherwise would have gone wet. I believe it is right and only fair to give the women a chance in this fight. They are the greatest sufferers from the curse. Who has not seen the evil effects of the legalized liquor traffic? What good citizen can stand aloof from this conflict and say, it doesn't bother me?

In a future letter I may ask some of your good correspondents a few questions.

I wish to have my memory refreshed in regard to some things around the old home neighborhood.

Elder J. E. Masters, Dorchester, Ill.

Writing from Winter Haven, Florida, under date of Dec. 29th, L. S. Beemon, says:

"I am well and doing fine. We had a terrible thunder and rain storm last night and the streets looked like lakes. In this town is an army of land agents, and the first thing they ask of a stranger is 'are you looking for grove to take?'"

Have gone crazy on the fruit question. Small tracts of land with small shacks on them are selling from $5,000 to $10,000. This town looks like an orange grove. Gardens here look like ours in June. I intend to go to Elvira lake this week. I guess you are having some cold weather now. Here it is clear and windy. A showman's tent was blown down last night and everything got a thorough wetting.

Dr. Yelton will entertain the Boone County Medical Society to night, Thursday. The doctor has established a reputation as being a most expert about the chest, and he will excel himself on the approaching occasion. The gastronomic and oratorical fetes will take place at the Boone House.

Kelly-Chowning Reception.

Wilbur Kelly and Miss Ella Chowning were married at Covington December 29th. The ceremony was performed in the pastor's study of the Madison Avenue Baptist church by the Rev. T. H. Plimmans. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and a few other friends of the young couple were present. Immediately after the ceremony the young couple accompanied by their friends, the Johnsons, were whirled away in a touring car to spend the first hours of their honeymoon with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Kelly of Burlington.

Arrived there, they were met by a number of friends, mostly school friends of the groom. Kelly home was tastefully decorated for the occasion in colors befitting the holiday season. Garlands and wreaths and bells were prettily arranged—just enough of them to produce a pleasing effect.

The guests were seated at the big table in the dining room, groaning with its weight of good things such as only a mother can prepare for her son's wedding feast. After that there were music and games and merriment in the parlor until a late hour. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, of Latonia, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Kelly, of Cincinnati, Misses Pauline and Alberta Kelly, Sarah Huey and Margaret Hughes and Messrs. Courtney Kelly and Arthur Kelly. The young couple were the recipients of many handsome presents most of them being useful. They went to housekeeping at once in the city of Covington.

The groom is too well known in Boone county to need special eulogy here. The youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Kelly, he is a graduate of the Boone County High School and Mueller's Business College. He is now very satisfactorily employed with the Masons of Covington. His wife is a popular belle of Covington and both of them are active workers in the Baptist church of that place. Both of them have many friends who wish them long and happy lives.

James McAtee Dead.

James McAtee, of Beech Grove neighborhood, died on the 29th ult., after an illness of several months of Bright's disease. Mr. McAtee's wife was a daughter of the late Elijah Ryle and a sister of Perry Ryle, of Burlington. The deceased is survived by his wife and several children.

James McAtee was one of the old school of Kentucky gentlemen, possessed of the several attributes that go to make a good neighbor, a devoted husband and an indulgent father. He was the spirit aid of life and a person always felt better after having been in his company. He led a quiet but active life, and was always ready to respond to the calls of duty towards his fellowmen. In his death the family has lost a devoted husband and father, the community is deprived of one of its best members and from the county is taken a just and upright citizen. The burial was at Bellevue, Monday, and the services were conducted by the Masons, of which fraternity he had long been a faithful member.

It is claimed at Washington that the State of Kentucky is indebted to the United States Government in the sum of $1,433,757.39, deposited with the state in 1836 by the federal authorities and that attempt is being made by the United States Treasury to obtain the return of the money have been ignored. Large sums were deposited by the United States with various States in 1836, at a time when the United States Treasury had more money than it knew what to do with. For the so-called purpose of a sinking fund, and under agreement that the money should be returned by the States when the United States Treasury needed it. Efforts since that time to get back the money have met with defeat.

An enthusiastic turnpike meeting was held at Hebron one day last week and money to the amount of $4,500 was subscribed for the construction of turnpike from North Bend to Hebron. To build it is estimated that $9,000 will be required and the fiscal court will be asked to subscribe $4,500 towards the road, which, when completed will be toll free.

If a like community interest in road improvement prevailed thru out the county a system of good roads would soon be obtained and at a very reasonable tax rate. In fact they could be acquired and the present rate of road tax reduced several cents on the $100 of taxable property.

At the annual meeting of Burlington Masonic Lodge held last Saturday afternoon the following officers were elected:

F. H. Rouse, Master.
Sidney Gaines, S. W.
Albert Conner, J. W.
N. E. Riddell, Secy.
A. B. Rouse, Treasurer.

Jesse Kirkpatrick, S. & T. The lodge increased its membership considerably the past year, emerging from a state of lethargy that had prevailed for some time.

SAVORY TABLE BIRD HANDY FOR HOUSEWIFE

GOOSE A FAVORITE WITH ALL OF HEALTHY APPETITES.

Excessive Fat to Be Avoided If It Is to Be Served Up Roasted—Cooking Recipe Handled Down From Colonial Days.

By LIDA ANES WILLIS.
A goose intended for roasting should not be excessively fat, as it will lose most of its grease in the process of roasting. This fat will give the meat a rank flavor and will not increase its wholesomeness. When sage is used in the stuffing, you render it less digestible on account of the essential oil in the sage. Well dried and powdered sage, however, may be used in very small quantity, adding merely a suspicion of the flavor.
Braised Goose—This is really the most satisfactory way to roast your goose. With your favored stuffing, or without stuffing, when it is well done it practically becomes a roast goose, the advantage of this method being that it admits of it being more juicy. Remember that a goose is both unwholesome and unpalatable when insufficiently cooked.

Roast Goose a la Mount Vernon—This is a recipe from old Colonial days: The young goose is stuffed with the following: Well mashed potatoes, which are slightly seasoned with light fried onions, salt, pepper and a little minced parsley. Accompany the goose with apples cut in halves, pared, dipped in goose grease and sprinkled with a little sugar.

Dutch Stuffing—This is considered the best stuffing for goose: Small Dutch or finger potatoes are sliced fine, salted, peppered and mixed with the kidney and cauliflower from the interior of the goose, finely cut or chopped, or half their weight of suet or scraped bacon.

Picayune Stuffing—Take one cup of mashed potatoes, four cooking apples, pared and cored, four white onions, one teaspoonful of sage well powdered, half a teaspoonful of thyme, and pepper and salt to taste. Place apples, onions and herbs in a saucepan with sufficient water to cover, and cook together until soft. Mash well and press through a sieve. Add a cup of mashed potatoes, mix well, season to taste with salt and pepper. Stuff both body and crop of the goose, and proceed as for roasting a turkey. If roasted in an open pan, baste every ten minutes in order to have it nice and juicy. It generally requires an hour and a half to roast well, but the rule of twenty-five minutes to a pound is a safe one to follow.

If your goose is very fat or you have reason to suspect it is past its first youth, it should be first boiled or steamed and then finished in the oven.

WINDOW PLANTS IN WINTER

Heat, Dust and Lack of Moisture Are the Enemies Against Which Warfare Must Be Waged.

In some windows we note healthy plants at the beginning of the winter, but gradually they wither and grow spindling, thus becoming an easy prey to insects and disease. In other hands the plants grow as robust as when out-of-doors in summer, and the window is soon full to overflowing.

The trio of menaces to plant-life in the winter in the living room are usually heat, dust and lack of moisture. The average room is kept too warm for the health of most plants, and humans as well.
It is the lack of moisture in the living room which renders it so much poorer a place for plants than the kitchen window, where there is sure to be an abundance of steam.
Washing the plants freely removes the dust, which clogs the pores and interferes with the organs of breathing. Those with the large leaves, like the rubber tree, are most improved by frequent sponging.

Pouring Gas for Sanitary Jar.

The ordinary Mason jar with tops are airtight and dust-tight, but liquid cannot be poured from them without spilling. This difficulty can be met by the use of the sanitary jar spout cap, which is simply a cap to fit any size jar with a spout arrangement in the middle. The contents of the jar can thus be poured without even the trouble of unscrewing the top, and the spout closes automatically when the desired quantity is poured. These caps, including a set of gummed labels, cost ten cents apiece.

Value of Glycerine.

Nothing is better for chapped hands than a mixture of glycerine and olive oil in equal proportions. The softness of the oil takes away the smarting property of the glycerine.
To make glycerine jelly equal to that sold, and quite pure, dissolve a one-ounce packet of table gelatin in a little water; then whisk it into a pint of glycerine.

On Both Sides.

It is a good idea to make buttonholes on both sides of a lingerie waist. Sew the buttons on a tape and button them to one side of the waist. When the waist goes to the laundry you can remove the buttons, and the same tape of buttons can be used on several waists.

To Absorb Odors.

Keep a dish of charcoal on one of the upper shelves of the refrigerator, changing it every few days. It is an excellent absorber of odors.

COOKING TABLE ABSOLUTELY THE BEST OF ITS KIND.

Especially to Those Whose Pantry Is a Cold One This Device Will Be Found to Make for Economy in Steps, Time and Fuel.

Not long ago I saw a cooking table or cabinet that would be appreciated by every housewife who has a cold pantry opening out of her kitchen. It is next to impossible to keep such a pantry warm enough to be able to handle the flour, eggs and dishes used in cooking, with any degree of comfort.
By this device one can economize steps, time and fuel.
The cabinet is nine feet long, two feet and four inches wide, and two feet eight inches high.
It is divided into three compartments of three feet each. In the right-hand cupboard is the flour barrel. The cover to this section has hinges, so that it may be raised to reach the flour. The bread board is kept on top of the barrel, and there is space at the sides for bread tins, mixing spoons, and various small articles.
In the left-hand cupboard or section are kept food, mixing-milk, molasses and vinegar jugs, sugar box and tin dishes.
In the center are four deep drawers, the upper one being made into two. In these are kept eggs, spices, soda, and whatever else is needed in the culinary department.
One drawer is devoted to towels, dishcloths, etc., and another to such things as are to be mended, together with the necessary materials for doing the work speedily and well.
In small space, here, is found nearly everything that is used every day in the pantry.
The housekeeper who owned it told me that, having used the cabinet one winter, she would not part with it for many times its cost, if she could not get another.
This one was made without any floor, to save expense. Of course, one must vary the size according to the space in which the cabinet is to be placed, the main object being to have the floor where it will be warm—Exchange.

FASTENS TO TABLE.

A new type of ironing board clips to the edge of a table as shown, and when folded takes up but little space. It can be cheaply made, is light to lift about, and when fastened to the table as a main support is more stable than a light ironing surface without similar bracing.

Baked Stuffed Ham.
After having soaked a small ham in a good supply of water for from 12 to 14 hours trim off the unsteatable parts from the underneath side and boil it till it can easily be skinned. Remove the skin, wash the ham to the bone and fill up the cuts with a forcemeat made of bread crumbs, a little thyme, finely-chopped parsley, a seasoning of salt and pepper and enough butter to mix these ingredients to a paste. Brush the ham over with the well beaten yolk of eggs, stuff it with bread crumbs and bake slowly until quite done.

Beef Cake.

Cut enough meat from cold roast beef to make one pint when chopped with two small onions. Add to this two tablespoonfuls of tomato catsup, one cupful of fine bread crumbs and one-half cupful of gravy. Mix thoroughly and mold into cakes; sprinkle with bread crumbs and bake to a delicate brown. When cold arrange on a large platter, pour a tablespoonful of mayonnaise over each and stick a sprig of parsley in the center of each cake.

To Renovate Mattings.

Paded and worn matting still too good to be thrown away can be made to look almost like new by the following treatment: Scrub it thoroughly and let it dry. Then go over the entire matting with green dye, using a soft, broad paintbrush. A gallon of dye, of the kind used for cotton goods, may be made out of one package costing 10 cents. The results will be surprising. Both the crex and the finer rugs can be treated in this manner.

Stuffed Celery.

Wash tender celery hearts and put them into cold water to become crisp. Mash fresh cream cheese, then add chopped nuts and chopped olives to taste. Stuff the celery just before serving and serve with toasted crackers.

Household Uses of Milk.

Wash all varnished woodwork in sweet milk—separated milk is best. You will be pleased with the results. Use the milk, too, for washing oilcloth or linoleum; it resprings the dirt and does not take off the gloss as does soap and water.

PRINCESS SHOT BY A MOTH

Accused Husband Saved by Remarkable Evidence Introduced in Italian Court.

There seems to be no good reason for doubting the story that set free a Neapolitan prince accused of murder. It was the locally notorious case of the Princess Caravella, at Naples, Italy. After giving a dinner party she proceeded to her room to snatch a few minutes of rest in order to refresh herself for a dance.

She was discovered lying dead on her bed, with a pistol wound in her heart. Her husband, Prince Caravella, had been noted for his jealous disposition; and, as it was certain that no stranger could possibly have been in the princess' room, suspicion pointed to him and he was arrested. The pistol was found lying near the murdered woman, which in itself was favorable to the prince, for no murderer, whose he courted detection, would thus leave the weapon to be discovered. In spite of this, it was probable that things would have gone hard with the accused but for the shrewdness of a Naples police officer. This man carefully examined the bedchamber and, being aided by the bedclothes, he found one of those large moths that abound in Italy. A lighted candle had stood on a table by the bed, and the moth's wings bore evident marks of having been badly singed against the flame.

What was more important still, some of the powder, found from the moths wings was found on the trigger of the pistol, and the pistol had lain in such a position that it covered the princess' heart. It was clear, argued this astute detective, that the moth had burned its wings and had fallen on the table where, writhing in agonies, its wings had struck the trigger of the pistol, and the pistol had been thus fired. It was noted that the trigger worked with exceptional ease.

It should be remarked that these Italian moths are larger than any with which we are familiar in Canada. On this evidence the prince was acquitted.

ENGINEER GETS RECORD FEE

Englishman to Receive $400,000 for Superintending Construction of Ottawa (Canada) Water Works.

"Does engineering pay?" is frequently asked by the prospective student—the young fellow just starting out to make a name and a fortune for himself in some profession. There are eminent engineers in the United States who have received fabulous salaries for their services in consultation, but the largest recent figure reached goes to an English engineer, Sir Alexander R. Binnie of London.

Sir Alexander is to receive a fee of $400,000 to take charge of the construction of the water supply system of Ottawa, Canada. It will require several years to complete this undertaking, and Sir Alexander is to pay at least one visit to the works himself each season. He has contracted to furnish the surveying corps and the engineers to direct every branch of the work. Thus he merely transfers his office from London. In the case of New York's gigantic project just being pushed to completion, the primary engineering work and the final supervision was handled by the city's staff.

"For the Honor of the Service"

One of the crew of the American battleship Ohio, recently in harbor at Marseilles, made friends one night with a French tirailleur from Algeria, who picked his pockets of $20. The American lodged a complaint and the tirailleur was arrested. He was formally identified by the American, who, however, when he discovered that the robber was a soldier, wished to withdraw his charge "for the honor of the service," suggesting as a suitable alternative that the magistrate should allow him to settle the matter "man to man" out of court with honorable regulation gloves, as his worship should please. His worship did not please that the case should be settled in this rough-and-ready manner, and although the American sailor has withdrawn his charge, the tirailleur is still held at the disposal of the authorities.

Boston's New Custom House.

Unique among public buildings in America is the new custom house which is being erected in Boston. It is to be a tower, 505 feet high, and in design is virtually a monument to crown the pyramidal sky line of the city. The old pyramidal shape of the state house at its apex, has been destroyed by the building of skyscrapers. Boston's building laws now forbid the erection of private structures more than 125 feet high, and the new custom house is designed to rise above its surroundings and form the dominating feature in any view of the city.—Popular Mechanics.

Couldn't Stand Pink Pajamas.

Pink pajamas aroused the ire of Louis Delaha, who cheerfully admits that he's "kind of rough," when he awoke one morning recently in Bellevue hospital, New York, where he had been taken after an attack of influenza. With a roar of disgust he hurried through a window, dashed down Twenty-sixth street, peeling the obnoxious covering as he went, and disappeared in the East River. Watchmen, a few policemen followed, and after a struggle rescued him. Back in Bellevue he was given a common toilet shirt, and with a sigh of content he went back to sleep.

REAL DISHWASHING AN ART

With Proper Preparations and Material, Much of the Drudgery May Be Done Away With.

The art of dishwashing has become almost extinct in this quick-going age, when the only way to do a thing is to do it at once and have it soon over. Yet real dishwashing is an art.

Dishwashing requires two dishpans, one in which to wash and the other to rinse the dishes; an abundance of heavy linen towels, some lighter ones for glasses, a good dish mop and dishcloth. The dishcloth should be of strong linen. Stair crash is excellent for this purpose, as it will become soft enough to be flexible and is very durable. Make these cloths about ten inches long, of narrow crum and hem them to prevent the edges from fraying when they are put through the laundry.

First of all, the dishes should be gathered up and properly scraped, then held for a moment under the hot water faucet to take off the first coating of grease. Any dishes or knives and forks used for fish should be carefully wiped with paper, as dishcloths are infected by fish immediately.

Put the dishes in hot suds. Use the dish mop freely and transfer them to the other pan to be rinsed. Let this second pan be very large and have a wooden drain fitted in two inches from the bottom, so that the boiling water poured over the dishes will drain off them. This is the best and least wasteful way of draining.

In washing the silver use a silver soap and thus avoid the weekly silver cleaning day, with the added inducement that the silver is constantly bright.

Wash spiders, pots and kettles separately and with an iron dishcloth. Pots and kettles should be washed inside and outside and thoroughly wiped before being set away. The coffee pot and teakettle should be boiled out at least once a week with soda and water to keep them tastelessly clean.

FOUR CHEAP CAKE RECIPES

Any One of Them Sure to Be Appreciated Either for the Family Table or Guests' Luncheon.

Banana Cake—Beat two eggs, put them in a cup and fill it with cold water and melted butter, adding equal quantities of each, one cup of sugar, 1 1/2 cups of flour and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in layers. Spread each layer with frosting and slice the bananas (very thin) over the frosting. Frost the top.

Pepper Cake—One cup sugar, 1 tablespoon melted butter, one-half cup milk, one cup flour, one egg, one teaspoon baking powder, pinch of salt. Flavor to suit taste.

Lemon Jelly Cake—One cup sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two eggs, three-fourths cup water, two cups flour, three teaspoonfuls baking powder. Bake in three layers and put together with the following: Three-fourths cup of sugar, one egg and the juice and grated rind of one lemon. Cook in double boiler. To make orange jelly cake use an orange in place of a lemon.

Orange Cake—One-half cup butter, two cups sugar, creamed; add one cup milk, two eggs well beaten, three cups flour with two tablespoonfuls of baking powder sifted in. Flavor with orange juice or extract. Bake in layers and put together with icing and very thin slices of oranges, also cover the top with icing.

Some Timely Recipes.

Dei Monte Salad—Use only firm white lettuce, wash carefully and put on ice to crisp. Cut head in quarters, using one quarter for each portion. Tomatoes peeled and cut in quarters. Asparagus tips served in ring of green peppers. Mayonnaise dressing.

Waldorf Salad—Take equal quantities of celery and chopped sour apples. Serve with mayonnaise dressing which has chopped walnut meats in it.

Endive Salad—Wash carefully and put on ice to crisp. Serve with French dressing and cheese cracker.

White Grape Salad—Remove the seeds from the grapes; serve on crisp white lettuce leaves with a French dressing.

Whole Wheat Bread.

One and one-half pints of whole wheat flour, one teaspoonful of soda, two teaspoonfuls of salt, three-quarters pint of cold water. Sift the dry ingredients together (having the teaspoonful of soda rounding and the salt and cream of tartar level), then add the water; stir thoroughly; place in a well-greased round tin, cover with a buttered paper and bake for one hour over constantly boiling water. Remove from the steamer and bake for three-quarters of an hour in a slow oven.

Dust the Window.

The glass of windows would need cleaning far less often if it were dusted regularly, inside and out. It easily reached. A folded pad of newspaper is the best thing to use, and if this is sprinkled with a few drops of ammonia or paraffin it will serve for window cleaning also. When the windows are to be washed they should be dusted first with the newspaper pad if very dusty, and the cleaning and polishing will be more easily done.

Economical Curtains.

When making curtains of any kind, make the hem the same width each end so the rod may be run through either. The stitching does not show and once a month, or oftener, the curtains may be reversed, and they wear more evenly.

TO PREVENT HORNS GROWING

Operation May Be Performed by Simple and Painless Method—How Cautic is Applied.

(By R. W. HICKMAN.)

When circumstances are favorable, as in the case of farmers who build up their herds by raising the progeny, the horns may be prevented from growing by a simple and practically painless method, and the custom of preventing the growth of horns is becoming more popular and more generally practiced under all conditions. The calf should be treated not later than one week after its birth, preferably when it is from three to five days old.

The agent to be used may be either caustic soda or caustic potash, both of which may be procured in the drug stores in the form of sticks about the thickness of an ordinary lead pencil and five inches long. These caustics must be handled with care, as they dissolve the cuticle and may make the hands or fingers sore. The preparation of the calf consists in first clipping the hair from the parts, washing clean with soap and warm water, and thoroughly drying with a towel or cloth. The stick of caustic should be wrapped in a piece of paper to protect the hands and fingers, leaving one end of the stick uncovered.

Moisten the uncovered end slightly and rub it on the horn buttons or little points which may be felt on the calf's head, first on one side and then the other alternately, two or three times on each, allowing the caustic to dry after each application. Be very careful to apply the caustic to the horn button only. If it is brought in contact with the surrounding skin it will cause pain. Be very careful also not to have too much moisture on the stick of caustic, as it will remove the skin it allowed to run down over the face. After treatment, keep the calf protected from rain, as water on the head after the application of caustic will cause it to run down over the face. This must be carefully avoided. Either caustic soda or caustic potash alone, without the admixture of other substances, answers the purpose very satisfactorily.

In the very young calf the horn button, or point that will ultimately develop into a horn, has scarcely any attachment to the skull, and may be felt as a small button embedded in the skin. In this early stage it may be easily removed with a sharp knife or a pair of scissors, but even then caustics should be applied to kill any remaining cell-life belonging to this germ point. Otherwise there may be some subsequent irregular horn growth, which is more or less of a disfigurement.

Keeping Quality of Butter.

The keeping quality of butter is governed to a great extent by the method of ripening. If the cream is properly ripened and churned, the butter evenly salted, it will, under ordinary conditions, retain its good quality for some time, while if the different processes have been carelessly conducted, the butter will not thoroughly ripen, and the salt will not become rancid.

DAIRY NOTES

The biggest cow is not always the best milker.

Bad sanitary conditions and tuberculosis go hand in hand.

Only a few weeks of grace if you are going to build or dig a silo.

Plenty of good water and shade will lengthen out the cow's pasture.

The safest preservatives for sweet milk are cleanliness and prompt cooling.

Oats and pea hay is a nutritious and valuable feed, if cut at the right time.

The tuberculin test, when properly applied, has little or no effect on milk production.

Early and late milking seems to be the only satisfactory way of solving the fly problem.

The man who buys cows and sells them again as soon as they are dry is not a real dairyman.

DEFIES EFFORTS OF CAMERA

Speed of Bullet on Its Mission of Death, Makes Photographing an Impossibility.

If a photograph of a speeding bullet could be taken the print would probably show a space like a body of water marked by what looked like speeding water bugs, each leaving a ripple in its wake. Photographs of projectiles have been snapped in time of peace, but it is doubtful if the camera ever caught one on its mission of death. A bullet speeding at the rate of 3,000 feet a second, which is more than 2,000 miles an hour, makes a great disturbance in the atmosphere and creates air waves, which of course are invisible to the naked eye.

If you draw a stick through the water it causes little eddies and waves to trail behind it. The faster you draw the stick the more waves and the wider the angle will it leave. The slower the stick is drawn the fewer waves. Just so the bullet. If it is traveling slowly no waves can be photographed, apparently there are none. It is only objects traveling at a terrific speed that create any appreciable air waves.

Photographs of a bullet going at a rate of speed less than 1,200 feet a second show no air waves at all. This is an interesting scientific discovery. But anything cutting through the air at a greater rate than this disturbs the atmosphere to such great extent that air waves are formed and can be photographed.

'KILLER' WHALE NO MEAN FOE

Diaries of Captain Scott Tell Remarkable Story of the Strength and Vindictiveness.

The whale is usually supposed to be an innocuous animal, and not lightly would we assail a character for virtue that has been well established. But Captain Scott's diaries show that the "killer" whale is a veritable demon, and an intelligent demon at that. He tells us that on one occasion the ship's photographer, Ponting, and two dogs were on an ice floe when they were attacked by six or seven whales. The method of assault was ingenious. The animals swam under the ice and smashed it by blows from their bodies with the evident intention of shaking their victims into the water. Then it was clear that the whales shared our astonishment, for one after another their huge, hideous heads shot vertically into the air through the cracks which they had made. As they reared them to a height of six or eight feet it was possible to see their tawny head markings, their small, glistering eyes, and their terrible array of teeth—by far the largest and the most terrifying in the world. There cannot be a doubt that they looked up to see what had happened to Ponting and his dogs. . . . That they could display such deliberate cunning, that they were able to break ice of such thickness (at least two and a half feet) and that they could act in unison were a revelation to us.

An Education From a Nickel.

A young girl who lived in Mississippi asked her brother to give her the money to go to college. He told her he could not afford it, and tossing her a nickel, added, "Unless you can go on that."

The plucky girl took the five-cent piece and bought some calico, from which she made a bonnet that she sold for 25 cents. With this money she bought more calico, and made more bonnets. After she had made several dollars in this way, she determined to raise potatoes. She did all the work in the field except the plowing. The venture was a success, and she had enough money to start at school. She did not stop work, however, and it is not surprising that a girl of so much determination was able to borrow enough money to supplement what she made.

She was graduated with honor from the state college for women, attended a medical school, still earning all her expenses, got her degree, and is now a successful practicing physician in a large town in the south, and it all began with a nickel!—Youth's Companion.

Legal Terms Bother Her.

Legal terms are at times likely to bother the best of us, so no wonder that occasionally they stump some of the negro citizens that find their way into the courts.

The other day Mamie Rose of Vincent Alley was up before Justice Golden in the Northwestern police station charged with assaulting Alice Cooper, a neighbor.

The facts in the case had been threshed out when Justice Golden announced that he would hold the case sub-curia.

Mamie pondered a minute, and then leaning over the brass railing, said: "Judge, I can't understand this law talk: just tell me how long this sub-curia means in jail."—Baltimore News.

Most Read of German Authors. Gustav Frenssen, whose fiftieth birthday has just been celebrated in literary circles in Germany, can claim to be the most widely read author in the Kaiser's dominions.

According to statistics that have just been published by a bookellers' organ the total circulation of Frenssen's books in the German language alone amounts to 1,000,000 copies. The most successful of his works was "Jorn Uhl," which reached the unprecedented figure of 225,000 copies, and which is the novel by which he is best known in other countries.—Glasgow Herald.

UNION.

Whereas, our beloved sister and co-worker, Mrs. Lynn Frazier, passed from the turmoil of this life Dec. 28th, 1913, into the joys of the eternal, be it

Resolved, That in her death our society has sustained the loss of its most efficient and faithful president, and we feel that our loss is irreparable.

She was a woman of most attractive personality, combining true culture and refinement with gracious dignity and modesty. The memory of her character was unselfishness. Here was a faith that admitted no discouragement and a love that grew not weary in its doing. We shall greatly miss her prayers, her abiding faith, her cheerful christian spirit, her labors and her contributions.

We do not know how some of the experiences of life are going to be met without her, but we do know that the influence of such a life is far-reaching and will be felt at times and in ways of which we are unaware.

She was a charter member of the Presbyterian church at Union as well as the Sunday school and society.

All that love and skill could do was done to keep her here by infirmities and claims. Her path for the heavenly home, the "house not made with hands eternal in the heavens."

We extend our love and sympathy to her bereaved husband and loved ones and pray the Father may sustain and comfort them.

We therefore, be it resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy sent to the Recorder for publication and a copy spread upon the minutes of our society.

LETTER FROM FLORIDA.

Lake Worth, Fla., Jan. 1, 1914.

Editor Recorder—I am sending you some literature from which you might get some information that would please your subscribers who might want to invest some money for a good investment and I am positive that it is a fine place to invest money in. The newly redeemed lands in the Everglades, as the ground is just as level as a floor and thousands in fact about 5,000,000 acres just as black as a crow, and lots of it is being farmed now successfully, and I have seen everything in the way of vegetables and fruit growing, also blue grass, and wheat and alfalfa in small patches just to show it will grow anything on earth, and at the season of the year when it can't be raised elsewhere, therefore commanding fine prices. I am enclosing you sample of the land. I am here and will be glad to assist any one of our people in any way I can while I am here in locating and describing anything I have brought to you. I am in template buying, as have been all over this land and have noted all the places which are most desirable. Some things have been badly misrepresented. Thousands of people have bought property from maps and when they come and find it they find it covered with water and have spent lots of money to come here only to find themselves in trouble, and for this reason people should advise some one to advise them correctly; that is some one they can depend upon. I am in shape to advise any one where to buy good, high, dry land in South Florida. I also advise about other matters; I will also answer any questions that may be asked. Hoping you all are enjoying as fine weather as I am. I have lots of fine fish on my own catching, besides fruit, beans and tomatoes to eat, also raw potatoes, lettuce, radishes, etc. The weather here today is about 85 degrees and fine, clear weather. Best wishes and a happy new year to all my friends and patrons.

W. J. BRELL.

Kelly-Ryle Nuptials.

Miss Hetha Ryle daughter, of Fillmore Ryle, and Wilber D. Kelly, of Z. T. Kelly, were married at Burlington by Rev. Edgar C. Ryle, on Dec. 24th, 1913. They were attended by Miss Pearl Ryle, cousin of the bride and the bride's brother, Kenneth. That evening a reception was given at the bride's parents, where an elegant supper was served to about forty invited guests. The presents were numerous, and included Parlor lamp, Clarence and Kenneth Ryle; meat fork, J. C. Kelly and wife; cream pitcher and sugar bowl, James Wilson; berry set, Dr. Carlyle and wife; salad and teaspoons, L. L. Stephens and wife; cracker jar, L. L. Stephens and wife; set of teaspoons, E. R. Scott, wife and Miss Rennie Stephens; set teaspoons, Hubert Ryle and wife; salad dish, Ben Scott; salad dish, Mamie Aylor; table cloth and napkins, Chas. Rizza; table cloth, G. R. Aldrich; stand cover, W. B. Stephens and wife; parlor towels, Robt. Aylor and wife; dresser scarf, Hubert Clore and wife; stand cover, Miss Pearl Ryle; center piece, Mrs. Annie Ryle; stand cover, John Ryle; napkins, Plute Clore and wife; table cloth, J. L. Stephens and wife; dresser scarf, Hensley and wife; stand cover, Mrs. Lucy Ryle; butter knife, Reuben Hager; dresser scarf, Mrs. Nannie Maurer. The bride is very popular in the social circle, while the groom is a prosperous farmer and highly esteemed by all who know him. We congratulate Wilber, also the happy bride, and we hope they will have only happiness and success will follow this union for many years.

They Cannot Do It.

On some rural routes in this county it is impossible for the carriers to carry the mail at times during the winter and spring only on horse back, so the people on these routes should not load the mail with merchandise at this time of the year, for should the mail become too heavy and be reported, it would cause an inspector to come and examine the route, and we would lose our mail route. We who have had to ride four or five miles for our mail and get it once a week at that, should do all in our power to help keep a daily mail.

STRAWBERRY THE FRUIT FOR MASSES IS BEING CULTIVATED

Strange That Fruit That Adapts Itself To Varying Conditions of Climate and Soil Is Not More Generally Grown In a Commercial Or Amateur Way

Strawberry bed, properly mulched for the winter, Kentucky Agricultural Station Farm.

The strawberry is the fruit for the masses. It is often called the cosmopolitan fruit, because it so readily adapts itself to varying conditions of soil and climate. It is rather strange that a plant so comparatively free from disease, so easily cultivated, and so reliable, is not grown more both in a commercial way and in an amateur way for the home. It has been estimated that only one farm home in thirty is supplied with the delicious fruit. Kentucky is admirably located geographically for producing berries on a large commercial scale. Located, as it is, between the North and the South, the berries ripen just after the Southern crop is over and before the bulk of the Northern crop is ready for market.

Aroma—A popular Kentucky berry.

Strawberries are not exacting when it comes to soils. This fruit requires a great deal of moisture, but it never should be planted on land that does not drain well, because, like all other fruits, it is very important of "wet feet." In general, early kinds seem to do better on a light soil, while the later varieties attain a higher degree of perfection on a somewhat heavier type of soil. In planting out a bed avoid land that has recently been in sod. It is better to plant on land that has been in cultivation for a season or two, because sod land is very likely to be infested with the larva of the white grub. This worm lives upon the root of the plants and oftentimes a great deal of harm is done before the cause is known.

Planting may be done in the fall or spring with successful results, but one year with another spring planting appears to be better. Distances for planting vary in different sections. In general the rows are placed about three feet apart and the plants are usually set eighteen inches apart in the row.

If the space is limited and berries are desired for home use the "hill system" is used. If this plan is followed, the individual plants are placed close together and all the runners are kept cut back. For all general purposes the narrow matted row system is used. If this system is followed, one should plan to get a matted row of plants twelve to fifteen inches wide, with the individual plants about five or six inches apart.

When the plants are ready to set the roots should be shortened and covered with mud or wrapped in a damp cloth. In planting see that the earth is placed firmly about the roots and that the crown is level with the surface of the ground. It is a very good plan to pinch off all but two or three of the older leaves, in order to lessen evaporation of moisture. Keep all blossoms down the first season.

During the month of December the bed should be covered with a mulch of clean straw or leaves. It is a good plan to apply the mulch just after a frost or heavy snow, because this will have a tendency to hold the blossoms back in the spring and lessen the danger of loss by frost. In spring, after the growth starts, the mulch may be loosened where it is too heavy for the plants to push through. The mulch should be kept on until after the fruiting season.

At the close of the fruiting season the old bed should be cut over with a scythe or mowing machine. Let the leaves remain for a day or so, until they dry, then burn them. After this, take a small plow and turn the land between the rows, leaving only six or eight inches of the old row, and harrow the land in the same manner as outlined for the first season.

Very often growers are disappointed because their beds refuse to bear fruit. The plants are thrifty, and in the spring they blossom well. Men who are making a business of strawberry growing know that there are perfect and imperfect varieties. The perfect will bear anywhere, but the imperfect varieties need some of the perfect kinds planted near them, in order to insure fertilization.

Klondike—An early ripening market berry.

Varities differ so widely in different sections that it is hard to recommend any certain list. It is best to follow the advice of your nearest reliable nursery, because they usually are in a position to know what varieties succeed under their soil conditions. Tennessee Prolific, Gandy, Sample, Haverland, and Aroma succeed well throughout Kentucky. Tennessee Prolific, Gandy and Aroma are perfect varieties, while Haverland and Sample are imperfect. J. H. FEEDING THE DAIRY COWS

Returns From Good Feeding Are Prompt and Sure

DRAW YOUR PAY AT ONCE

Does Not Pay to Run a Cow on Half Capacity—Big Amount of Milk Yields Are Secured Only When the Cow Eats a Large Amount of Feed.

It pays to feed good dairy cows. The returns are prompt and sure. You feed the cow, take your bucket and go right around and draw your pay at once.

The first essential in feeding is that an ample quantity of feed be supplied. It does not pay to run an engine upon half capacity. Neither does it pay to run a cow on half capacity. Big milk yields are secured only when the cow eats a large amount of feed.

It is also important that the feed shall be correctly balanced, and shall furnish the elements necessary to maintain the cow and to furnish the material which go to make up milk.

Next, the ration should be palatable, that is of such a nature that the cow will relish it. Pasture grass and silage are splendid examples of palatable feeds, as are also such feeds as wheat bran, oil meal and cotton seed meal, fresh and not musty, and bright, sweet, well-cured hay.

Next the feed shall be economical or cheap. Some feeds are palatable and well balanced, but are entirely too expensive for cow feed. At times wheat bran, oats and oil meal must be placed in the class of feeds which are too expensive for profitable use for feeding in large quantities. Home grown feeds are usually the most economical as feeds grown on the farm do not have the producers' profit placed upon them. Corn and the legume hays, such as clover, alfalfa and cow peas form a perfectly balanced, home grown ration. Those dairymen, as a rule, secure the greatest profits who grow large amounts of feed on the farm.

Another important matter in successful cow feeding is that the cow be given a sufficient variety. A cow fed only one feed for a long period without change. A mixture of several different feeds serves to whet the cow's appetite.

An ample quantity of good, clean roughage is exceedingly important. This is best furnished by clover, cow peas or alfalfa, hay, corn stover or silage. Best results are obtained when roughage constitutes about two-thirds of the cow's ration by weight. The following grain mixtures give splendid results when fed to milk cows.

(a) 400 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds cotton seed meal.

(b) 400 pounds corn and cob meal, 150 pounds dried distiller's grains, 100 pounds cotton seed meal.

(c) 400 pounds corn and cob meal, 200 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds cotton seed meal.

(d) 400 pounds corn and cob meal, 200 pounds ground oats, 200 pounds cotton seed meal.

In connection with good legume hay and silage the cow should be given one pound of the mixture for each three to three and one-half pounds of milk given, when the roughage is not a legume, 1 pound grain mixture to 2½ to 3 pounds of milk.

A cow of ordinary size will consume thirty pounds of silage per day at advantage, and when silage is fed the amount of hay required is reduced one-half.

Two good home grown rations are as follows:

(e) 10 pounds crushed corn and all the alfalfa, cow-pea and clover hay the cows will clean up.

(f) 10 pounds crushed corn, corn stover, alfalfa, alfalfa, cow-pea or clover hay.

The most important constituent of a dairy feed is protein. Cotton seed meal, oil meal, wheat bran, dried distiller's grains, alfalfa, cow-pea and clover hay are examples of feeds rich in protein. The protein is used principally in the production of the casein in curd milk, and large quantity is required for this purpose. The value of a feed is largely determined by the quantity of digestible protein which it contains.

Good results have been secured when the ration consisted of corn silage, cotton seed meal and cow-pea or clover hay and corn stover. With silage, cow-pea or clover hay, feed one pound of one of the above grain mixtures to three and one-half to four pounds of milk given by the cow. It is safe to feed the cow about all the silage she will clean up. The same is true of hay.

The wise dairyman will grow silage and corn and protein-rich hay and will buy protein only to a limited extent, and then in the form of such feeds as cotton seed meal, dried distiller's grains, etc. A small amount of wheat bran or oil meal may be occasionally added for the sake of palatability and variety.

The mixtures mentioned above are only a few of the possible mixtures which may be used with good results. More complete information on the subject of profitable feeding and handling of dairy cows may be obtained by communication with the dairy department of the State University Experiment Station.

CHICKENS CAN'T STAND SALT

Fowls Will Never Deliberately Devour Mineral and When Mixed With Feed It Proves Fatal.

"It does not seem to be generally known that an excess of salt will kill chickens, says a writer in the Farmers Mail and Breeder. 'Very frequently we get word from people who have had the experience of losing large numbers of chickens from simply giving them too much salt.'

This is never done deliberately, but comes about in a most innocent way. For instance, one woman baked a cake and made the mistake of putting in salt instead of sugar. When the error was discovered, 'a was of course found that the cake was unfit to eat, and as a consequence it was thrown to the chickens. Practically all of the chickens died as a result.'

In another case some ice cream was ordered, and the salty water which was left in the freezer was poured into the chicken feed, with the result that the next morning practically all of the lady's chickens were dead.

"So we might go on with these instances, but this is enough to show what the deadly effects are when chickens get too much salt. Chickens will seldom deliberately eat salt in its pure form, or drink enough salty water to kill them, but when it is mixed with their food it nearly always proves fatal."

IMPROVED SPADE FOR BUTTER

Implement Devised by Minnesota Man Cuts Through Print Easily, No Matter How Hard It Is.

When a knife is too dull to be of much use people are fond of referring to it as "too dull to cut butter." Who ever originated this remark evidently had small experience in cutting butter, for a good, cold, firm print is not so easily divided as most folk imagine. Warm butter may not have much consistency, but cold butter has. A Minnesota man, who is not necessarily a farmer because his first name is Reuben, has invented a butter spade which creamerymen and dealers will find much more effective than the long, thin-bladed knife they have been using. The spade is shown so plainly in the illustration that further description is unnecessary. It can be used either with the right or left hand and provides for a straight, downward movement, which insures a more even cut from top to bottom than can be obtained with a knife. The blade is much stronger than the blade of an ordinary knife, too, and is not likely to wobble.

DETERMINING A COW'S VALUE

Important Fact Can Only Be Found Out by Weighing Each Milking and Keeping Daily Record.

The value of a cow can only be known by weighing each milking and keeping a daily record of the same. The weighing of the feed and the weighing of the milk is now followed by expert dairymen.

Sometimes a good cow is not appreciated because the yield comes from her months of milking rather than from the big yield soon after calving. A dairyman at a farmers' meeting a few weeks ago said: "I have introduced the system of weighing the grain and forage fed to the herd and weighing the milk of each cow. It takes very little time to do this, and you can then know after a few months what cows are the most profitable."

A persistent milker will in most every instance prove the most profitable cow to keep.

The Danish dairymen raise what cows they need. The most profitable cows can only be had by careful breeding—wise selection, practical feeding and thorough milking. In some dairies the young cows are milked three times a day to develop their milking qualities.

Valuable Winter Feed.

Unthreshed peas may be made a valuable winter feed for hogs by leaving the crop in the field until the vines are well cured, when they are gathered without being cut with the common bull rake used in haying. There are a few vines left where the rake starts, but as soon as a quantity has gathered upon the teeth they are taken up clean with but little scattering. They may be fed from the rack during the winter without threshing.

Small Fruits.

Both currants and gooseberries thrive in limestone soils, provided the climate is not too warm. Both of these small fruits are cool-weather crops and demand fertile soil. There is an increasing demand among canneries for these fruits.

DAIRYMEN AND FARMERS MUST RAISE MORE DAIRY COWS

(W. D. Nicholls, Dairy Department Kentucky College of Agriculture.)

Our attention has been frequently directed to that class of milk producers living near the outskirts of large cities who follow the practice of buying cows when fresh, feeding them until they no longer give a profitable amount of milk, at which time they have become fat and then selling them for beef. "Not only has this been the practice of city dairymen but in sections more remote from the city many dairymen have depended largely on buying their cows. Many have even gone so far as to depend entirely on purchased cows to supply their dairy. They have been encouraged in this by the high price of veal calves, and have gone to the extreme of selling off all calves, both heifers and bulls, and making no attempt whatever to raise their own milk cows. In the last few years this plan has proven profitable because beef prices were so high and fat milk cows sold for as much or more than the same cows when fresh, frequently bringing as much as 7½ to 8 cents per pound.

While during the past this plan has worked well, we believe that many farmers will be forced to discontinue the practice, because of the essential weakness of the system which requires that all cows, however good, go to the butcher after serving one year in the dairy, this meaning the slaughter of thousands of good dairy cows and a consequent shortage in the supply.

Cows of average quality or even rather inferior grade cows are bringing from $60 to $100 each. Ten years ago such cows sold freely at less than one-half the present prices. This means that raising milk cows is at present a very profitable business and many stockmen will undoubtedly show their wisdom by taking advantage of the opportunity thereby afforded and will raise a few good young dairy heifers each year. Not only is the raising of such stock profitable at the present time, but the best posted stockmen predict that it will continue so for a good many years to come.

REPUBLICANS

Urged By Wamamaker to Aid Democratic Administration in Tending New Currency and Tariff Laws.

Philadelphian, Jan. 1.—"We have lots of room in this country for courage and energy, but there is no room or reason for a panic. What the President wants and the country wants are strong men, unselfish and broad visioned, able men to help him and his Cabinet to lead the way the motto for the new year is 'don't be blue.'"

With these words, almost at the end of a forceful and spirited address, John Wamamaker today at the Union League Club, urged the members of that stalwart Republican organization to give an opportunity to the Democratic Administration to prove the worth of the new tariff and currency legislation.

"The Republican party, long in power, had in its hands the reins of the unrest of the people with a tariff unnecessarily high in spots," said Mr. Wamamaker.

"That party was deaf, dumb and blind to the widespread evidences of a determination to enforce changes in the tariff corresponding to the improved machinery and greater skill of American workmen."

"The day of judgment came to the Republican party in November, 1912. Good Republicans, out by broken pledges, resolved to punish their party's deaf, dumb and blind leadership. They united against radicalism and deliberately joined forces with the Democratic brethren in turning over the National Government to Mr. Wilson, who took office pledged distinctly to two objects of profound interest to the business world:

"1. A lowered tariff.
"2. A revival of the monetary law to improve the old banking act of the Civil War time."

"In less than one year both these great undertakings have been accomplished. All honor to the persistent President and the Democratic statesmen who have made their word good."

Long Roads Economical.

The average life of horses and automobiles may be increased and the cost of hauling reduced according to the Office of Roads, of the Department of Agriculture by relocating many old roads and the more scientific laying out of new ones. The natural tendency of a road building is to build a straight road, whether it goes over steep grades or hills, or not, and pulling over these grades usually adds to the wear and tear on horses and vehicles. The doctrine of the Office of Roads is that the longest way around may often be the shortest and most economical way home, and that frequently by building a highway around a hill or grade, even at the expense of some tillable land, but little appreciable distance is added and this is more than offset by the reduced strain of hauling.

Officials of the Office of Public Roads point out that the running of a road and the resulting traffic through a farm where there are good sheep, cattle, horses, grain, fruit, or vegetables, has a certain advertising value and in many instances makes the land more valuable. In other cases, the importance of such a level road to the community is so great that it might well repay those using the road to give the farmer the equivalent in and equally good in place of what he has sacrificed to the common welfare.

The soils in China have been in continuous cultivation for more than 4000 years and have not decreased in productiveness. Every particle of manure produced is carefully used and the soil is replenished by sewage. Fanning there is on an extremely intensive scale and is not capable of a comparison with our systems but it shows what can be done. Authorities credit each horse with producing $27.00 in manure each year, each cow $19.00, hog $12.00, sheep $2.00. This represents the total production and as some loss is unavoidable it does not represent the actual amount it is possible to save. It has been estimated however, that during a winter of seven months a small farm carrying four horses, 20 cattle, 50 sheep and 10 hogs would produce manure worth $250 and this figure is entirely practicable. It will be readily seen that this income is considerable, even on a small farm and on a large place where much livestock is kept the returns from this source would be much larger. The real properties of farmyard manure and what it contains depend largely on several factors. Chief of these is the care it has received. The species of animal and its age affects the composition as does the food eaten.—Missouri Farmer.

Let the farmers scattered all over the country be wary in following the suggestions of politicians. All of the politicians are not in the political parties. For instance, what is called the National Grange recently met in New Hampshire and passed resolutions bitterly attacking President Wilson because he had not allowed the Grange to select the Secretary of Agriculture. The Grange actually declared that President Wilson, "because of his life, training and environment," was not fit to select his own Cabinet. There was politics back of this proposition, and it was worked for all it was worth.

WINDOW PLANTS IN WINTER.

Heat, Dust and Lack of Moisture Are the Enemies Against Which Warfare Must Be Waged.

In some windows we note healthy plants at the beginning of the winter, but gradually they wither and grow spindling, thus becoming an easy prey to insects and diseases. In other hands the plants grow as robust as when out-of-doors in summer, and the window is soon full to overflowing.

The trio of menaces to plant life in the winter in the living room are usually heat, dust and lack of moisture. The average room is kept too warm for the health of most plants, and humans as well.

It is the lack of moisture in the living room which renders it so much poorer a place for plants than the kitchen window, where there is sure to be an abundance of steam.

Washing the plants freely removes the dust which clogs the pores and interferes with the organs of breathing. Those with the large leaves, like the rubber tree, are much improved by frequent sponging.

BLUE SKY LAW.

Ready To Be Introduced in the Kentucky Legislature.

Frankfort, Ky.—A "blue sky" law, patterned after the Kansas law, controlling the method of selling stocks, bonds and securities, will be introduced at the incoming Legislature by Representative Elwood Hamilton, of this city. The bill exempts national and state banks and building associations.

All dealers in stocks and bonds are required to take out a license with the State Bank Commissioner and heavy penalties, fines of from $1,000 to $5,000 and imprisonment in the penitentiary, are provided for promoters of bogus mining stock exploits or insurance companies where too large commission is taken out for the sale of the stock, and besides, the agents selling the stock are liable in a suit for the recovery of the principal and interest.

Real estate agents selling real estate outside the state must file an abstract of the title to the property to be sold with the County Clerk or they will be guilty of violating the law.

FARMER'S FRIEND.

Every Meadowlark Worth a Dollar a Year to Grain Farmer.

To the farmer the meadowlark is of incalculable value. Not only does it eat the large number of harmful insects and weed seeds that it eats, but because it has no bad habits. Its food consists mostly of insects, and it is one of the few birds that will eat the hairy caterpillar; and does not stop at bugs with a disagreeable odor. At the time it is most abundant, the meadowlark turns to seeds of various kinds for its food, destroying large quantities of weed seeds.

When food is scarce, it will pick up the grain which has been scattered during harvesting but will not touch the grain under ordinary circumstances.

Farmers everywhere should use their influence to have laws passed that will protect them and also should post notices against hunting.

Wheat From Canada.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—The opinion of some of the best authorities in Western Canada is that the wheat of that country will soon come into the United States free of duty; that with the meeting of Parliament in the month of January it will be so changed that the grain now held in bond by the various markets of the United States will be handled either on milling or export account. Many good men in the wheat trade at Chicago are praying that the laws will be so changed as to admit the Canadian wheat free, as they figure that under those conditions the market of the United States will be natural and that manipulation will be more difficult.

A lusty gentleman of African descent noting the ease of advertised letters at the local post office enquired of deputy postmaster Eberhart one day last week how much it required to secure a letter. Being informed that it took only a penny he replied he would take the entire batch at such cut rate prices. On being further interrogated as to which letter was supposed to be addressed to him he said none of them, that he was offering to buy four specimens of each. He didn't get them it is needless to say.—Lawrenceburg Register.

Experienced men believe that in the southwestern states, and perhaps elsewhere in America, Turkish tobacco can be raised successfully, and it is thought that it might be raised while it encourages the industry. While suitable soil and climate naturally are the prime requisites, a great deal depends upon a thorough knowledge of the proper method of planting, curing and handling the tobacco.

A Kansas farmer who firmly believes that pigs need sunshine has built a hog house, which contains more than 4,000 panes of glass. The house has many modern improvements, such as a stove, artificial heat, the temperature never falls below freezing. During the last three years, this farmer has raised an average of 928 hogs per year which he has sold for $13,713. His hog house cost about $2,000.

RELICS

Of a Prehistoric Age are Uncovered by Workmen Blasting in a California Gravel Pit.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 4.—Scientists believe that the habits of the prehistoric man who hunted and was hunted by the saber-tooth tiger, will be thrown by the uncovering of relics at a depth of nine feet by a blast. They consisted on a collection of implements which may date back to the stone age. The workmen unearthed a number of stone tools found, but a hewn stone bowl was rescued just as it was about to pass under the rollers of the crusher of an endless chain conveyor.

The gravel and sand in which the stone utensils and tools were found is of so solid formation that the workers are forced to blast at frequent intervals, and it seems certain that it must have required centuries to bury the relics at this depth in question.

The finders say he was once told by a Mexican Indian that the land in which the gravel pit has been sunk was the bed of a great river ages ago, according to traditions handed down in his tribe, and he is inclined to believe that this might have been the case, because of the nature of the sand.

A remarkable fact in connection with the relics discovered is that no weapons such as spear heads have been found, the find consisting of pestles of stone bowls and a stone axehead. The bowl, which is preserved in the office of the company at the works is a fine specimen of a bowl, although worn smooth by age and use, still retains the marks in places of the stone chisel with which its owner patiently chipped it out.

STATE NEWS.

We understand that a stock company has been organized by the farmers of Oldham county between Gloshon and Prospect for the purpose of building a flour and grist mill and an orchard grass cleaner at Prospect. The promoters hope to save thousands of dollars annually on the cleaning of their orchard grass alone.—Oldham Era.

However strange it may seem, there is a sentiment among some Powell county good citizens against good roads, and we have lost four good paying subscribers in the county on account of our persistent advocacy of good roads. They have argued with us that good roads will not make their land grow a single ear of corn more, but it will increase the market value of their land which will make their taxes higher, and for this reason they oppose good roads.—Clay City Times.

"HORSE SHOE BEND."

First Farm Name to Be Recorded in Dearborn County.

The last legislature passed a law that permits a farmer to give a name to his farm and by the payment of a fee of $1 to the county recorder he can have the name recorded.

In many counties in the State the law has been taken advantage of and farmers are not only having the names of their farms recorded, but are having the name put up over the entrance to their driveway with their name below as the proprietor.

There is an element of permanency and pride about the plan that withers a much pressure, more farmers and a betterment of farm conditions.

In Dearborn county the first man to act under the law and the only one so far is Thomas T. Squibb, of Aurora, who has recorded the name of "Horse Shoe Bend" for his farm of 234 acres located a short distance out of Aurora on North Hogan, section 30, township 5, range 1.

Doubtless many of our up-to-date farmers will shortly avail themselves of the law and farm names will in time be accepted as the proper thing.—Lawrenceburg Press.

Woman, 1914 Model.

The 1914 model woman will surpass all previous models yet produced. This is absolutely guaranteed. Men should place their options at once, for although the supply is not strictly limited those who make a quick choice will naturally secure the best looking road companions. Only one to a corner, although those who make a selection which proves unsatisfactory may later have a second choice, after lawfully disposing of the first one.

The 1914 model will be very graceful, with slim body, well curved, so as to attract immediate attention. She will be able to withstand much pressure, have small waist, firm clutch, partially visible mechanism below the body, as in previous seasons, and will be absolutely tireless. She will be somewhat hard to control and will require more to run than any previous model, but will make up for this in speed. Owners should put on the brakes very frequently, however, for if she once exceeds the limit, it will be very hard to keep her within the lawful speed thereafter.

There will be several colors to choose from. The very light shade with yellow top and the dark models with brown and black tops will prevail. Both should be handled carefully. Owners should bear in mind that the 1914 model will be very apt to skid if the road isn't pretty smooth. Now, step up gentlemen, and select!

AT REST.

The Remains of Mrs. J. L. Frazier Consigned to the Grave in Richmond Cemetery.

This entire community was overwhelmed with sadness and grief when apprised of the death of Mrs. J. L. Frazier (nee Nangle, nee Whitlow) which occurred at her home near Union, the Frazier homestead Sunday morning, Dec. 28th, at 2 a. m., surrounded by her devoted husband, three brothers and sisters-in-law.

For nearly three weeks she had been ill, first with muscular rheumatism from which she suffered greatly, later developing pneumonia and for days her life hung in the balances, but under the heroic skill of Dr. Senour and efficient nursing of Miss Hauser she passed through the crisis and we began to hope for her recovery, but serious complications set in and it was beyond the power of man to restore her.

She was the only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Anselm August. She was born August 28th, 1861, was 52 years of age, and lived most all her life in this community.

For many years she was a teacher in the public schools, and was considered one of the most efficient teachers in the county. She always had the interest of the schools and advancement of education at heart. She was imbued with the loftiest ideas of teaching and training the young boys and girls in the town and community. She was the organizer of the "Improvement League" of the Union Graded school. Her opinion and advice for the advancement of every good cause was continually sought.

Aside from her many admirable traits of character with which she was endowed, that endeared her to all, she was a Christian whose faith never wavered. This was the anchor to her upright and very useful life. For years she had been a prominent member of the Presbyterian church at Union, and that body feels that the loss of this very consecrated, earnest, consistent member is irreplaceable.

She was united in marriage to J. L. Frazier, October 4th, 1895. She was a most devoted wife and perfect happiness reigned in the home of this very congenial couple. Distressing and appalling to her husband, her family, especially her dearly beloved aunt, Mrs. Rachel Rice, and friends is the sad event of her transition, but we believe she has been crowned with honors the world could not give her, crowned with laurels that fade not away.

Her life was a beautiful character—her life was an open book pointing to better ways and higher walks, a revelation to deeds of love and acts of charity. Her heart was never weary in giving sympathy or hands in extending charity.

She leaves precepts, example and achievements as a rich legacy which will fall as a benediction to her loved ones and friends, that will encourage, sustain and bless them thru life. "The rose is crushed but the Aroma lingers to sweeten the memory of her life."

The funeral services were conducted from the Presbyterian church in Union, Tuesday, Dec. 30th, at 11 a. m., by the Rev. Dr. Senour of Louisville.

No words we can write, no epitaph that might be engraved on her tomb can ever tell of the affection and esteem in which she was held, or did the aching hearts and falling tears of that multitude of friends and relatives as they stood over her bier. After impressive services, they bore her body to Richmond cemetery and there in the Frazier lot consigned it to the cold earth beneath flowers. "Bright be the place of thy soul, no lovelier spirit than thine ever burst from mortal control into the mansions of the purer zone of the invisible." S. V. G.

Let the farmers, in the words of the late Walter, "prove all things and hold fast to that which is good." They have done much in their own behalf in the past twenty years, and they can do more. They are better off than they were twenty years ago; second, because they are better trained in business affairs than they were twenty years ago; third, because the world is more eager for their products and willing to pay better prices than they were twenty years ago; fourth, because they are farming better than they did twenty years ago.

B. B. Hume is now on the list of ex-Sheriffs, his term of office having expired with the advent of last Monday. Mr. Hume made the county a splendid official, being prompt in the performance of every duty, and courteous and obliging at all times. He kept the outside work in hand, while his daughter, Mrs. Fowler, looked after the clerical work, which she executed in a painstaking and most accurate manner, being able at any time to make a statement as to the condition of the State and several county funds of which she had to keep an account. The books she kept were neat and a credit to her. In retiring from the office of sheriff Mr. Hume and Mrs. Fowler take with them the best wishes of all for future prosperity.

There Will Be a Hot Time in The Old Town Then.

The probability is that a motion will be made in the Boone county court at its February term for the appointment of a police judge, marshal and a board of trustees for the town of Burlington. It has been many years since Burlington had a town governing body, and if one is appointed it will not be long until the citizens of the town will be called upon to make some necessary improvements to the needs of which have been in evidence for some time. Gov. McCrory may as well prepare to call out the militia.

Following are the names of those whom it is proposed to have appointed town officers by the county court at its coming February term:

Police Judge—Garnett Tolin.
Marshal—Grover Jarrell.
Councillmen—
O. P. Phipps.
Newton Sullivan, Jr.

Geo. Clark, Secretary.
W. A. Bullock, Treasurer.
Hubert Rouse, Tyler.
C. P. Tanner, S. D.
Oscar Brown, J. D.
Wm. Goodridge, Jr. and W. I. Baker, Stewards. The lodge tendered a rising vote of thanks to the ladies for their kind services at the noon hour and also to the Odd-Fellows for the use of their hall.

His Fourth Term.

County Judge P. E. Cason swore for the fourth time last Monday that he would support the constitution of Kentucky and perform the duties of the office of Judge of the Boone County Court according to law. This is a record that has no equal in Boone county, and shows what the people are willing to do for the public servant who proves himself eminently worthy of their confidence. Judge Cason is yet a young man and long may he serve the people of Boone county if he is not chosen to fill a higher position for a larger constituency.

HELP FARM WOMAN

Housewives of Progressive Farmers Asked for Views.

Many Seek Means of Increasing Personal Income and Better Means of Marketing Produce — Other Farm Topics of Interest.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To ascertain the fields in which farm women desire specific assistance, a letter of inquiry has been addressed to the housewives of 55,000 progressive farmers in all the counties of the United States. This letter asked no questions and left every woman free to discuss any need which occurred to her. She was invited to take the matter up with her neighbors and make a reply which represented not merely her personal need but the recognized need of the women of her community. Replies to this letter have been received in great numbers. There has not been time for a complete analysis of these letters, but from those which have been read it is evident that women want help in practically every phase of home management, from the rearing and care of children to methods of getting the heavy work, such as washing, done by cooperative agencies.

Many women seek means of increasing the precious personal income which they receive from poultry, butter making, or the garden in their care. Many ask the department to suggest new handicrafts or gainful home occupations, and others seek better means of marketing the preserves, cakes, or fancywork that they now produce.

The overwork of farm women and their fear of the effect of overwork on their children is the text of many of these letters. The difficulty of securing domestic help, due seemingly to the fact that daughters of farmers no longer take positions as home makers, has added to the farm housekeeper's burden.

Many ask the department to prove to the men that their work is worth something in dollars and cents. Still others express a realization that their own lot is hopeless and self-sacrificingly ask that better things in the way of education, cheaper school books, improved schools, lectures, libraries, and museums be provided for their children. Many request that the department establish a woman's bureau, issue weekly or other publications designed for women and dealing with matters of cooking, clothing, home furnishing, education of children and care of the sick.

Co-operation in Soil-Survey Work. With the view of making soil surveys more valuable to the farmer, a new basis of co-operation has been established by the department of agriculture with the states through their experiment stations, agricultural colleges, and agricultural bureaus. Under this plan the department will give precedence in conducting detailed soil surveys to those states which co-operate with the department in the matter and which request that such surveys be made.

During the past year 19 states have appropriated money for soil surveys in co-operation with the department. If the request for soil surveys on the part of co-operating states absorbs all the department's funds for such work, no projects will be undertaken in non-co-operating states. It is believed that where the soil surveys are made at the special request of the state agricultural agency and in districts where the state is actively engaged in extension work, the state authorities will be willing and able to help the farmer to gain the greatest possible benefit from the department's reports and soil-survey maps.

Farm Demonstration Work. In the boys' demonstration work in the south, 450 members of the boys' corn clubs in the various southern states produced yields of over 100 bushels of corn to the acre. The work of the canning and poultry clubs, through which the girls of the farm are encouraged to preserve in a form suitable for home use such products as tomatoes and other vegetables and fruits as can be profitably produced for local consumption, on many farms has yielded satisfactory results.

In the northern states a good beginning has been made in farm demonstration work during the year. This work is prosecuted for the most part in co-operation with the agricultural colleges through county agents, who devote their entire time to the study of local agricultural conditions and needs and act as counselors and advisers to farmers, encouraging the adoption of improved methods and where advisable the introduction of new crops.

While the organization and establishment of this work in the north and west is too recent to indicate in any very definite way what may be expected to result from it, a summary of the work of the agents in the 30 counties longest established discloses that more than 6,500 farms have been visited and more than 1,800 farmers' meetings addressed, with an attendance exceeding 130,000. Co-operative work has been carried on directly with nearly 2,400 farmers, many of whom are being encouraged to select and test carefully their seed corn.

Legal Standards for Food. The establishment of legal standards for judging foods would render the food and drugs act more effective, less expensive in its administration, and supply needed legal criteria. Under present conditions it is necessary in the individual prosecution to establish the standard of a standard for each individual article. This procedure is very expensive, and sometimes its cost is out of proportion to its value.

Moreover, it may result in lack of uniformity in different jurisdictions. With legal standards established, the control of foods would be more uniform and measurably less expensive. The lack of such standards is today one of the greatest difficulties in the administration of the food and drugs act. These standards, however, should be in the form of definitions, because numerous standards furnish recipes for sophistication. The standards, moreover, should be sufficiently flexible to permit improvements in production.

Organization of the Department of Agriculture. There were 14,478 employees in the department on July 1, 1913. Of these, 2,924 were employed in Washington and 11,554 outside of Washington. Of the entire force, 1,812 were engaged in scientific investigations and research, 1,322 in demonstration and extension work, 637 in administrative and supervisory work, 6,021 in regulatory and related work and 4,635 were clerks and employees below the grade of clerk.

The Production of Eggs. According to statistics of the department of agriculture, the products of the American hen aggregates a total value of over $670,000,000 annually. Poultry and eggs are produced in all sections of the country, but it is a noticeable fact that the bulk of these important products is produced by the farmers of the Mississippi valley. In this section there are practically no large poultry farms such as are commonly found in the eastern states and on the Pacific coast. Poultry keeping, therefore, is usually incidental, the hens being considered and treated generally as an agent for converting material which would otherwise go to waste into a salable product. Consequently the poultry and eggs produced constitute merely a by-product of the general farm.

In order that the farmer may sell more eggs, better eggs, and obtain a better price for them, the department has issued the following suggestions: Improve your poultry stock. Keep one of the general purpose breeds such as the Plymouth Rock, Wyandotte, Orpington, or Rhode Island Red.

Provide one clean, dry, vermin-free nest for every four or five hens. Conclude all hatching by May 15 and sell or confine male birds during the remainder of the summer.

Gather the eggs once daily during ordinary times and twice daily during hot or rainy weather. In summer, place eggs as soon as gathered in a cool, dry room.

Use all small or dirty eggs at home. Market frequently, twice a week if possible during the summer.

The department has also issued the following suggestions to the country merchant and cash buyer: Candle all eggs and buy on the loss-off basis.

Allow the farmer to see you candle the eggs occasionally and return those rejected if he wishes them.

Pack carefully in strong, clean cases or fillers. Do not keep in a musty cellar or near oil barrels or other odoriferous merchandise.

Ship daily during warm weather.

Bouillon Cubes Not Concentrated Meat Essence.

The belief of many people that bouillon cubes are concentrated meat essence and of high nutritive value, is shattered by a bulletin of the department of agriculture. The department authorities say that while they are valuable stimulants or flavoring agents they are not rich in nutritive value and are relatively expensive in comparison with home-made broths and soups. The bulletin compares the contents and food value of bouillon cubes with meat extracts and home-made preparations of meat.

The ordinary commercial bouillon cubes, according to this bulletin, consist of from one-half to three-quarters table salt. As they range in price from ten to 20 cents an ounce, purchasers of these cubes are buying salt at a high price.

The department's meat chemist has carefully analyzed semi-solid meat extracts, fluid meat extracts, and commercial meat juice, which are offered on the market to the American public, in addition to the bouillon cubes. He has also conducted experiments in making home-made beef broth, and meat and vegetable soup.

Both the bouillon cubes and the meat extracts are stimulants and flavoring agents, but have only a slight food value and are more expensive than home-made soups. The bulletin recommends a whole-some meat and vegetable soup which will furnish enough for a family of five, at a cost of approximately 16 cents. This may be made according to the following recipe:

Ingredients and approximate cost (prices actually paid by department chemist):

One soup bone, weighing about 24 ounces (one-third meat), 10 cents. After being washed it should be placed in a large kettle with three pints of cold water and heated for three hours. When the bone and meat should be removed.

One-quarter of a small head of cabbage, one onion, one carrot, one large potato, two small tomatoes, a little four seasoning, six cents.

Chop these vegetables and add to the soup. Boil the mixture for one hour, thicken slightly with a little flour and season with salt and pepper.

FIRST IN "WIRELESS" FIELD

James Gowman Lindsay, a Scotman, Known to Have Had the Idea as Far Back as 1853.

In apportioning the honors due to the pioneers of wireless telegraphy, of whom is the late Sir William Preece, a modest worker of 60 years ago deserves a tribute. James Gowman Lindsay, a Forfarshire (Scotland) man, began experimenting with electricity in 1820. In a few years he produced a "constant stream of light," which was the admiration of scientists. He sent messages over wires and delivered many lectures on an electric telegraph. Then, in 1853, he invented a system of wireless telegraphy and submitted it to a public test, regarding which a Dundee paper of April 12, 1853, said: "The experiment removes all doubt of the practicability of Mr. Lindsay's invention; and there is every reason to think that it will soon connect continent with continent and island with island, in one unbroken line of communication."

Lindsay's lectures were advertised under the title of "Telegraphing Without Wires," so that the familiar "wireless" itself was anticipated. But he was more than a scientific experimentalist. He projected a dictionary in 50 languages and labored on it for a quarter of a century. It was too huge a task, and the "Pentecostaglossal Dictionary" exists in an unfinished state only in manuscript. He also compiled with more success a set of astronomical tables for the use of chronologists. Yet this astonishing man never enjoyed more than an income of $250 a year as a teacher until the eve of his death, when the prime minister granted him a pension of $600 "in recognition of his great learning and extraordinary attainments."

DAY OF EXCLUSIVENESS GONE

Modern Society Today More of a Mixture Than at Any Previous Time in History.

Nice is called "the pearl of the Riviera," and a Chicagoan, seated under an orange tree, said in Nice the other day:

"We now have tango teas at the new Hotel Ruhl and the new Hotel Negresco. At these teas princesses and actresses rub elbows, and grand dukes smile amiably upon millionaire tradesmen's sons. Exclusiveness has disappeared."

"Princesses and grand dukes and all that lot would have demanded private rooms to tango in in the past. But now they have learned better. They have learned that to be exclusive—to think oneself better than others—is stupid and conceited, and robe one of a lot of fun."

"The exclusive restaurants of Nice were London house and the Restaurant Holder. They were essentially private room restaurants, like the Cafe Anglais in Paris. But they have disappeared, and the disappearance of these three famous houses proves that exclusiveness, too—stupid, conceited exclusiveness—has disappeared."

"The world of today agrees with Mr. Howells:

Yes, I suppose it is well to make some sort of exclusiveness. Well, to put up the bars, under what I only be careful, be very careful, test in the confusion. You should shut yourself on the wrong side of the fence."

One Hundred Years Ago. One hundred years ago the Kentucky legislature, in compliance with a request from President Madison, set aside a section of the state penitentiary for the confinement of British prisoners. The war had now continued for months and the problem of caring for the prisoners taken by American arms had become a perplexing one. The vast extent of country covered by the operations of the war and the difficulties then existing in the way of transportation combined to hamper a ready exchange of prisoners by the opposing sides. At the same time the states were beginning to protest vigorously against the expense of keeping the British captives. In an effort to free herself from the burden, Massachusetts went so far as to pass an act forbidding the confinement in her jails of prisoners not committed by her judicial authorities.

Proper Way to Walk.

In walking, your feet should point straight ahead and come down flat, heel first. Writers who advise that the ball of the foot should touch the ground first, in common with the callisthenics instructor at school who likely as not advises the same thing, do not know anything about the practical side of walking. The former doubtless have in mind the ballroom, and the latter the gymnasium. On a long walk you will naturally fall into the proper way of handling your feet. Let your arms swing a stout stick—not a scout staff, which is too long and awkward. Keep this stick moving, in one hand or the other, and it will exercise your arms better than the mere act of swinging them will. Keep the shoulders down, the chest up and the body erect. The right posture of the body is as important a factor while walking as it is in the schoolroom. From "The Boy Scout's Hike Book," by Edward Cay.

Backslider.

As Dr. Jordan, chancellor of Stanford university, has been telling the British to their faces that our university education is much better than theirs, it appears that he has quit the peace propaganda.—New York World.

Coal costs money. You know it. The winter's coal costs BIG money. You know that also. Yet, half of it is wasted by poor management. Oh, yes it is! Listen and be convinced.

Ordinary soft coal is half gas. An average ton of $3.00 coal contains about 14,000 cubic feet of gas—common illuminating gas. A gas which will, if properly mixed with air, burn with an intensely hot blue flame. This gas represents the best half of your ton of coal.

This unburned gas and a large portion of the heat is CARRIED UP THE CHIMNEY by the air leaking cracks in stoves of ORDINARY construction.

There is only one way to save this wasted gas and heat and that is with a

which is so constructed that it has no air leaking cracks. In this wonderful heater and fuel-saver the gas is kept under perfect control until oxidized and burned.

It is the only stove that is made tight—holds tight—stays tight.

It is the only stove that saves the wasted chimney heat.

It's the only stove that gives you a constant, steady heat with soft coal, hard coal or lignite.

It will give you all the heat that is in your coal.

It will hold your fire 36 hours without attention.

It will burn all kinds of fuel.

It is guaranteed to consume one-third less fuel than any lower draft stove of the same size, using soft coal, lignite or slack.

AND—It is sold you under a guarantee to fill all these claims.

Back of this guarantee is the credit and capital of an immense factory and it is worth to you 100 cents on the dollar.

COME IN AND SEE IT. IT MEANS DOLLARS IN YOUR POCKET AND A PLEASED CUSTOMER FOR US.

DAIRY FACTS

FOR IMPROVING OUR CATTLE

Producers of Registered Stock Do Not Receive Support and Encouragement They Should.

This article is not addressed to those engaged in pure-bred live stock breeding, but is intended for the great majority in possession of the cross-bred grade and scrubs. The fact that a man owns and is using, pedigreed animals is sufficient evidence that he is interested in live stock improvement and is familiar with and practicing good methods of breeding. Our producers of registered stock do not receive the support and encouragement they should, for after expending large sums of money to secure good foundation stock and years of effort in establishing good herds, their offerings of surplus stock, especially males, do not find a ready sale at sufficiently remunerative prices. The average producer of meat and milk seems determined not to pay more than about meat prices for registered bulls to infuse improved blood in his herd, but the breeder cannot afford to produce them at such prices. Failing to secure improved males at these low prices, many producers fall back on the grade, or even the scrub, and frequently combine with this in-and-in breeding, especially where the males are chosen from within the herd.

Because the producers of live stock other than pure-breds, comprise such an overwhelming majority of stock owners, and because they produce the great bulk of the animal products marketed, their influence in determining the character and reputation of meats and milk is very far reaching. It is in the hands of this class that the scrub and animal of badly mixed breeding are to be found.

It should be the ambition of every man owning live stock to eventually get into some line of pure-bred live stock breeding. The plan we have to suggest for the improvement of the common stocks of the country, is that known as up-grading, which consists in ingrafting the characteristics of a superior breed upon animals of common or mixed breeding, for the purpose of improving them. This improvement is due to the superior quality of the males used, and their power of transmitting accurately these qualities to their offspring. This plan differs from cross breeding, in that pure blood is used on the sire's side, and females of mixed blood on the dam's side. Thus we have the prepotency concentrated in the bull, and the very opposite in the females, as the more mixed the breeding the less stable are the inherent characteristics of the individual—and, therefore, the less resistant to improvement.

"Shorthand by Machine"

See Students Writing It At The Covington Business College Coppin Building

We are teaching "The Machine Way in Shorthand" to an intensely interested class. And we want you to see these students write on this machine. "The Machine Way in Shorthand" is called Stenotype, and is written on a machine called the Stenotype. The Stenotype is one of the Four Great Machines that are saving the most time today in business.

You have seen its method advertised in the great national magazines. Now come and see, in an actual demonstration, what "Machine Shorthand" is and what it is doing. See what it enables the average young man and woman to do in stenography today.

Writes Plain English Spelling

Here is a system that enables you to write "shorthand" with great speed, accuracy and ease.

For Stenotype is simply plain English spelling with the silent letters dropped. The Stenotype writes it in plain alphabet type—the kind you learned when you first went to school.

Not one of the usual shorthand characters is used.

So there is only a little to learn about Stenotype that you don't already know. Learning to write it is mostly a case of learning to write on this simple machine, which embodies only 22 plainly stamped keys.

Come see the Stenotype before you enroll anywhere else. We teach both the "Machine Way" and the "Hand Way" in Shorthand. Come decide which you want to take.

Better Salaries

There are today in business thousands of successful Stenotypists. They are accurate writers and unusually fast, for this machine permits accuracy and speed with ease. And their services, therefore, command higher salaries than are usually paid for stenographic work.

Students of Stenotype upon graduation are getting a premium price for their services. Because they enter business with a degree of efficiency that is not attained by the ordinary beginner.

Millions of Business Men Now Know

The Stenotype and Stenotypy are now being advertised to millions of business men every month.

Soon every business man who hires stenographers will know what Stenotypists can do.

He will know of these legible Stenotype notes which can be transcribed by

315 Colleges Are Teaching Stenotypy

Stenotypy is being taught today in 315 business colleges in every important city in the United States.

Thousands of students, having investigated it, are now learning to take dictation this way.

We are teaching Stenotype because its principle is fundamentally sound and right—because W. S. Ireland, the inventor, an expert Court Reporter, spent nine years in perfecting it before he announced it—and because the Stenotype and Stenotypists have gained a permanent place in business.

Come See It Today

Call at our offices today and we will demonstrate Stenotypy and the Stenotype.

We will show you why so many students are studying this system. We will show you how you can write on this machine.

You are not obligated in asking a demonstration.

Bring your mother or father with you if you wish.

You will see in this system of taking dictation some great possibilities for a good start in business and future rapid advancement.

So come see the Stenotype. Learn for yourself why it means higher efficiency and better salaries.

Not So Fast.

The outline of a bill affecting automobiles to be introduced at Frankfort contains some improvements upon the present law and one very bad feature.

To eliminate the provision of the present law under which the violation of the speed limit is not punishable unless it exceeds the legal rate for more than an eighth of a mile continuously would be to improve the law materially.

A short start may cost a life or damage property, and it is obviously impossible for a policeman who is not mounted upon a motorcycle to determine whether an automobile which passes him at high speed reduces its speed an eighth of a mile beyond his point of observation.

To make the owner of an automobile liable for damages, no matter who is operating the machine, and to place upon him the burden of the proof as to an alleged violation of the law would be unjust and unconstitutional. Individuals—even individuals who drive "devil wagons"—and the displeasure of some legislators—have rights which legislators, however righteously wrathful, cannot abridge.

It is not surprising that an automobile, and that a bus, carrying passengers, gets the machine from the garage, attempts to make a "getaway" and kills a pedestrian or damages someone's property. It is obvious that it would be neither just nor possible to electrocute the owner in the event of a murder being proven or to make him the defendant in an action for the recovery of damages where his entire innocence would be unquestioned.

The highest usefulness of Constitutions is that they stand as a bar between the individual and the excited maker of statutes. There has never been a law under which the owner of a horse was liable for damage done by a habit riding his stolen horse or under which the owner of a house could be hanged if someone got into his house with a rifle and ambushed a passerby. And the law presumes the innocence of the accused until his guilt has been proven. That applies to a man who owns an automobile just as it does to a man who owns a mule. It is sometimes vexatious to the prosecution to be handicapped by having to prove its case, but it is more correct that the rights of individuals be guarded the principle must be preserved. And the right of the individual to a square deal is the principle of republicanism government and the basic element of freedom.—C. J.

Five Fundamentals.

Following are five fundamentals of the new currency bill passed by Congress:

1. Issue of currency, guaranteed by the government based upon notes and bills representing commercial transactions and backed by a gold reserve. The new currency is expected to contract and expand to meet the varied demands of trade.

2. Concentration of the bank reserves of the country in regional institutions capitalized by the banks of the country and controlled by directors elected by the banks.

3. Creation of a market for the negotiable commercial paper which forms the bulk of the assets of the banks, where, in time of stress, those assets may be easily and without loss transformed into cash.

4. Establishment of from eight to twelve great regional banks throughout the country which will issue currency, rediscount paper and centralize and mobilize the reserves of the local banks.

5. Creation of a federal reserve board of seven members appointed by the president, with final powers of control and supervision over the entire system.

Farmers' Week at Lexington.

This is a big week at Lexington for the Kentucky farmers. The Kentucky Corn Growers' Association will give its fourth annual Corn Show and the College of Agriculture and included in this will be the exhibits of the finest corn and tobacco that is grown in the state. A liberal premium list is published for both of these crops, and as the show will afford a fair example of the improvements that have been effected in both of these products by the adoption and following of the newest and most progressive ideas on farming, it will be well worth attending, in an educational sense, by every farmer in the State. Especially is this so in the case of those who are interested in the conservation of the soil and the increasing of its fertility.

Good Yield, Good Price.

A. B. Renaker reports five acres of his Grant county farm as producing $271 per acre of tobacco in 1913, an average of 1,745 pounds per acre. The tobacco was sold for 16 cents a pound, bringing an average of 44 cents, Chas. Youell, who lives between Burlington and Constance says he has four acres of land which produced 2000 pounds of tobacco per acre with he has sold at 15 cents a pound, making his average $300 per acre.

Supt. Edgar C. Riley is not at all pleased with the treatment he received at the hands of the fiscal court, last Tuesday. He asked that his salary be increased to $1,500 and the court allowed him $1,200. It is probable that he will appeal to the circuit court.

Anti-Pass Law.

Judging from the responses that Secretary John T. Vance, Jr., of the Anti-Pass League of Kentucky received from members of the legislature prior to his departure for Santo Domingo, where he is now deputy receiver general of customs, there is an earnest desire for compliance with Section 197 of the Kentucky constitution which was adopted in September, 1891, and it is considered likely that one of the first measures enacted next month will be an anti-pass law. The legislature for 22 years have disregarded the constitutional injunction that "it shall be the duty of the general assembly to enact laws to enforce the provisions of this section," which, in effect, is that any state, district, city town or county officer, or member of the general assembly, or judge who shall ride on a pass, "shall forfeit his office."

Fiscal Court.

The fiscal court was in session Tuesday, Judge Cason presiding and all the judges—The peace officers.

Best routine business the following was disposed of:

County Superintendent's Edgar C. Riley's salary for the year was fixed at $700.

Three new road graders were ordered at a cost of $125 each.

The court agreed to give half the amount of money necessary to build the proposed North Bend and Hebron, and Petersburg and Bellevue pikes.

The report of F. H. Rouse, superintendent of the county infirmary shows the average number of inmates in 1913 was 1927, which cost the county $22.35 each.

The county judge's salary was fixed at $750; county attorneys at $600, jailer at $200.

The county board of education estimated the cost of the schools in the county for 1914 will be $16,000, which pays teachers salaries, fuel, repairs and incidentals. The levy for school purposes was fixed at 10 cents on the $100 and $1 poll tax.

The new justices Wilson, Tanner and Bedinger took hold of business like old timers.

Several Cincinnati doctors and surgeons came to Burlington last Wednesday night to attend the meeting of the Boone County Medical Association, which was twenty-four hours in advance of the time set for the meeting, which the night following, the date which had been fixed for it. A liberal reward will be paid for information as to the party who misinformed or caused to be misinformed the city people.

Hebron Building and Loan Association elected officers for the ensuing year as follows:

Frank Hossman, President; Hubert Conner, Secretary; W. W. Goodridge, V-President; W. A. Bullock, Treasurer; Chester Hood, William Warner, Henry Gatz, R. C. McGlasson, Ed. Ernests, Wm. Crigler, Robert Ayler and Mike Dye, Directors.

Just after the Recorder went to press on the first four pages Wednesday morning the felt roller on the press went to pieces and it had to be sent to the city for repairs—hence the delay in the appearance of the paper this week.

Mrs. Aletha Rouse, widow of the late W. L. Rouse, died at her home out on the Bellevue pike yesterday at 10:30 a. m. Her husband died about a year ago.

The Kentucky legislature is now doing business at the old stand. Here's hoping it may be an improvement on the last General Assembly.

Country School a Community Builder.

According to a statement issued by the Bureau of Education, the rural school which fails to root itself to the soil is no longer worth while. The school must be a leader in every day agricultural life or it will be stamped a failure. One of the many schools which is doing a real worth while work in relating the education of the school to the life of the community.
Here may be seen a typical rural school, a country school, a country home, and a country church, each doing its share in helping the people to love the soil and make the most of themselves—Indiana Farmer.

A Golden Wedding.

A fitting climax to the holiday season was the Golden Wedding New Year's day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Perry on the Richwood pike near Devon. Relations, friends and children were with them to congratulate them on their long life, and to wish them health and happiness in the years to come. They received many beautiful and appropriate presents. The house was prettily decorated, and after dinner the company was entertained with the story of the wedding fifty years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Perry were married on the eve of the cold New Year of 1864, which is mentioned in "Stringtown on the Pike." The following day they started to the infirmary on horseback. The thermometer had fallen to 90 degrees in twelve hours, and they found it so cold they raced their horses over the snow and ice till they found a house where they stopped to warm. There they found a number of friends waiting for them, and they chose to walk the rest of the way, as they could not keep warm riding. Arriving at the Perry residence they found a large crowd and a fine dinner awaiting them. There was a large, old fashioned fireplace, filled with a warm fire, in the dining room. The table which reached across the room was placed so near the fire that those sitting next to the fire could scarcely stand the heat, while those on the other side of the table were so cold that some of them left their places and went to the fire to warm before they were through eating.
When the time came for the guests to leave for their homes, all felt the day had been too short and with the wishes that this grand couple may celebrate their diamond wedding. C. P.

GOOD QUALITIES OF WHITE CHINA GEESSE

White Chinese Geese.

Many people believe that white China geese are going to have a boom like the Pekin ducks had some 20 years ago.

Their feathers are very abundant, of swan's down texture, snow-white, with flexible quills.

People who pick the live geese report the yearly yield of one pound and over.

They originated in China, where for centuries they have been bred to lay. They begin to lay at six months old. They are good breeders at one year old, as they mature so early.

RAISE WHEAT ON CORN LAND

Investigation Shows That Crop Was Much Larger Than on Any Other Soil in Northwest.

A singular fact came to the attention of farmers of the north central states during harvest time. When ever wheat had been sown on corn land the crop was much larger than on any other soil. Investigation has shown this to be the case on so many farms that it is believed to be the universal rule.

It is, perhaps, fair to assume that in any scheme of crop rotation the intelligent farmer looks to the advantage of thorough cultivation before anything else. Certainly he may with propriety be so advised. But the next wise step would be to let wheat follow corn.

When land plainly shows the need of a rest a couple of crops of clover, millet or Canada peas serve the purpose. The farmer who is fitting cattle or hogs for market needs corn and other fodder and he will find profit in this sort of diversification, perhaps far beyond what he can gain from raising wheat. The whole argument is in favor of an intelligent diversity of crops as well as a thorough cultivation of the soil.

WATERING CAN FOR POULTRY

Useful Drinking Fountain for Chicks May Be Made Out of an Ordinary Baking Powder Can.

An ordinary baking powder can may be converted into a useful drinking fountain for the chicks by a slight indentation, as shown in the sketch. When the rim has been pressed in about two inches, water may be poured into the can and the top fitted tightly on. The can should be inverted and placed outside of the coop, where only the chicks can reach it, as the hen is liable to turn it over unless it is larger than the ordinary can. It could probably be placed near enough to the hen so that she could just reach it to drink out of it.

Apples Nipped by Frost.

Apples nipped on the trees by early frosts may be saved by spraying with cold water to draw out the frost. This is the conclusion of Dr. S. J. Hunter, professor of entomology of the University of Kansas and state entomologist for that state, who conducted several experiments this fall in the experimental orchards of the university. If the water is applied before the apples begin to thaw, he says, the bloom of the apple is brought back and it is left in perfect condition.

Feed for Colts.

After the colt has been weaned he should be supplied with all the good clover hay he will eat, being allowed to feed off the ground. A liberal supply of chopped oats should form a part of the ration, and it may be made more palatable and digestible by pouring boiling water over them and allowing them to stand in a closed vessel a few hours before feeding.

WHY WE GROW SWEET CLOVER

Produces More Hay Than Other Crops and Adds Nitrogen to Soil—Also Drought Resistant.

1. It will produce more hay on a given soil than red clover, alsike or mammoth clover.
2. It will grow on many soils too poor to raise alfalfa or red clover successfully.
3. It is the only clover except white clover that will stand pasturing with cattle and horses.
4. It will add more nitrogen to the soil than any other legume.
5. It will thrive with less lime, says the Oklahoma Farmer, in the soil than most other legumes although it will not grow when the soil is too acid.
6. It will not blast stock whether fed wet or dry.
7. It has no plant disease; and it will thrive and combat weeds and grasses at the same time.
8. In pastures during a drought, sweet clover will keep green and grow, when other clovers and grasses have practically dried up.
9. Crops following a two-year rotation, with sweet clover will gain in yield from 25 to 50 per cent.

Dairying is Different. Dairying is different from what it used to be 20 years ago. Today we sell the butter fat and keep the skim milk on the farm and we get a milk check which is real cash every week or every month. In the earlier days we used to skim the milk, churn the butter, take it to town and bring home something the merchant would let us have in exchange.

Expensive Habit. It is expensive to let a cow fall in her milk because of the lack of proper feed.

DAIRY FACTS

IMPROVED BREEDING SYSTEM

Fall and Winter Calves Develop Into Much More Desirable Cows Than Those Born in Summer.

(By M. CLINTON.)

If one will plan to have the calves come at all seasons, the fall and winter calves escape the torture of the extreme summer heat and the swarming, pestering flies.

For this reason the fall and winter calves develop into much more desirable cows for the dairy than the summer calves.

Where all the calves are dropped in the spring it is a big job to care for and handle all of them while they are young.

If a short space of time intervenes between the coming of each calf there will be little time lost in attending to each one during its early career—when it is the most trouble and more susceptible to some derangement if slighted.

Then, having some heavy milkers at all times is a profitable plan. This all-the-year-around-dairying is what brings in the steady income, which will be especially welcome in the dead of winter when the price of dairy products soar skyward.

It will also prove a great convenience in supplying for the kitchen and table those most necessary articles so often missing in winter: Milk, cream and butter.

Another big advantage to be derived from having the cows freshen at different seasons of the year is that of avoiding the handling of calves and almost all the dairy products at a time when the farmer ought to be in the fields planting or cultivating his crops.

Although winter has its drawbacks as a dairy season, so has summer, and certain it is that the farmer has so little else to claim his attention in the winter that he can well afford to manage so that part of the herd will be yielding their most satisfactory amount of dairy products at this time, thus furnishing him with profitable employment at an usually idle season.

FEED ATTACHMENT FOR SILO

Ensilage May Be Taken From Huge Receptacle Without Necessitating Climbing to Entrance.

The Scientific American, in illustrating and describing a feed delivery attachment for silos, invented by S. M. Scott of Edna, Tex., says:

The present invention relates to silos, particularly to an attachment whereby the ensilage may be delivered therefrom as it is desired for use without necessitating the climbing of the silo and entrance therinto for this purpose.

EFFECTS OF SILAGE ON MILK

Flavor or Odor Is Not Inferior to That From Cows Given Dry Feed—Feed After Milking.

Contrary to the opinion formerly held, the milk from silage-fed cows is not inferior in flavor or odor to the milk from cows fed dry feed. The condensed milk companies which formerly did not favor milk from silage-fed cows, are now advising their patrons to put up silos.

Great care should be taken, however, to prevent the odor of silage from contaminating the freshly drawn milk, which takes up odors very quickly. It is best to feed the silage after milking and just what will be eaten up clean at that feed. The silos should be shut off from the barn proper. The idea still held by some, that corn silage will destroy the teeth and digestive tract of the cow and induce such diseases as tuberculosis, is erroneous.

Degrees of Lumpy Jaw.

There is an unnecessary prejudice against lumpy jaw cattle, according to Dr. M. H. Reynolds of the Minnesota station. Considerable percentage of these cases are passed by government inspectors, as fit for food purposes. Only the very bad cases, especially those where the disease affects several organs or parts of the body are condemned.

Do Your Dollars Fly up the Flue?

Coal costs money. You know it. The winter's coal costs BIG money. You know that also. Yet, half of it is wasted by poor management. Oh, yes it is! Listen and be convinced.

Ordinary soft coal is half gas. An average ton of $3.00 coal contains about 14,000 cubic feet of gas—common illuminating gas. A gas which will, if properly mixed with air, burn with an intensely hot blue flame. This gas represents the best half of your ton of coal.

This unburned gas and a large portion of the heat is CARRIED UP THE CHIMNEY by the air leaking cracks in stoves of ORDINARY construction.

There is only one way to save this wasted gas and heat and that is with a

which is so constructed that it has no air leaking cracks. In this wonderful heater and fuel-saver the gas is kept under perfect control until oxidized and burned.

It is the only stove that is made tight—holds tight—stays tight.

It is the only stove that saves the wasted chimney heat.

It's the only stove that gives you a constant, steady heat with soft coal, hard coal or lignite.

It will give you all the heat that is in your coal.

It will hold your fire 36 hours without attention.

It will burn all kinds of fuel.

It is guaranteed to consume one-third less fuel than any lower draft stove of the same size, using soft coal, lignite or slack.

AND—It is sold you under a guarantee to fill all these claims.

Back of this guarantee is the credit and capital of an immense factory and it is worth to you 100 cents on the dollar.

MAKE-UP OF CERTIFIED MILK

Commissioners Require Producer to Agree to Build Proper Barns and Keep Only Healthy Cows.

Certified milk as a grade of milk is twenty years old, having been launched in Newark, N. J., in 1892. Soon thereafter milkmen began to cheat by claiming that their ordinary market milk was certified. Says Doctor Court:

"It was found that local milkmen were surreptitiously placing it (the word certified) on their milk wagons. It became necessary to seek some protection."

The first certifying commission was organized in 1933 and June 14, 1933, the first milk bearing the official stamp "certified" was sold.

Certified milk is milk produced under circumstances certified to by some milk commission. The production of milk from cow to consumer needs to be watched, everybody recognizes. The most natural watcher for baby milk is the mother of the baby—besides the cows may be miles away. Not being argus-eyed, she must have help.

Milk commissions are for the purpose of helping her watch. These commissions license men to produce certified milk. They will not license a producer until he signs a contract. In that contract he agrees to build proper barns, keep none but healthy cows, to employ none but healthy milkers, to use none but the cleanest methods, to sell no milk except if it be clean, cold, and fresh.

The supervision is of the product as well as the method of production. Certified milk must contain twelve parts solids, 3.5 to 5.5 parts butter fat, must be free from viable dirt, must contain less than 10,000 bacteria, must be less than twenty-four hours old, a little under 60 degrees Fahrenheit, and free from tuberculosis, typhoid, diphtheria and all other forms of infection.

The seat board is sawed out to fit the circumference of the bucket to be used, and the iron is also bent to this curve and fastened to the board as shown. The little shelf on the front support holds the bucket at the right height, and keeps it clean and out of the way of the cow's foot while milking.

SUCCULENT FOOD FOR COWS

New-Grown Grass Is Better for Milk Production Than Dry Feeds Given During Winter Season.

(By T. L. HARKNER.)

We know that cows usually give the largest amount of milk when they are on good pasture. Their chief feed is, then, new-grown grass. This would indicate that such feed is better for milk production than are the dry feeds fed in winter. Green feed is more easily digested than is dry, coarse fodder, such as hay, fodder corn, and corn stover. Moreover, less energy is required to digest it, it tends to keep the body and digestive system in better condition, and it stimulates the appetite. In the winter, when vegetables are scarce and we eat potatoes, bread and meat for a long time, we become tired of them, and crave something succulent, like fruit or green vegetables. In well-regulated homes, such food is supplied by canned or fresh vegetables and fruits.

The larval of apple in the cellar is not especially valuable from the standpoint of the amount of nourishment contained. The great value of the apples is due to the fact that they aid in toning up the whole system and satisfy the craving for something succulent. In like manner it pays to supply the live stock on the farm with something to take the place of the green ration they get in summer. The whole ration need not be of a succulent material but that a portion of it should be such is quite essential to best results. Just as an apple or two each day is good for a boy or girl, so are a few pounds each day of succulent feed, such as roots or silage, good for farm animals.

ABORTION IS CONTAGIOUS

Causes Greater Loss To Dairy-men Than Any Other Disease Except Tuberculosis

MOSTLY REGISTERED STOCK

In Kentucky, and Calves From These Animals Are Valued at $50 or More—Infected Cows Deprived of Their Usefulness.

(By L. S. Corbett, Department of Animal Husbandry Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station.)

Probably infectious or contagious abortion causes greater loss to our dairymen and cattle breeders than any other one disease, except tuberculosis. It is practically impossible to estimate the amount of money lost annually through abortion, as there are no statistics available with respect to the number of calves lost because of this disease. A large portion of the cows in Kentucky is of registered stock, the calves from these animals are valued at fifty dollars or more, the loss of the calf alone is serious. The loss of the calf from a grade cow is but a small part of the total loss, for in the majority of cases the fetus is aborted so early in pregnancy that the cow does not freshen and, therefore, produces little or no milk. A cow may slip two or three calves in succession, and if such is the case, she is deprived of her usefulness for a large part of the best portion of her life. Often, infectious abortion results in temporary sterility, and only after many months and repeated attempts will the animal be safely gotten in calf.

Fetus of a cow showing the site of infection.

All abortions are not caused by an infectious cause. The swelling of an animal, a heavy fall, a severe hook or kick; in short, an injury of any kind, poor condition of the breeding animal, exposure to severe weather, undue excitement and other causes may result in the ejection of the calf. Such abortions are mainly accidents, and the remedy lies in better methods of management.

The disease is most prevalent where stock farming is highly specialized. This is as true of the dairies of Europe as of those of this country. An old writer notes that in 1567, as many as 60 or 70 per cent of the cows in certain localities of England were aborting. Much speculation as to its cause has been made by breeders, some of the theories being: The eating of ergot, and that the odor connected with an abortion has the action of causing pregnant animals to slip fetuses.

Since the beginning of the nineteenth century, it has been believed that much of the abortion among domestic animals was caused by an infectious disease. It was not until 1896, however, that the organism which causes abortion among cattle was discovered.

It is generally believed among breeders that the disease is transmitted from one animal to another only by the bull. It is true that the bull plays an important part in the transmission of the disease, but, nevertheless, it is disseminated in several other ways. It is very easy to cause abortion experimentally in the cow by feeding infectious material. The bedding and walls of stables where animals abort are certain to become contaminated. The grass in the pastures may become contaminated and thus contain the living organisms that cause this disease. In numerous ways it is possible for cows to take the abortion bacilli into the mouth. The infection may also be introduced into the genitalia from soiled bedding or from the contaminated stalls.

There is at present no known specific remedy for infectious abortion in cattle. There are a number of so-called "cures" upon the market. The majority of these have as their basis a carbolic acid solution. Carbolic acid has often been proposed as a remedy for this disease, and many breeders have used it with apparently excellent success, others have used it without results.

Infectious abortion in cows is taken up in detail in Bulletins Nos. 165 and 166 of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, and these bulletins will be sent free to any person applying for them.

William Carpenter and Hubert White were in Burlington, Monday, soliciting subscriptions of money with which to build a pike from Mr. Carpenter's gate to Burlington. They had about $3,500 on their paper and felt sanguine of raising enough money for the work, if the county would give half the cost of the road. The distance is about 4 1/2 miles.

The residence occupied by Jumbo Webb, colored, out on the Burlington and Union road, came very near being destroyed by fire last Sunday. His wife was at home alone with the children when she discovered the fire. She ran to a neighbor's, where the telephone was brought into use and a crowd was soon on the scene and the fire was put out. Loss small.

Card of Thanks—We take this means of extending our heartfelt thanks to our neighbors for the many kindnesses shown us during the last illness of our mother, to Rev. H. C. Wayman for his services at the grave, and to undertaker John Allison for his efficient manner in which he conducted the funeral.

Hubert Rouse, Carl Rouse.

Those who are working for a pike from Petersburg to Bellevue returned home from the fiscal court last week very well pleased with the court's position in regard to the road and will put more energy in their effort to secure by subscription one-half the amount of money necessary to build the road. It is a road on which there would be little heavy grading and the cost of construction ought to be very reasonable.

W. P. BEEMON, BOONE'S NEW ASSESSOR.

Who Is to Blame?

Bert Smith, carrier on R. D. 2 out of Burlington is having his troubles again, this time on account of a portion of the public road on Riddell's Run being impassable. In which condition it has been for some time. This part of the road passes over the land of H. O. Adams, and for some time Mr. Adams has been allowing the mail carrier and other travel to go over another route on his land, which has a rise rumor is groundless the boot-then considerable inconvenience to him.

At the session of the fiscal court held on the 10th inst., Mr. Adams appeared before that body in regard to the condition of that part of the road above referred to, and in a fervent speech, offered to give the right of way and build a good road to take the place of that part of the public road now out of commission, declaring the work should not cost the county a cent, if, after the committee appointed by the court to examine the work, it was not satisfactory to that body. To this proposition the court made no response whatever, and this treatment was so offensive to Mr. Adams that he has shut out all travel over his land, declaring it must be confined to the public road. Mr. Adams had told the rural carrier that he would allow him to pass through his farm until the 15th of this month, but since the court ignored his proposition he has decided to stop the rural carrier also, and to make his rounds Mr. Smith has to go about three miles out of his way over some very bad road. Mr. Adams, smarting under the contempt with which the fiscal court treated his proposition to repair the road, has resolved to exercise his right to the absolute control of his premises and prohibit any further travel over them.

Joseph W. Laile Passes Away.

Joseph W. Laile, in his 51st year, died at his home on the Price pike near Florence, last Thursday. Mr. Laile had been in bad health for several months, one ailment after another setting in. Mr. Laile was a native of Harrison county and came to Boone many years ago. During the old Florence fair he was a prominent exhibitor of saddle and harness horses and at every fair he pulled down hundreds of dollars in premiums.

Joseph Laile was born in Harrison county November 10th, 1857, died January 7, 1914. He was very industrious, kind hearted, a good husband, and an indulgent father. He left two children and six grandchildren, and three brothers, one in California, the other two near Cynthia, Harrison county.

Card of Thanks—We extend our heartfelt thanks to our neighbors for their kind attention during Mr. Laile's illness, to Mr. Allison for his efficient services, and to Rev. Riley for his consoling words.

R. L. White, former Assistant Deputy Warden of the Kentucky State Reformatory at Frankfort, has issued a fifty-three page pamphlet entitled "The Kentucky State Reformatory As It Is." The pamphlet is a scathing indictment of the management and graft exposed. Taxpayers Money Being Squandered. Some Work for the next Legislature. The legislature might strike pay dirt by giving Mr. White's charges some attention. They are serious, and if true it will require a vast amount of whitewash to conceal them.

Some Raised, Some Lowered.

The county board of equalization completed its tentative work last Saturday about noon and adjourned until the 10th inst., when it will meet again to hear from those whose lists were increased, and in the mean time the sheriff will notify those whose lists were given a boost. The board decreased some lists and placed on the assessor's book a few lists that were omitted. The Distillery Co., which is closing out its business at Petersburg was given a considerable increase in the valuation of its property—$13,000 being a large block of the total increase in the county.

The board of equalization as now constituted has been supervising the assessor's book for many years and it finds about the same amount of alterations to make each year, the changing of conditions in some localities resulting in a change of the value of property although it may not be apparent to the property owners in that locality. The board aims to deal fairly with all the taxpayers in the county and to have each to bear his or her just proportion of the burden. Below are the figures showing the result of the boards work by precincts:

	Decrease	Decrease
Florence	$ 9,760	$ 540
Constance	3,000	250
Carlton	5,525	200
Walton	11,590	800
Union	3,345	940
Verona	3,020	400
Petersburg	13,000	400
Hewitt	1,420	400
Bellevue	9,400	2,000
Burlington	1,150	570
Beaver		570
Bullittsville		570

Total.....$ 69,720 $7,080

Net increase $62,140.

Of the increase in Florence precinct, $5,000 is the value of the Lexington turnpike which was omitted by the assessor.

Will He Be A Come-Back?

Althea Rouse's Funeral.

The remains of Mrs. Althea Rouse were interred in the family lot in the Odd-Fellows' cemetery east of town, last Friday at eleven o'clock, following a brief service at the grave by Rev. H. C. Wayman, Baptist minister, of Walton. Quite a concourse of relatives and friends were assembled at the grave. The deceased was a member of Burlington Baptist church for many years, was a daughter of the late Charles Hagish, and the last of his several children. She is survived by two sons, Hubert and Karl, who have the sympathy of all in their bereavement. The funeral was in charge of John Allison, of Covington.

FORTY YEARS AGO.

From 1913 to 1914 the years have gone along with regularity and perfect system. There have been no intermissions, no recesses, no idle stretches or long jumps;—about it. All the natural forces, such as gravitation, growth, revolution, evolution, descending, ascending, circling and going straight up, have been doing business right to the line and letting the chips fall exactly in their proper place. As the years have come and gone, the citizenship of Union has kept step with the years, some have gravitated to larger fields of experience, some have grown to greater wealth, some have created revolutions in their own minds and the minds of others, some have ascended the ladder of fame and are today going on to more fame; some have circled out and around to finally come back, which is a habit most all folks have that ever circle very far from Union. Like the fabled eagle, they will come back. In the year 1873 Union could boast of many men and women who had high ideals and bowed to the line regardless of where the chips fell, so in 1914 it is safe to say there are "others" acting and idealizing right along the same line. 1873 found young men and young women in Union that could figure and figure correctly and rapidly, too. 1914 finds them equally as rapid and correct. So let them take the figures, making the two dates and see what vast fields they have for arithmetic adventure. Taking 1873 added we have in 1914, 41 years from 1873 and we have 13, making 1913, the year just ended. Take the total figures from 1873 to 1914 and we have a sum large enough to represent dollars to give every ex-Confederate soldier living in Kentucky a pension large enough to keep him comfortable and independent for years to come. Combining the figures 1873 and 911 just right we have the years that eight of the world's great battles were fought, also the assassinations of Lincoln, one queen; another addition and multiplication, the Kohler method, calls for the two, finds the year and the number of lives lost in the world's most disastrous earthquake. Ycs., just figure!

The infinitely wise creation of the world decreed that it should go forward as time goes, hence the thought that "where can I get my eyes tested correctly and get the best glasses?" and the title that carries men on and on is as liable to leave them stranded in Rising Sun or Home City as it is to land them safely in Burlington. Its time!

Time is an institution that works many changes in a man's life. The writer happened to be looking over page 303 in John Kohler's diary when a wireless came, so he will tell what 303 has to say. John writes of the brave friend who saved his life in Independence that day when the giant coal burner was preparing to take it. John came to the home of this man when looking for work in the coal fields in Kenton county the man employed him as has been told before the conditions were not attractive to John except for their nobility. John had grown to respect for his employer for the man not only demanded and expected respect from all under his command, it was "Mr. Tom" as he was addressed by the toughest or tenderest employee that happened along, was master of the situation if ever any man was. "Mr. Tom," with all his fierceness and warlike stunts, was in reality, good natured. He realized what a bad temper does for a man and labored to control his temper. He had the blackest work to do and had about the blackest completed set of folks to help him do it, and yet he controlled the business on "white-lines all the same."

Like most high tempered men he had the gentlest, kindly natured and gracious woman for his wife, "Mrs. Tom" took an interest in John the same as "Mr. Tom" did and saw to it that he had plenty to eat, a good place to sleep, and other comforts.

John declares that so long as men are loved for what they really are and not for what the world hears they are, so long as good men are loved and good men retain their intrinsic worth under any and all conditions, he will reverse the memory of these most excellent people.

The giant coal burner who injected his personality so suddenly upon the quiet and peace of John's early life, is spoken of later.

On page 38 John claims he had never smiled or wanted to take a "smile" for years until he met this G. C. B. without "war harness" and in plain home spun garb. John was lead to accept an apology and enter into a state of armed neutrality with the man, but never slept in the man's presence, except with one eye open. The idea John held to was like this: The man was a "good man gone wrong," but had gone so far wrong he never could get right again.

The experience John had with this man seems to have fastened itself with such force and effect upon his mind that forgiveness may have been possible but it forgot—oh no! Later on this great bulk of physical power and mental frailty hunted for trouble one time too often, and passed over the great divide without having time to pull his boots off. Later on the clean cut, well fashioned, giant like form of John's friend lay cold in death as the result of losing his temper. John's tears stain the page that records this fact and so long as memory shall perform its functions and the human heart is

They Want Turnpikes.

The Bullittsville voting precinct cast a small majority against the good road proposition submitted to the county at the last November election, yet that part of the county was about the first to come to the front with a proposition to improve its most important highway. Those who will be most benefited by the proposed pike have subscribed an amount equal to half the estimated cost of the proposed road, and the fiscal court is encouraging the proposition by agreeing to give as much towards the road as those interested subscribe, that is if the road costs $9,000 the county will give $1,500, if those interested will give the other $1,500. If the example set by the people interested in the improvement of the road, followed throughout the county, many miles of pike could be constructed at low rates of taxation.

A Crackerjack Crop.

A. C. Skirvin delivered a crop grown on his farm near Heekin to the Williamstown Loose Leaf Market last Friday. The crop was grown on 24 acres of land and weighed out 1875 lbs., or 2166 lbs. to the acre. He received an average price of 15¢ cents per lb. for the crop, or $755.62. This is an average price per acre of $335.39. This tobacco was grown on hillside land and in a part of the county where the average price of land is less than $40.00 per acre.—Grant County News.

If the graders in which the fiscal court has decided to invest are placed in the hands of persons with skill enough to handle them properly a great deal of work can be done on the road this year at a reasonable cost, but if persons who do not know how to handle them and will not take pains to learn, get control of them they will soon be consigned to the junk heap. There are many miles of road in this county on which they can not be used but that does not prove that they are worthless as some claim.

The Common school graduates examination will be held the 4th Friday and Saturday in this month in Burlington.

THE EXPERIMENT STATION BARN FOR FEEDING NEARS COMPLETION

Detailed Description of Model Barn For Feeding of Steers in Car-Load Lots—Contains Storage Room, Concrete Silo and Other Modern Equipment

New beef cattle feeding plant, Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station.

The new barn at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, for the feeding of steers in carload lots, is rapidly nearing completion. This building is 36 feet wide and 150 feet long. It contains a storage room for the holding of cotton seed meal, and for the grinding and weighing of feed, takes up 20 running feet at the east end of this building. A concrete silo, 14 by 36 feet, is situated just outside of the east end of the barn and is connected to same by a chute to allow the silage as it is pitched from the silo to fall to the floor of the barn.

The remainder of the barn, 160 running feet, is used for the housing and feeding of the steers and as storage room for roughage and corn. An open shed, 16 feet wide, with loft above, forms one side of the building and contains a mouse and rat-proof corn crib, 9 feet wide, forms the other side of the structure. These two divisions are connected with a 10-foot alley, which runs the entire length of the building. The shed part of the barn, which serves as a shelter for the steers, faces the south, and is left open for the reason that it has been determined that steers make better gains in an open shed than in a closed one. The shed space of the barn is divided into four equal parts, adjoining which are four concrete lots, 40 by 48 feet, without cover. This division of the sheds and lots will allow the feeding of four separate carload lots of steers on different rations, the relative value of which feeds for the production of economical gains in weight on cattle can easily be determined and the results published. There is ample room in this barn for the storage of a large amount of roughage, as well as a large amount of corn and other concentrates. The building is so arranged that the man feeding the cattle will never have to go out of doors for any of the feeding operations connected with the experiments conducted. Water will be supplied from the city water works. Large stock scales have been installed at the east end of the barn. These scales are provided with a combination stock and wagon rack, which allows the weighing of either cattle or loads of hay and grain without removing the rack from the scales.

The building will accommodate the feeding of 80 two-year-old or 100 yearling steers. E. S. GOOD, Animal Husbandman, Kentucky Experiment Station.

WASTE LANDS BECOME PRODUCTIVE AFTER DRAINAGE IMPROVEMENT

Some of the Benefits Which Come From Drainage Are Prevention of Erosion—Soils Can Be Worked Earlier—Improves Plant Growth—Avoids Loss of Nitrogen

The waste lands of Kentucky which become more productive after improvement are those which are unproductive from lack of proper drainage. We have many areas, including river and creek bottom land, drainage valleys and basins, seepage areas, and areas with impervious subsoils where drainage would greatly increase production. Some of the benefits which come from drainage are:

(1) Prevention of erosion. The particles of earth in a water soaked soil are easily separated from each other and are carried away by excess surface drainage. Good drainage, especially in clay soils, brings about a porous condition in the surface soil and the subsoil which permits much of the water from rainfall to percolate through the soil instead of running away upon the surface.

(2) Tilling advantages. Well drained lands can be worked earlier in springtime than wet lands. They can also be cultivated sooner after the summer rains than undrained soil.

(3) It furnishes conditions necessary for best plant growth. Among these are aeration, heat, moisture and bacterial growth. A free circulation of air in soil is necessary for the oxidation of vegetable matter, a process which furnishes plant food for the growing crop. Poorly drained soils are usually sour. Plants do not extend their roots into standing water in the soil.

The evaporation of water from the soil is attended with great loss of heat. As much heat is required to evaporate one pound of water as is necessary to raise 966 pounds of water through one degree of temperature.

The moisture needed for plant growth is capillary water, not water standing in the soil. If a sack of gravel were dipped into water and then removed and permitted to drain, the moisture remaining would represent capillary water, each grain representing a grain of soil.

The bacteria of the soil which fix nitrogen directly from the air, also the nitrogen using bacteria which are found in the nodules of the legume plants such as clover, cowpeas, soy beans, alfalfa, etc., must be provided with a liberal supply of oxygen from the air of the soil in order to grow and multiply, and so perform the function of fixing nitrogen for plant growth.

Pick out the hens that are intended for the regular breeding pens. Be sure that the selection is carefully made.

Stabled dairy cows should have two or three hours during the midday part of the day when they are left entirely undisturbed.

Don't change breeds. Keep the one you have, and try to improve it. Let the other fellow do the experimenting.

(4) Good drainage also avoids the loss of nitrogen from the soil by the action of denitrifying bacteria. It reduces the damage done by freezing and heaving; it increases the amount of available moisture for plant growth; it increases the available plant food in the soil.

Because of the above named benefits the drainage of wet lands practically assures the production of a crop every year. Although it might seem otherwise, a well drained soil will produce a larger yield than a poorly drained one in a dry year as well as in a wet one. Drainage also permits the cultivation of otherwise worthless lands, often making such areas the most productive of the farm. The added yield and saving of labor from the drainage of wet lands should pay for the cost in from two to four years, and it may be said that the farmer who has properly installed tile drains where needed has never been known to regret the expense.

The best kind of drainage on the farm as a rule is that secured by the closed drain. The open ditch is a disagreeable means of carrying water, especially in tilled fields, and in silt or fine clay soil the crumbling and washing of the banks always makes it difficult to keep the ditch well cleaned. Brush and weeds which grow in the open ditch are also a great hindrance to the flow of water and present a bad appearance on any farm. The best form of closed drain is that made from hard-burned tile. The size to be used in any system will vary greatly with conditions, but no tile with an inside diameter of less than 4 inches should ever be used. It should be remembered that the carrying capacity of tile varies as the square of the diameter; for example, an 8-inch tile will carry four times the water of a 4-inch tile. The cost of good-burned tile will vary according to size from $13 to $150 per 1,000 feet. In Kentucky, where the present use of tile would hardly justify the building of plants for the manufacture of tile, brick manufacturing companies should be encouraged to add this branch of manufacture to their industry.

PURITAN AND THE SABBATH

Observance of Day of Rest Undoubtedly Necessary to the Nation's Well Being.

All forward looking minds must feel some apprehension for the mental, moral and especially the physical well being of the American people, as they see how the Sabbath is more and more given over to business and pleasure, declares the Universalist Leader. No nation can be strong unless it has a rest day every week; no man or community can be spiritually strong unless he or it sets aside and uses the Sabbath for worship of the unseen spiritual power that made and upholds the universe and its freight of life. Gladstone attributed much of his vigorous health and his long life to the fact that nothing, not even cabinet making, ever prevented him from attending church. The puritan in America gave the enduring moral fiber to our national life. His sabbatarianism was a portion of this might in him; he revered God, he mastered earth. A revival of puritanic sabbatarianism would greatly benefit this land of ours. Modern civilization would, of course, make the old sabbath much different than it was in the primitive communities of three generations ago, but we are not about many needless things, sports that do not rest, amusements that do not recreate, business that does not yield a permanent profit. Consider the old adage, "The Sabbath is for works of mercy and necessity only." One phase of the puritan life has long appealed to us, the fact that so little cooking was done on Sunday. The Sunday meals were prepared on Saturday. The slave of the cook stove was manumitted on the Sabbath. Could we not imitate that custom and have simpler meals on the Sabbath, thus giving freedom to worship to our modern kitchen handwoman, whether mother or hired servant?

GET SUGAR FROM SAWDUST

Chemically Prepared Material Found by Scientists to Be Valuable Food for Animals.

In the course of a paper read before the London Royal Society of Arts, A. Zimmerman described a process by which sugar might be manufactured from sawdust.

In its natural state, he pointed out, saw London timber, wood contains no sugar, but when subjected in closed retorts to digestion with a weak sulphuric acid solution under pressure of six to seven atmospheres a very remarkable transmutation takes place, as much as 25 per cent. of the material being converted into sugar. In this Mr. Zimmerman claims that we have a valuable feeding stuff for horses, cattle and sheep. Draft horses in whose daily ration four pounds of "cacchulose-molasses" were substituted for four pounds of oats were kept under observation for seven months and were all found to have increased in weight, while a colt which was in so weak a condition that veterinary surgeons advised its destruction put on 280 pounds in six months and is now in excellent condition.

Then He Didn't Want Them. Dejectedly twirling his thumbs the clerk sat in the box office of the Frivolity theater. A depressing air of failure hung over the theater, and it looked as though the piece would have to be withdrawn very shortly. Suddenly he perked up as a countrified man and his wife came in, followed by their three daughters and two sons.

"Have you got seven seats in the middle of the second row for tonight?" asked the party chief.

"The box office man made a pretense of examining the plan of seats."

"Yes, I find they are vacant, sir," said he, trying to repress his excitement. "Shall I book them for you, sir?"

"Er—no, I think not," said the man from the back of the hall. "If you've got those seats on your hands it's better to let the play can't be up to much! Good morning!"

Diagnosis by Electricity. For the benefit of the nervous cases that come to the doctor, it has been asserted by Scripture that it is just as necessary to know how emotional they are as it is to know how high the temperature is in a case of fever. Moreover, in many cases it is necessary to find out what experiences in the past or present life of the patient produce emotions. For this purpose the patient sits at ease with hands on the electrodes, which may be so concealed in the arms or chair that he is unaware that the most intimate processes of his soul are being registered as various words are spoken or various topics of conversation are discussed, the galvanometer showing when a sensitive subject has been touched—Prof. W. Eastman, in Harper's Magazine.

Johnson—Well, what's that to do with his present fix?

OLD DOG REJOINS MASTER

Faithfulness of Dumb Animal Won Appreciation That Took the Form of Practical Assistance.

Although every one pitied him and wanted to be kind to him and there was not a home in the town that would not have been glad to take him in and keep him, there, a shepherd dog, wandered disconsolately about the streets of an Arkansas town. He was pining for the only master he had ever known. For fifteen years he had had all that a dog wants—a good home and somebody to love continually, and now that his old master had gone away to California he was broken-hearted. Perhaps, too, he grieved over his master's fallen fortunes and the fact that he had failed in business and had been compelled to remove to another place. Surely it was a hard fate that parted an ever faithful dog from his life-long friend. But kind eyes and sympathetic hearts noted the old dog as he tramped wearily around the town, seeking the one who was all the world to him and refusing to attach himself to any other.

Touched by the dog's misery, some one proposed that a collection be taken to send Bruce to California to his master. The suggestion met with enthusiastic approval. The hat was passed and it required but a few minutes to secure enough money.

One of the old dog's friends made a crate, furnished it with enough food to last him a week, and Bruce was started on his long journey to rejoin his master.

And now, in the town where Bruce lived so long, they miss the old favorite; but a warm glow comes over the heart when some one remarks about the happiness that must have come to the faithful old fellow when he found his master.

CAN LEARN FROM THE PAST

Poultry Breeders of Today Might Profit by Study of Conditions Used by the Egyptians.

The announcement is made by a British scientist that he has discovered how the ancient Egyptians incubated chickens to the number of 120,000,000 a year. He has found incubators which he declares were used in Egypt 5,000 years ago.

The secret has been well guarded, but it is laid bare at last. They had no oil, gas or electric heated incubators, but they had ovens which worked on a different principle, even though they required constant tending. Each oven was regulated to hold 7,000 eggs, and the fuel by which it was heated consisted of chopped straw and dung, but for the last ten days of the hatching the energy was supplied altogether by the chickens themselves.

It is the commonest error of those operating our modern incubators to use too much heat, especially toward the end of the period, and now we may learn from the old Egyptians how not to do things as well as how to do them. The use of the straw and other light fuel shows that the Egyptians were most careful to avoid too intense heat at any stage. We thought that we were the first to use incubators, but we are fifty centuries behind the times.

How to Keep Eggs Eleven Months.

One of the oldest methods of preserving eggs is to dip them in a bath of silicate of soda, or "liquid glass," but recently the wisdom of this method has been questioned, it being said that the eggs absorb soluble silica in sufficient amount to make them unfit to be eaten.

Dr. Bartlett, an English chemist, has been testing eggs so preserved, and has proved that if the bath contains free soda the eggs absorb it and their whites become like jelly. But when a 10 per cent. solution of silicate of soda is used there is none of this absorption. After being immersed for eleven months the eggs contain no more silica than when fresh. They are in very much better condition than when preserved for the same length of time by freezing, as the pores of their shells are hermetically closed.

Spondylotherapy.

Spondylotherapy is the gospel of seeling red. It has been invented and promulgated by a San Francisco physician, and already numbers its little squad of devotees.

The spondylotherapists declare that red is the greatest human energizer. A man or woman who is an habitual victim of weariness may be stirred to ambition and activity by wearing a red shirt, red stockings or a red necktie. A room papered or painted a reddish shade is the ideal workshop. Redness tends to hasten the maturing of human efficiency. There is no case of laziness so serious that it cannot be cured by persistent spondylotherapy treatment.

At a Caledonian banquet in London a Scotsman who had settled in the metropolis made a speech in which Sootland and his Scotch ties were so fulsomely praised that an Englishman, who sat next him, said when he had finished:

"If Sootland is all that you Scotsmen say it is, why don't you stay there instead of coming here?"

"I've answered the Scotsman. 'Ah'll tell ye hoo it wis wi' me. When Ah wis in business in Ah had a fine fowk wis just as fiver as meel' an' Ah canna get the two en's meet. Sae Ah can't awa' Soot, an' sin' snot, man, Ah've been deatin' rale weel."

ENERGY FROM A SUGAR DIET

Experiments Have Shown That It Has a Wonderful Effect Upon the Human Body.

The physiologist who discovered that your liver and your muscles manufacture sugar while you sleep has been surprised by the German physician who uses sugar dissolved in water as an excellent surgical dressing for all sorts of wounds.

Drs. Jacques Panoset and Piere Mathieu have declared that when animals eat sugar exclusively for long periods their weight at first decreases, soon begins to mend and then fall away again as the diet continues.

Dr. H. Heald of Tacoma Park, D. C., disagrees with the laboratory findings. He says sugar is comparable to gasoline. As the latter is the fuel of the internal combustion engine, so sugar is the fuel of the human machine. Sugar, he says, is the staff of life, and man can produce more energy from sugar than from any other food.

A distinguished British physician has lately proved the efficacy of lump sugar in the treatment of a man nearly eighty years old who was dying with a vicious disease of the heart. After all the usual remedial measures had failed one of the maids asked if there was any objection to feeding the sufferer lump sugar. The physician gave his consent and four lumps were given in a little water. These were repeated every four hours, and in a week he was a well man.

Dr. Berszler recommends to one of the German medical societies the use of powdered sugar in the treatment of old, ill treated and neglected cancers. He treats the application of sugar to the fetid parts lessens the disagreeable odor and discharges. Furthermore, the general condition of the patient improves and all hemorrhages cease. Indeed, unless you have had a long experience with cancer patients, you are liable to be deluded into the belief that the cancer has healed.

BRIGHTEN THAT NORTH ROOM

Skillful Touches in Arrangement of Furniture and Draperies Will Accomplish Wonders.

I would advise papering the room with a self-toned paper, light tan in color as near to the tint of sunshine as you can get. Your shades should, of course, match those in use all over the house. Then make your drapery curtains of tan art serimm, just a deep hemstitched hem at the bottom, and allow them to hang straight.

Stain the woodwork white and give it several coats of finishing. Paint the enamel or egg-shell finish. For the center of the room have an "art square" made. This may be woven as the rag rugs are or crocheted or knitted. I prefer the woven rugs and beautiful solid effects with handsome borders would be possible.

Try to have the rose color predominate in rug and articles of furnishing for the bureau and chiffonier, pillows and couch cover. With white enamel furniture, the north room will be far from a cold, repellent room, and will be a transplanted sunshiny corner.—Exchange.

To Break Up a Cold.

The hydropathic treatment of a cold in the head is more reliable than any other one which scarcely requires the aid of a physician. It is as follows: In the morning after rising and at night before retiring wash the feet and legs as high up as the knees in cold water, then rub them with a rough towel and massage them till the skin is red and glowing. In addition to this, snuff tepid water up the nose frequently during the day and sip with a teaspoon a glassful as hot as can be borne an hour before each meal and at bedtime. A few days is often quite sufficient for simple cases and obstinate ones yield if the treatment is prolonged. No medicines are required. If taken in the first stages of the disease a cold is broken up which might otherwise become a severe case of bronchitis lasting many days or weeks.

Rewards of Inventors.

It is not always the greatest invention that brings the largest financial rewards. Roller skates are said to have brought their inventor $3,000,000, while nearly half a million was realized by the man who first devised boot laces. The inventor of the safety pin, who took the idea from the production of a Pompeian fresco, says Les Nouvelles, made $10,000,000. On the other hand, Charles Bourseul, who discovered and described the principle of the telephone in 1855, died poor. Michaux, the inventor of the bicycle, ended his days in the almshouse, and Frederic Sauvage, who is credited with the invention of the screw propeller, was imprisoned and died bankrupt and insane.

Alabama's Iron Ore Deposits.

The boom which followed the discovery of the extensive deposits of iron ore in the vicinity of Birmingham, Alabama, in 1882, was without precedent in the industrial history of the United States, and the rush to Birmingham was paralleled only by the stampedes which followed such discoveries as the Comstock lode in Nevada and the Alaska gold fields. The iron ore of Alabama, while inferior in quality to those of Lake Superior, have the advantage of being near deposits of good coaling coal and of the limestone requisite for fluxing, so that Birmingham, the Pittsburgh of the south, can manufacture pig iron cheaper than any other district of the world.

PAYS TO SHOW APPRECIATION

Results of Experiments Made in Broad-Minded Way Have Been More Than Gratifying.

The pride that most men of whatever station take in their work can be utilized by making each worker feel that he is an efficiency engineer in his own sphere. If he is made to understand that the problem of efficiency is not a matter of abstruse calculation and lengthy red tape, but a simple process of obtaining the greatest results with the least effort, he is bound to be interested. If the expert poses, not as a dictator, but rather as a teacher—and proves his ability for the role—the men, nine times out of ten, will respond.

Another feature of this get-together type of proceeding that is important, is the giving of credit for good ideas to the originator. I recall one case in point, where the problem happened to be the designing of a simple system of cards to cover a complicated series of operations. A shipping clerk, whose interest had been aroused, offered a suggestion which resulted in cutting down the number of cards to be made from one department to two-thirds. It was customary to print in small letters on all the forms "Designed by the B. V. Co." On these particular cards the man in charge of the work substituted "Designed by A. N. K."—the initials of the shipping clerk. The latter, greatly pleased by this evidence of appreciation, at once set to work evolving other ideas, many of which were sound and well worth adopting. Naturally, the incident became noted about in the shop and served to convince the men of the broad-minded attitude of the expert.—Engineering Magazine.

TRAINING AS POWER EXPERT

Subject That in America Has Not Been Given the Attention That It Deserves.

Power is one of the greatest factors in modern-day work. The thousand and one branches of it offer admirable fields for conquest by vigor and brains. In the field of power a few concerns have assisted men to obtain vocational training. From the boiler room have risen men by successive stages to positions of grave responsibility. In an issue of Power neglect in this branch of vocational training in the United States is commented upon as follows:

"Power is a factor in all the important affairs of modern life," says a writer and thinker, and necessarily the engineer, who makes that power, is also a factor in that the whole purpose is not merely to make the wheels go round, but to turn them at a profit. Furthermore, electricity, the steam turbine and the waterwheel have made the engineer's vocation even more difficult, demanding a degree of operating skill that is well-nigh impossible to acquire in some cases without special training.

"We are told that of all the great nations, ours is the most deficient in vocational development. Germany forty years ago saw its need and met it; England, Scotland, France, Austria, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden and Denmark are all paying heed to it. If we would successfully compete in our chosen field with the large immigration yearly coming to our shores we must find the means to equally educate our own people in their vocations."

Fortunes in Sausages.

Westphalia, in Prussia, is the home of the sausage. There, it is said, a trader will name no fewer than 400 different kinds of sausage. A sausage exhibition was held recently in Germany, at which 1,000 varieties of sausages were shown.

In this connection the story is told of a young Prussian who, though he had received an expensive training as a chemist, was stuck up in his laboratory, as instead of devising a new dye, safety match, motor engine, explosive, aeroplane or photographic lens, took pork, veal, olives, pepper, fennel, old wine, cheese, apples, cinnamon and herring's roe and from them evolved a wonderful and totally original "sausage," the best of its kind. He has amassed a considerable fortune from its sale.

More Tractable as He Grows Older.

"I find myself mellier' up as the years pass by," confessed Hod Durmitt. "Formerly I would go into a frenzy over 'most any unimportant thing, but when the 'Mona Lisa' was stolen I didn't care a jam, and now that it has been recovered I still don't care a jam. It used to be that when anything occurred that I didn't approve of I forthwith swept a place and had a furious fit; but nowadays it has to be something of consequence and some of my silliness before I rend my raiment and throw dust in the air. Without doubt old age is creeping on me apace, as the feller said."—Kansas City Star.

Versatile Da Vinci.

When Leonardo Da Vinci was not painting Mona Lisa or modeling great equestrian statues or inventing cannon, catapults, flying machines, balloons, patent pumps or scaling ladders, he would amuse himself by little excursions into anatomy, astronomy, physics, chemistry, philosophy, dietetics, the philosophy of dress or city planning.

If all these activities are not enough, Da Vinci was also an author of treatises on painting and other subjects, and even on many an occasion extemporized verses.

HOW TO UTILIZE LEFT-OVERS.

There are many people who balk at the thought of eating left-over food. Their idea of hash is the limit of their culinary knowledge on the subject. Now, hash is not a dish of our grandmothers', and is not to be despised. There is hash and hash "out of all whopping," as Shakespeare says, but well made hash is both palatable and attractive.

The careless, improvident person is wasteful of small bits of food and vegetables, which, if carefully combined, make attractive dishes.

Even a dish for one is better saved than wasted. In one family where nothing is wasted and there are small dishes of food left, they are combined in tasty small dishes and placed on a tray where each member of the family may choose which he likes best, or they may take turns in having the first choice. Even a stalk of celery with an apple and a few pieces of nuts and a tablespoonful of salad dressing will make a nice dish of salad for one.

A tablespoonful of chicken in a dish of rice will flavor the whole dish and make a pleasant change.

The corner stalks of celery, which are not nice enough to use on the table, may be cooked until tender and served in a white sauce on toast or used as a favor for soup stock.

Knowing how to utilize left-overs is a science in itself, and will help out many a housewife when unexpected company arrives. Left-over mashed potato may be made into potato puffs or croquettes, or simply saute in butter after making them into flat cakes.

A delicious cream of potato soup may be prepared with a cupful of mashed potato. Boiled potatoes may be hashed brown or creamed.

Every bone left from the steaks or other cuts of meat may be utilized in soup stock. Bones and vegetable scraps are so much better flavored if made from stock, rather than water.

A most appetizing dish may be made of a little left-over steak. Cut it in bits to serve, and place it with a layer of potatoes sprinkled with onion and a little stock in a casserole. Cover with tomatoes and bake until the potatoes are tender. Season every layer before adding the tomatoes.

Chicken or any kind of meat may be served this way, and the addition of a few peas sprinkled over the top makes a most tasty and also pretty dish.

A bit of chicken combined with cold boiled potato, an apple or two, a little celery and salad dressing makes a most appetizing salad.

A SYMPOSIUM OF SOUPS.

This is the time of all others when a hot, nourishing soup is most acceptable. It warms the very cockles of the heart on a cold winter night, and is one of the best of dishes to send one out into the cold, cosy and warm.

Turkish Soup.—Cook one-fourth of a cup of rice in a quart of boiling water until nearly tender, then pour out the water and pour over a quart of soup stock, and cook until the rice is tender. Put two cupfuls of strained and stewed tomatoes in a saucepan, add a slice of onion, eight peppercorns, one stalk of celery, a little salt and a small bay leaf. Cook half an hour; add this to the rice and stock. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two of flour, stir until smooth, add a little of the soup to thin it, then stir it into the boiling hot soup. Boil for three minutes, then strain.

Cream of Celery Soup.—Cut a quart of celery into pieces, add two quarts of water and cook ten minutes. Pour off the water and add three cupfuls of white stock and cook until the celery is soft; rub through a strainer, put a cup and a half of milk to scald with a slice of onion. Remove the onion and add the milk to the soup. Put as much of the celery pulp through the sieve as possible. Bind with two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter cooked until smooth. Add to the soup and stir until thickened; add salt and pepper to season, and one cup of whipped cream.

Barley Soup.—Take two pounds of the shin of beef, a quarter of a pound of pearl barley, a bunch of parsley, four onions, six potatoes, salt and pepper and four quarts of water. Put in all the ingredients and simmer gently for three hours.

The Place of Agriculture in Kentucky Schools.

Much is said nowadays about the teaching of agriculture in the common and high schools, which teaching is supremely important, but on account of its very importance must be undertaken with great care.

A school is maintained primarily to serve the interests of its community, in other words, to do the greatest good to the greatest number. Agriculture is the predominant interest of Kentucky, hence it is obvious that agriculture cannot rightfully be neglected. When we say agriculture, we necessarily mean the whole scope of rural activities from corn production to home comforts and the general culture of the rural people. Bearing this in mind it is not right to say that the purpose is to "teach" the thorough teaching of such branches as history, geography, English, etc., for without a fair degree of proficiency in these branches the man is handicapped in business.

A further consideration that is necessary is the absolute unfitness of the vast majority of teachers for teaching agriculture properly. Some have advocated a state law requiring the teaching of agriculture in all the schools, but upon the passage of such a law, nearly all our teachers would find themselves confronted by a task for which they were quite unprepared and as a consequence they would proceed to blunder, the result being the propagation of all sorts of false ideas and ultimately a loss of confidence in scientific agriculture by the farming public.

For the present the best method undoubtedly lies in the introduction of agriculture into the high schools and other institutions of similar rank. Provision should be made for the employment of well trained teachers of agriculture in the schools and for the installation of reasonably good equipment to aid them in teaching. The teacher is the main consideration, for if the teacher himself is the school, he should not be expected to give advanced teaching in any particular branch, but should be able to get a few correct principles of agriculture placed in the minds of his pupils. Such things as the food necessary for plant growth, what the soil itself is, what its deficiencies are how these deficiencies can best be corrected, what is meant by permanent fertility, how depleted soils can best be reclaimed, the importance of proper physical condition of soil, what constitutes a balanced ration for each class of animals, the merits of various classes of animals, how to select good seed, how to contend with insect enemies, how to produce good fruits and vegetables, how to sew and how to adorn the house, etc.

About ninety-five per cent. of our pupils never reach an institution of learning beyond the high school, hence the great importance of reaching this vast majority with the above enumerated useful teaching by placing it in the secondary or the high schools.

As a matter of fact a large proportion of our common school teachers receive their training in these high schools, and therefore if we can reach them there with this useful instruction, the problem of teaching agriculture in the common schools will be all time, do much to solve itself, and in due time legislation requiring the teaching of agriculture in the common schools will be really beneficial.

The railroads of this country will collect about $10,000,000 during the present year on account of the extra business resulting from the parcel post.

Great Britain leads all other nations in the matter of exports, but since 1900 the United States has gained more than any of the other powers and Great Britain lost the percentage of increase being United States, 110; Germany, 8; France, 71, and Great Britain, 64.

At the present time about 600 men are at work on the site of the new capital of India, which is just outside of Delhi; but it is expected that the new city will be fully swung at an early date, when the number of workmen will be 15,000 or 20,000. Practically a new town is being built, covering about four square miles, and about 25 miles of railway lines are being laid to afford a good service to and from the center of Delhi. Incidentally, the sanitary condition of the old city is being greatly improved. It is given out for the benefit of the natives that the work will cost $20,000,000, but those in a position to know say that it will be double that amount.

L. R. Miller, the genial merchant at Landing, was a visitor here Monday, going to Cincinnati on a business trip.

Rev. T. C. Stackhouse, of Lexington, spent Saturday here en route to Warsaw where he is pastor of the Baptist church.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler Myers and two sons Ralph and Rafe, of Verona, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Stephenson last Sunday.

H. G. Blanton, of Erlanger, spent Sunday here the guest of friends. Mr. Blanton is engaged in leading undertakers and livery men.

Ernest DeMoisey, who is freight conductor on the Q. and C. Railroad, spent part of last week here the guest of friends and relatives.

Fred Miller, who is employed in Cincinnati, spent part of Saturday and Sunday here visiting his parents Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Miller.

Virgil Holder, formerly of this place, who is employed at Danville, Ky., spent part of last week here with relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Powers, of near Verona, were the guests of their son-in-law, Rev. and Mrs. A. K. Johnson last Friday and Saturday.

Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Slater and his father Chas. Slater, and Mrs. Joseph Lanahan, all of Ludlow, spent a day last week here with relatives and friends.

Rev. Louis Kohler, of Cincinnati, preached two excellent sermons at the Walton Christian church, Sunday morning and evening to large and attentive congregations.

Col. J. M. Baker, who recently resigned as Division Deputy in the U. S. Revenue Service at Covington, and moved to his farm near Big Bone Springs, was a visitor here Monday, going to Covington to take charge of a mail order house as president at a good salary.

In last week's Walton news an item appeared by mistake in its columns stating that a man was anticipating putting in a wharfboat. The item properly belonged to the Petersburg items. However, judging from the sloppy condition of the main street at the time, it looked as though it could float a boat. The item caused considerable laughter in Walton.

The new town council was sworn in last week and had their first meeting Monday night. The office of Police Judge is vacant owing to the judge-elect, G. M. Owen, failing to qualify. Miss Bevelly is the office of tax collector for the graded school, which is more remunerative than that of police judge. It seems that this latter is going begging as no one seems to want it.

Rev. W. W. Evans, of the Presbyterian church, occupied the pulpit of the Walton M. E. church Sunday morning and evening and preached two masterly sermons to appreciative congregations. The churches regular pastor is on a vacation trip to his home in Mississippi and Rev. Evans upon invitation very generously responded. He will also preach at the same church on the fourth Sunday morning and evening.

We have but recently learned of the marriage at Covington, Dec. 25th, 1913, of Miss Linnie Bevelly to Jesse Baldwin. Miss Bevelly is the daughter of W. B. Bevelly, of Walton, and has many friends here who wish her a long life of happiness in her new relation. Mr. Baldwin is a resident of Owen county and an industrious young man. The young couple will make their home in Latonia.

Last Friday night Dr. G. C. Rankins took Mrs. J. D. Greenwell to the Bethesda Hospital, Cincinnati, where she was operated on upon arrival at that institution in an advanced stage of appendicitis. Owing to the advanced stage of the disease it was necessary to perform the operation immediately. She was accompanied by her husband. The operation was very successful and the doctors, notwithstanding the advanced stage of the disease, anticipated an early recovery.

M. E. Hance, of Big Bone Springs, was here part of last week and rented the Mrs. Sanders property to which he and his wife and daughter will move shortly. The house was recently vacated by John Ransler and family who have moved to their elegant new home on their farm north of Walton.

The school trustees of the Walton Graded School District, at a meeting Monday night appointed I. Taylor Grubbs as a member to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of John C. Bedinger who became the Justice of the Peace for the Walton-Verona district. The other members of the school board are: Charles Ransler, Scott Chambers, J. Edwin Bristow, and John C. Bedinger.

Died—Jack Roberts, age 65, of pneumonia, at the home of his son-in-law Geo. West, about a mile from Walton, in Kenton county, Sunday night at 12 o'clock, after a short illness. He leaves a wife and a large family of children. He was a farmer and was married to his present wife, Emma, about 12 years ago. The funeral took place from the West residence Tuesday morning, Rev. A. K. Johnson of the Baptist church preaching an appropriate discourse over the remains after which they were interred in the Goshen cemetery. C. S. Chambers, of Walton, had charge of the funeral cortege.

Married—Last Wednesday morning, Jan. 7th, at the residence of the officiating minister, Rev. A. K. Johnson, of the Baptist church, Clarence C. Deere, of Dry Ridge, age 25, to Miss Emma Ballow, age 19, of Mt. Zion, Grant Co., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Ballow. The young couple were accompanied by Mrs. Ballow, sister of the bride, and Miss Mary E. Martin, of Dry Ridge. Mr. Deere is a young farmer of exemplary habits and his bride is a social favorite in her home town where she has a host of friends who wish her and her husband a long life of happiness and prosperity. They will make their home at Dry Ridge.

Last Thursday quite a delegation interested in the "Good Roads Movement" were visitors here after a long drive from the north end of the road of Kenton county. The party was composed of John B. Vonder, of Washington, D. C., senior engineer of the Good Roads Department of Agriculture, an assistant of Covington; R. J. Cody and John Finan, of Independence, County Commissioners of Kenton county; H. W. Jenisch, Secretary of the Business Men's Club in Covington, and Claude E. Harris, of Latonia, who is in charge of the National Government interested in the building of good roads in this quarter.

Last Friday was a red letter day in the Masonic circles of Walton, when a special meeting was held to confer the Master Mason's degree on three candidates, Geo. P. Nicholson, Rev. H. C. Wrayman, and Prof. J. L. Chambers, to which feature was added the visit of the Grand Master of Kentucky, Hon. Orris S. Ware, who was accompanied by the Grand Senior Deacon, Wm. L. Gould, of Covington. Invitations had been sent to all the neighboring lodges, and when the evening began the hall was filled with about 175 members in attendance. At the Opera House building the sisters of the Eastern Star, who were present, had a feast of all the good things that appeal to the appetite. Cigars were then passed and quite a number of dresses were made. The three candidates were then presented with Masonic emblems, the tokens coming from relatives and friends, and they feelingly and gratefully responded with appropriate remarks. The members of the lodge repaired to the Masonic Hall where a beautiful lecture delivered by Mr. John J. Vest and illustrated by Roy D. Stamper, occupied an hour, and was greatly enjoyed by the large number present. It was past the midnight hour before the brethren departed for their homes. The lodge represented covered a large territory and the visiting brethren were all pleased with the exercises and the kind treatment accorded them, while all home members were delighted to be honored with the presence of so many excellent gentlemen, who made a mark of impression on the community by their attractive qualities.

Hall of Walton Lodge, No. 183, I. O. O. F., Saturday, Jan. 10th, 1914.

Whereas, death has added another of our members to the celestial lodge above in the taking away of our beloved brother Chas. McGraw, and desiring to show our brotherly love and also our sorrow over his sudden and untimely end, therefore be it Resolved, That in the death of our brother Chas. McGraw, we lost a zealous and worthy member, and his family a devoted husband and an affectionate father, and the community a good citizen.

Resolved, That we tender to his bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in their great bereavement, and as a token of our high esteem and fraternal regard of our departed brother the usual badge of mourning be worn, these resolutions made a part of the lodge minutes, and copy be given to the bereaved family and published in the Boone County Recorder.

The Merits of Blue Grass.

A blue grass pasture stands high in the estimation of the farmer, though perhaps not always as high as it should, but for many of its good offices the blue grass is not given full credit or full opportunity to do its best. While taking a cross-field walk on a bright wintry day the value of blue grass for protecting the feet from mud was emphasized. Wherever there was blue grass sod along a fence row or bordering a little stream, walking was good. The sun shone so warm that between these stretches of grass there was a sticky mud. This led to a study of the ways of this humble friend of ours. While driving over several country roads I noticed those which had a good stand of blue grass along their border were almost free from weeds, while the stretches not protected by the law of nature were a mass of weeds and brush. Blue grass is an aggressive plant, but needs some help in its efforts to crowd out its neighbors. Where the law is enforced requiring all weeds to be cut along the highways, it spreads its luxuriant growth close to the beaten track and against the fences along the way.

Another virtue in a good blue grass sod, is that it prevents washing. The farmers realize this when they put the hillside and rough lands in the blue grass pasture, but it answers the same good end where it borders the roadway, covering the grounds about the house, or checks the force of the flooding rains. On one farm where the watershed is at a distance of nearly a mile from the house, the floods come with a good deal of force for a few hours after a heavy rain. Right across their track is a fence bordered on each side by a heavy growth of blue grass and this safeguards the garden and grounds lying beyond it. Its owner instead of having a never-ending warfare with weeds and grasses, gives a fraction of the time they would require to caring for the blue grass.

A muddy, dooryard is a constant source of annoyance. The dog runs across it and then into the house or over the porch floor the chickens lead their feet with mud and get into the nests and wipe it off on the eggs. A good bluegrass sod will prevent all of this. A thick sod, with its hungry roots is one of the best protectors from the contamination around a well. Those things that would be poison in the well are food to the grass and are changed by it into food for animals.

It is not only the benefits the blue grass gives, the items to its credit multiply. While visiting a neighbor and walking over the farm I noticed his lane was well grassed almost the entire length, and was just as useful for pasture as the grass in the field. A long lane giving no returns to the farm except as a lane is an expensive bit of land. As a source of pleasure because of its beauty, bluegrass is winning its way steadily. Well kept lawns have increased notably in both country and town.

Time and expense which at first are grudgingly given to the lawn are felt to be well spent, and as one farm home after another shows a stretch of beautiful grass, the whole neighborhood catches the spirit of improvement and no night train and weeds go so the grass may come.—A. Interesting Teacher's Meeting At Hebron.

The Teachers' Association of Division No. 4 met at Hebron, Saturday afternoon, January 10.

With one exception all the teachers were present, and most all responded to their part of the program with talks which were interesting and instructive.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman, Mr. L. H. Harrison.

After devotional exercises by Supt. Riley, and prayer by Elbert Hyle, the following program was rendered:

The Teacher as a Student—Miss Ruth Kelly.

The Value of the Course of Study in the Rural School—Miss Edna Riley.

Some Causes of Failures in Teaching Reading—Miss Lorena Hafer.

Self-examination of the Teacher—Miss Kate Mendell.

Course of Study in Civics Outlined—Mr. Elbert Hyle.

How is the Rural School Failing in Preparing Pupils for Life—Prof. Dix.

Duties of the Subdistrict District Trustee and County Board—Supt. Riley.

After the various topics had been discussed, Prof. Dix presented the following article:

In view of the fact that the change in the School Law has vastly increased the duties of the County Superintendent, and that all the neighboring counties have increased the salaries of their Superintendents in accordance with the increased duties, and that several teachers of the county, employed for only nine months of the year, draw larger salaries and are not required to handle large sums of money nor to give bond; and, further, in view of the fact that the Magistrate of this district, as well as many others, previously to the last election, publicly expressed himself as favoring an increase in salary.

Therefore, we, the teachers of this district assembled, request a public statement as to why the said Magistrate worked and voted for a minimum salary, when it was brought before the court, and whereby votes of our disapproval of this action.

After due consideration, on motion, the above was adopted.

Being no further business, the meeting adjourned.

LORENA HAFFER, Secty.

Fake Farming and Real Farming

It was the custom among farmers of the old school to laugh at farming theories advanced by scientific men. There was some warrant for this, too, for many of the early so-called scientific discoveries were wholly impractical.

The farmer of to-day, while he continues to be conservative concerning new theories, is disposed to consider them seriously. He has learned that much of the early levity was uncalled for and that laughing at book farmers is rather an expensive amusement. In many instances it would have been money in the bank for the old-time farmer had he taken a different attitude.

Farming, more than any other industry, perhaps, is afflicted with cranks and quacks who want to tell the farmer how to run his business. The activity of these fellows frequently create a prejudice against men who are making practical experiments in scientific farming and who know what they are talking about. But for the charlatan, it is probable there would have been earlier acceptance of the teaching of agricultural schools and real instructors.

And fakers will continue to be a common pest until farmers generally learn to distinguish between bogus "agriculturalists" and the real thing. Fortunately, a large proportion of them are now making the distinction.

"If every county in the State had a thoroughly trained agricultural expert on whose judgment farmers could rely, the fakers and the visionary would both have to go out of business. It is just as essential in these days, when farmers are reading and studying farm problems, to prevent dissemination of misleading information and false theories as it is to give them the truth.

John W. Skillen of Sidney, Ohio, Has Found a Remedy.

Experts declare that the reason stomach disorders are so common in this country is due to hasty and careless habits of eating. Stomach troubles and run-down conditions usually go together.

John W. Skillen of Sidney, Ohio, says: "I had a bad stomach trouble for years, and became so weak that I could hardly walk or do any work. My appetite was poor, and it seemed impossible to get any relief. Since taking 'Vinol' I find a remarkable improvement in my health, my digestion is much stronger, and I have gained in weight. I would not be without 'Vinol'."

Vinol makes weak stomachs strong because it strengthens and tones up the weakened, tired and overtaxed nerves of the digestive organs. Vinol is easily assimilated by the weakest stomachs, and is delicious to the taste.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

Subscriptions are being raised to build a pike from John L. Jones' to McVillie. The landowners are subscribing liberally and the road seems to be assured. This road is about 10 miles long and is one of the most important in the county, and will be a needed improvement as it passes through the rich East Bend bottoms and a portion of the Bellevue bottoms. It will require two bridges, one at Gunpowder and one at Lick creek.

LETTER FROM ILLINOIS.

The Administration.

When Woodrow Wilson was nominated at the Baltimore convention as the Democratic candidate for President this pencil pusher shook his head with some misgivings.
We all knew that the college president was a man of educational training, uprightness of life, a Presbyterian elder, of a sober mind and temperate in life. But how many of us thought of Mr. Wilson as a statesman? He doubtless knew very much about conducting an institution of learning. But really had he come into any great prominence as a politician. Not as we saw it. Is it really necessary to be a real politician to be a good President of these United States? To this end a man must be more than a politician. Our President is demonstrating this "more" quality.

Some predicted that Mr. Wilson would be a sort of figurehead, and that W. J. Bryan or some other prominent leader in the party would be the real President. True, Mr. Wilson, though a statesman was wanting in experience. But President Wilson, on taking his seat in the White House, took hold of affairs with the aptness of a real statesman. Bryan, Clark, Underwood and others in the party were known statesmen. But the one man who could sway the country to his liking made the candidacy of Mr. Wilson a matter of fact.
Chas. Clark was the logical candidate of the convention, and undoubtedly would have received the nomination had it not been for William Jennings Bryan. But whether Mr. Clark, if nominated and elected, would have been influenced by a corrupt power, as insinuated by Bryan, must have been simply conjecture. As well as Mr. Bryan, though of a different religious body. While Bryan is a good Presbyterian elder, Mr. Clark is a prominent member of the church of Christ, or Disciples.
We look upon Mr. Bryan as the ablest leader in the party with Mr. Clark a close second. But who can say that Mr. Clark would have given us a better administration up to date than has Mr. Wilson?

But when Mr. Clark was defeated in the convention when he was positively the logical candidate and by every right should have received the nomination, why did he not do as Roosevelt did, go off into the sulks and start his own party? "My way or ruin." Clark is not built that way. He acted the gentleman and he was an am for the success of the ticket. The writer admires much about Mr. Bryan, and also Mr. Wilson. The president gave us a good starter in his administration. He has the practice of serving alcoholic liquors on public occasions. Neither do these gentlemen serve such liquors in a private way. They have added much to the nation's practice of serving alcoholic liquors in a few months than any men of like station did in the past several years.
Our President is surely endeavoring to make good some of the pledges of his party. (Temperance is not one of them.) We need not have added much to the nation's practice of serving alcoholic liquors in a few months than any men of like station did in the past several years.
Many are wondering if the 1918 election will bring a change in the national administration. Already it has been hinted that there may be a secondary party of the Republican stand pattern with the Roosevelt wing in 1916, and uniting up on the Teddy bear man as the only feasible plan to bring about the desired change. Roosevelt is now off again setting stakes. Watch him. We would call the stand pattern bigger fools than we now take them to be. If they would seek to form any alliance with the sulky, selfish, self-willed aspirant to get the nomination at the regular convention of this party we are off and started a Teddy following. But reports have it that this following is weakening. Is it not true that the "rule or ruin" spirit is found in some politicians?

Should President Wilson and his aids continue to make good for the remainder of his term his administration will be a blessing to the nation. Not since the days of Abraham Lincoln has our country had a man at the head of national affairs in whom the good people of America had such firm confidence. This scribe boldly affirms that if Mr. Wilson should continue along his lines for the best interests of the people, it could be a calamity to this nation to displace him in 1916 with such a man as the bear hunter. If any man is to succeed Mr. Wilson in the next campaign he should be a man having as much interest at least in the welfare of the people as our chief executive in manifesting. Mr. Wilson would be an ideal President if he would and could take another advanced step and declare for the divorce of Uncle Sam with the liquor business, and say it is time to dethrone this evil. But he is bound otherwise by his party.

A few Republicans are praising the present administration. To be candid they must do this. More than probable the Recorder readers will guess the writer of this letter to be a Democrat. Let them guess again.

TUBERCULOSIS IN HOGS

Two Per Cent. of Animals Slaughtered Are Affected.

Suppression of Disease Would Save Country Millions of Dollars Annually—Principal Causes of Infection of Swine.

Federal inspectors at the abattoirs of the country show that approximately two per cent. of the hogs slaughtered in this country are affected with tuberculosis, and of those affected, the vast majority are found in the lungs and in the lymphatic system. They no longer possess any value save their worth for grease and fertilizer.

The suppression of hog tuberculosis would save the country millions of dollars annually, and when it is realized that there are vast numbers of infected hogs in the country, having no conception of any kind, it can be seen that the danger to human life from this source would at the same time be removed.

The principal causes from which hogs become infected with the germ of this disease are: (1) the transfer of the disease from one hog to another.

Tuberculosis Hogs Infected by Working Over a Pile of Manure From Affected Cattle.

products from crockeries; (2) shift from tuberculosis (cows); (3) food left behind by infected cattle.

The spread of the disease through crockery products (1) is absolutely prevented if all crockeries could be induced to pasteurize or raise their separated milk before returning it to the producers. The scientific results of feeding milk from tuberculosis cows will be apparent in a short time, and it is known that a lot of hogs that were fed on tuberculosis milk three days after the onset of the disease. It is a very common practice to allow hogs to feed on the milk of a sick cow. In some cases, the milk is fed in this manner, but it is not recommended, but the danger to the cattle is very great.

JANUARY WORKING CALENDAR

Good Time to Mate Breeding Pigs to Insure Fertility by Spring—Cleanliness of Importance.

Begin trap nest records so that you may know the individual value of each hen on the place.

Start an account with the hens. Now is a good time to mate your breeding pigs to insure good fertility by spring.

During inclement weather keep the fowls indoors, and if you have prepared your fowls for the winter, you will be surprised how little difference cold makes to their health or production.

Keep the fowls clean in the snow, and if they are in a building, keep them as clean as possible. This is a very important matter for the fowls do not like to be dirty.

Perfect cleanliness is especially important in the spring, as the hens will not lay if they are dirty. It is a good idea to give the fowls a bath each day, and to keep them clean. This is a very important matter for the fowls do not like to be dirty.

BIGGER POTATO YIELD

Interesting Series of Tests Conducted in Ohio.

Great Advantage Gained by Spraying for Blight is Conclusively Shown—Tubers Were Planted Level and in Ridges.

A very interesting series of tests in potato growing in Ohio, show conclusively that great advantage is to be gained by spraying for blight. In four wet years, when blight is usually severe, so as to make the conditions of 50 feet of sprayed vines with the corresponding unsprayed vines, the sprayed lots gave a greater yield. The averages for the four years of these tests showed that spraying for blight gave an average increase of about 32 per cent. In every one of the years, the spraying, theoretically, much more than paid for itself.

The Bordeaux (4-4-50 formula) spraying was done three times, the first being about the middle of July, the last about the first of September. All of the potatoes were sprayed for blight, and in every one of the years, the same so far as insect injury was concerned. The potatoes were planted level and in ridges. The increased yield of the potatoes was not only due to increased numbers of marketable tubers, but also to increased weight of the tubers, especially the larger ones. As a result of these tests the following recommendations are made: Follow a rotation, having potatoes on a piece of land each year. A four-year rotation is (1) Corn, (2) Potatoes, (3) Rye, (4) Leguminous crop. (Sow in fall with the rye, in the following spring.) Growing potatoes on the same land two or more years in succession increases scab. If nature is used, plant it in the preceding fall. If a heavy coat of manure is used with the corn, commercial fertilizer only may be used with the potatoes. Nitrate of soda, 150 pounds; mulatto of potash, 200 pounds; acid phosphate, 400 pounds; and tankage, 350 pounds, makes an excellent home-mixed fertilizer.

A thorough cultivation in the nature of combined level-ridge culture, if recommended. That is, give thorough level cultivation up to the last two, and then begin to ridge up the rows, moderately at first, and as much as possible the second time.

As year after year, wet or dry, we have produced increased yields due to spraying with Bordeaux mixture, we recommend spraying as a yearly feature in growing potatoes.

STOP EGG-EATING BY FOWLS

Vicious Habit Often Started in Flock by Hens Fighting Over Nests—Decapitation is Best.

By H. H. SHUMARD.

As the pullet begins laying, more nests will be needed, and it is very important that a plenty of nests should be provided, so there will be no quarrels over them.

The vice of egg-eating is often started in the flock, because the hens are fighting over the nests. If the eggs are not eaten, the hens will not lay.

Whenever you catch a hen in the act of eating an egg, better send her to market or cut her head off. This is a very important matter for the fowls do not like to be dirty.

SANDWICHES.

A delicious hot sandwich to serve for a Sunday night lunch, or indeed any time with a crisp salad, is the following: Grate good, well flavored cheese, add cream, seasoning of salt and pepper, and spread it on slices of buttered bread. Put the slices together and fry or saute in a little hot butter until well browned on both sides. Serve hot with tea or cocoa. These are exceptionally nice for the cheese lover.

Dream Sandwiches.—Rub a cupful of stewed prunes to a paste with two spoonfuls of lemon juice, spread between thin slices of bread buttered. Add a few chopped walnuts and cut into small square sandwiches.

A lettuce leaf and a bit of boiled dressing placed between, slices, of bread buttered with peanut butter makes a fine sandwich for the children's lunch basket.

Ginger and Walnut Sandwiches.—Between thin slices of buttered bread lay bits of preserved ginger and chopped walnuts, using a little of the ginger sirup to moisten.

Cream Cheese and Cherries.—A few candied or maraschino cherries chopped fine, with a little cream cheese added, which has been softened with cream and seasoned with salt, makes a most attractive filling for sandwiches.

Bacon and Lettuce Sandwiches.—Cut the crust from thin slices of bread, toast on one side and keep warm. Fry thin slices of bacon until crisp. Now butter the soft side of the bread, lay on a lettuce leaf and a few slices of the bacon between.

Shredded pineapple put on buttered bread for a sandwich filling is especially nice for the one who has a weak digestion.

WOOD OF IMMENSE VALUE

Greenheart, South American Product, Has Most Wonderful Qualities for the Shipbuilder.

Greenheart, the wood which the Isthmian canal commission is desirous of securing for use in the construction of docks and similar works in the Panama canal, because it is said by experts to resist more than any other wood the attacks of marine borers which rapidly destroy piles and other submarine structures, is one of the most valuable of timbers. It is native of South America and the West Indies, and from its bark and fruit is obtained blitirine, which is often used as a febrifuge instead of quinine.

The wood is of a dark green color, sap wood and heart wood being so much alike that they can with difficulty be distinguished from each other. The heart wood is one of the most desirable of all timbers, particularly in the shipbuilding industry. Indisputable records show that the best grades surpass iron and steel in lasting qualities in salt water, submerged logs having remained intact for one hundred years.

In the Kelvingrove museum, Glasgow there are two pieces of plank which illustrate better than anything else this durable quality. They are both from a wreck which was submerged eighteen years off the west coast of Scotland. The one specimen—greenheart—is merely slightly pitted on the surface, the other, the wood being perfectly sound and untouched, while the other—teak—is almost entirely eaten away.

It is extensively used in shipbuilding for keelsons, beams, engine bearings and planking, and it is also used in the general arts, but its excessive weight units it for many purposes for which its other properties would render it eminently suitable—Below the Rio Grande.

TOO LIBERAL WITH ADVICE

Bank Cashier Meant Well, But Sad Experience Taught Him a Great and Lasting Lesson.

The story sifted down from St. Paul the other day that "Jim" Hill engineered a shakeup in a bank there because he found an ink spot on his monthly statement, which recalled to a bank official of this town the reason why one cashier ceased to be a little ray of sunshine. Persons who can coax more than a conversational bit out of him nowadays are indeed skilled. "He was a conservative guy—and good," said the banker. "He was the sort of a man who would leave a light turned on in the hall at night so that burglars might think that some member of the family had not returned home. He was especially strong on temperance. Strong drink had never seared his pure lips. He cashed in a savings bank in the edge of the town. One day a Hunkie blew in with an active hang-over, he had no money in his pocket, and wouldn't have been legal without a revenue stamp. He said he wanted the $50 he had on deposit. The cashier stepped to the rear limits of his cage and refused to pay until he came around sober. 'Your signature,' said the cashier, 'looks like a dog-bite when you're in this condition. I will not accept it.' So the Hunkie went hooting up and down town announcing that the savings bank had refused to pay his money. By alarm-clock time next morning the streets were full of yammering 'Hunkies,' waving bank books. The reserves were called out and the cash drawers were chased away. Then the bank officials investigated and the cashier confessed. He's stopped giving good advice."—New York Globe.

The Inspector's Disfigure.

Some days ago, about 10 o'clock in the afternoon the police-inspector of the Second district was called to an affair as delicate as it was urgent.

He quickly made up his disfigure. For his bourgeois melon hat, he substituted a cap, the classic cap of the Apache. He then jumped into an auto.

He was not recognizable, or rather he would not have been if the honorable inspector had not retained upon his breast the red ribbon of the legion of honor, a ribbon that he had heroically won at Shols-le-Rol, under tragic circumstances that no one has forgotten.

And the malefactor in the midst of whom this disguised officer instigated himself could not refrain from laughing and are laughing yet at this man clothed like one of them and decorated with the legion of honor!—Le Cri du Paris.

Evil of Gossip.

Every man and woman will be entitled to think better of themselves and will have a stronger claim to the regard of others to be known on the lookout for something to find fault with, to treasure up and repeat and magnify every scandal, little and big, and to retail and spread every small item of tale gossip, which carries with it ridicule or censure for some one. Suppose all that were dropped, and really it is unworthy of intelligent, well-meaning people and the habit formed of only speaking well of others. Would it, after all, be as stupid as some seem to think?—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Gentlemanly Pig.

The pigs that are reared in the neighborhood of Harvard may be gentlemanly and highly cultured but in this section of the country they are very careless about themselves.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

EXERCISE IS AN INVESTMENT

Better Three Hours a Week at Sensible Play Than Three Weeks of Sickness.

Tennis is over with for the year. Golf is at an end. The great open out of doors which has been the training of the body and the mind for some months is closing up its season. What are you going to do about it? asks Collier's. You Mr. Hardworking Man who have sacrificed your few pounds of flesh to the healthful strain and have received in exchange a tonic better than any drug in the pharmacopoeia, are you going now that winter is here, to let your hard muscles soften, your clear eye dull, your quickened vitality slump and slacken?

If so, don't blame providence or the weather because you fall a prey to the insidious grip of rheumatism presently winning from the weeks of rheumatism or hobble forth next spring feeling somewhat more than a thousand years old. It's all your own fault. You will have wasted capital, the capital of bodily and nervous force which you have laid up for yourself by your summer exercise. Why not keep it up in the winter? Surely there is some sort of athletic opportunity in your town—club or squash or hand ball court or Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

If there isn't there ought to be. Get busy and start one. Indoor exercise may be as enervating or quite as beneficial as outdoor play, but it is an incalculable number of times better than none at all. Of course, there is the familiar can't afford the time argument, but the man who advances this plan, usually the man who, about February, takes three weeks off to go to the hospital with stomach trouble or gets invalided off to a sanatorium to recuperate his depleted nerves. Three hours a week in a gymnasium isn't very much time to expend. Five is better, but three, conscientiously carried out, will keep the average man going and enable him to get through his winter's work in sound condition. Give it a trial. It isn't an amusement only. It's an investment.

HID DISGRACE FROM PARENTS

Conceal on Record Where Convicts Successfully Concealed the Fact That They Had "Done Time."

In most cases men sentenced to imprisonment are only too glad to receive the sympathy of their relatives. The case of Nolan L. Gartner, an ex-convict who returned to Kingston, O., the other day after serving a two-year sentence for wrecking a bank, is an exception. During all the time he was in prison his mother, eighty-six years of age, had supposed he was "in the west on business." She greeted him with smiles on his liberation, little thinking that the weekly letters she had received from him telling of business movements were mailed from a prison through the friendly assistance of the officials.

Another case was that of Adolph Rebeck, an immigrant who killed a man in a quarrel at Chicago shortly after his arrival in this country. He received a sentence of ten years. He gave a cousin $2,500 for investment when he went behind the bars.

The cousin opened a corner grocery store in the name of the convict. The latter wrote monthly to his parents in Berlin that he was prospering slowly. He was paroled in six years.

The grocery store had grown into a flourishing business. He took his cousin into partnership and sent for his parents. They never knew of his imprisonment. Shortly before they died a discharged clerk told the story to them but they refused to believe him and they declared him a lunatic.

New Industry in Mississippi.

The advent of the Mexican cotton boll weevil has caused at least one new industry to spring up in Pike county, namely, the gathering, drying, grinding and shipping leaves of the same tree to be used as an article of commerce. The product is known as "file," and seven barrels of it, aggregating 750 pounds, were shipped to New Orleans from here recently by E. W. Allen, a progressive farmer, residing seven miles east of Magnolia. Mr. Allen has a mill made specially for grinding "file" and has shipped small quantities of it last year. While the article is used extensively in the preparation of "umbo file," the delicious soup which has made French cooking famous, the demand for it is very limited. The leaves are gathered in July and August, and are thoroughly dried before being carried to the mill. It requires about three hundred pounds of green leaves to make one hundred pounds of meal.—Magnolia News.

Night Blooming Cereus.

The night blooming Cereus buds are especially susceptible to sudden jabs or to a handling of the buds. We have known them to drop just because a curious flower-lover took hold of the soft, cottony mass, lovingly, he thought, but the buds dropped. If possible, before it is time for the buds to start, place the plant in its position for the summer, where it will get an abundance of sunshine. Water with lukewarm water in plenty, and do not allow anyone to handle the plant. Some liquid plant food should be given at this time as freely as to geraniums; liquid cow manure diluted, is one of the best plant foods.

Watch that the green aphids do not get a footing, for they will hide in the hairy bud covering, and induce blasting. Fight them off with tobacco-water.

U. S. Grant and S. B. Buckner.

In the case of Ulysses S. Grant and Simon Bolivar Buckner, winner and loser meet once more in a new relation. Buckner now dead at ninety-one, was Grant's friend and companion in the old army, his enemy in the civil war, and again his friend in peace.

Buckner was born in 1823, one year later than Grant. He graduated in 1841, again one year later than Grant. Young officers in the Mexican war, they both gained distinction, and they met as foes fourteen years later at Donelson, where, abandoned by his superior, Floyd and Pillow, Buckner was compelled by circumstances to make an "unconditional surrender," against which he protested in vehement language.

This capitulation, says Grant, made him a prisoner. As was the custom at that time, Buckner was exchanged and resumed his command, becoming eventually a lieutenant general, serving as such during thirty-four years of hard fighting. Grant went on to Shiloh, Vicksburg, Chattanooga, the Wilderness, Appomattox, the presidency and undying glory. Buckner, in Louisiana, in 1863, surrendered an event from which Kentucky first, to face broken fortunes, but later to become Governor, to be respected by his fellowmen in sections once hostile, to renew his cordial relations with his conqueror, who in his triumph proved a friend indeed, and to live to a great old age, almost the last of his time.

History has no parallel to the scene enacted at Mount McGregor, in this State, twenty-nine years ago, when Grant, voiceless and dumb, received in affectionate embrace Buckner, always the friend; Buckner, always the patriot; Buckner, always the true American, in spite of conflicting principles.

From that sad height in 1863, both winner and loser were revealed as victors in a realm morally as great as any that ever hung upon the issue of battle, a message of peace and brotherhood went forth to Americans that will endure for the ages.—New York World.

An Egg Machine.

The modern hen, the bird we are forcing to lay more eggs each year, has developed also a sort of an egg machine. Part of the food she eats goes to make blood and bone and muscle for her own body, the rest of it, if it is one of the right sort, goes to make eggs.

But the best hen in the world can't make eggs from the air, directly from the food she eats.

One part of the ration that is often neglected is animal food. The hens may be able to get enough animal food themselves in summer, if they are on free range, but in winter every bit of animal food a hen is to get must be supplied by the breeder.

Since it is not possible to furnish bugs and worms, such as the hens find for themselves in the summer, we must look for a good substitute. Up to the present time nothing has been found that answers so well as the beef scrap.

The beef scrap must be absolutely sweet and pure, or trouble is sure to follow.

This is especially true in the breeding season, when it is necessary not only to get eggs, but eggs that will hatch well. It has been found that eggs laid by hens that have been fed beef scrap not only hatch better than those laid by hens that have not received any animal food, but they also produce stronger chicks.

Thinks They Are N. G.

The Fishmouth Outlook does not expect much of the present legislature, it says.

As usual, the Kentucky Legislature is in the hands of that unscrupulous crew and they are again recklessly appropriating the people's money to take care of a lot of broken down and out of control politicians who could not be elected comfortable in the county from whence they came. It looks like the people's wishes are never considered on any important issue and the country is being run by an individual had just as well bump his head against a stone wall, as to try to do anything to remedy this evil. His hands are tied by the clique who have matters in their hands. Everything has to come through this clique's hands rather than the Legislature itself. Everything that is done is for the political advancement of the men who compose this clique, and never for the welfare and advancement of the State at large. Judging from their barren actions they believe that the people are the servants. Being progressive does not mean squandering money for personal benefit, but it does mean an economical expenditure of the money for the civic advancement of the whole people. The nulls of the code stand slowly, but when the people do get after this gang they will relegate them so far back in the procession that it will be impossible to hear the band.

Rural Schools.

The interesting process of adjusting rural schools to the needs of rural life, now engaging attention in all parts of the country, is one of the most hopeful signs of better conditions generally.

A bulletin recently published by the United States Bureau of Education is devoted to a brief account of the origin and progress of a country high school in Tennessee. The institution is known as the Paragard School and is located in the open country near the village of Concord, Knox county. It derives its name from the fact that it is near the birthplace of David G. Paragard, the famous American Admiral.

The school has twelve acres of land, six acres being used for playgrounds and six acres for demonstration purposes. In addition, eight acres of land have been secured for a term of years. The present building with its original equipment cost $12,000. Other equipment and the installation of a heating system brought the total cost to about $17,000. There is a cottage for the principal's residence. There is a barn and a place for farming and housekeeping, several horses and a flock of chickens.

The fundamental purpose of the school is "to give country boys and girls the best preparation for the duties and opportunities of rural life and citizenship." There are three four-year courses of study offered, a Latin course, an English and science course and an agricultural course. The courses are elective, but it is stated that 90 per cent of the students are in the agricultural course, which includes manual training.

In summing up the results of the school the bulletin says that during its nine years of existence it has sent an unusually large number of boys and girls to college; that it has given a good practical education to many more who are now successful farmers and housekeepers and that it has become a very vital factor in community improvement. At the beginning many persons were disposed to look upon the experiment as unwise, or at least as doubtful. These have become convinced of its value and three schools of the same type have been established in Knox county.

The community in which the Paragard school is located is an ordinary farming section, not remarkable for wealth, but reasonably prosperous. Some of the best received in the beginning from the General Education Board. The University of Tennessee also has taken especial interest in the school. Commissioner Clayton, of the United States Bureau of Education, pays the institution the high compliment of saying that he has never seen a better attempt to adapt the organization, work and ideas of a country school to the requirements of country life.

Beef Raising in the South.

More than one agricultural authority lately has pointed to the South as the future source of the nation's beef supply. The latest declaration of this subject comes from George M. Rommel, chief of the animal husbandry division of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Nowhere in the North or West, Mr. Rommel asserted in a recent report to the House Committee on Agriculture, can beef be raised at less expense than in the South. In Alabama, he showed, it actually is being raised at a lower cost. "If the Northern feeder is raising a pound of beef," he says, "he must get more than five cents a pound; if he is fattening it is an open question as to how much it is going to cost. But in the South, other reasons have convinced that for a long period to come the South is to be the nation's principal source of cheap beef."

Now that the West is losing prestige as a beef-producing section because of the fact that the great ranches are being divided into small tracts, the South has a great opportunity for the expansion of the cattle raising industry. In no other part of the country is it possible to raise cattle with so small an outlay. The climate, mild and the winters are short, thus reducing the expense of feeding. Under ordinary circumstances there is a fair quality of pasture all the year around and the soil is splendidly adapted to forage crops.

If Alabama can raise cattle at less than five cents a pound, there are other Southern States which can do the same. This is a consideration which should give impetus to cattle production all over the South.—Bk.

The State of Mississippi, being in bad shape for money to meet obligations of $500,000, the president of the Illinois Central railroad communicated with the Governor and offered to loan the State all the money it needed. The offer might have been accepted, but the Governor managed at the last hour to borrow the money in New York. It is something new, however, for a railroad to offer to lend a State money in the old days the States loaned the money to the railroads.—Evening Post.

Should Have a Monument.

They have built a fine monument for the man who put the potato in France. Who better deserves the thanks of mankind than he who adds to the food supply of all?

What prize could not the United States afford to give the man who shall make each stalk of wheat this year produce only one grain more than each stalk produced last year? One extra grain would add 35,000,000 bushels to our wheat crop.

It has required some thousand of years to develop wheat into its present state. When Joseph created that celebrated "corner" in Egyptian wheat each stalk held but a few grains. Originally a wheat grain was as small as hay seed with but two grains on a stalk.

Even if the United States does produce only 15 bushels of wheat from each acre planted—or half the amount in Holland and England—we are doing much better than formerly. There is a fine chance coming from Secretary Houston to tell the farmers how to put a few more grains into each head of wheat—a task worthy of any Homeric mind.

What a little bit of labor now goes into a bushel of wheat! The farm experts have it ciphered down to ten minutes, which is less than any city chap would guess.

Our great grandfathers, who didn't have "chilled" plows, self-binding reapers, steam threshers and sheaf gatherers, put 3 hours of hand labor into a bushel of wheat. Now horses and capital invested in farm implements have reduced man's work in growing our bread supply to less than half a minute for each ordinary loaf.

Some persons whose thoughts run to socialistic theories insist that the farmer now gets too little chance to charge for his own labor, or rather that too little of his labor goes into farm produce.

It is true that a great wood carver could put enough labor on the lumber from one oak tree so that it would have a market value of $5,000, whereas cut into fire wood it would fetch but $100. Why not carve all the wood instead of burning it, and give man a greater labor value?

I saw men in Japan work six months decorating one cup and sell it for $100. If, however, every Japanese tried to do that Satsuma ware would take a big tumble in price. A ton of steel rails is worth but 32¢. Let enough labor go into it so as to produce a ton of match springs and you multiply the value of the steel by thousands. But we do not need more carved wood work, although we do require cheap fire wood, and as for match springs, the market would soon be overstocked were the mills to stop making rails in order to produce springs.

Good News For Teachers.

Frankfort, Jan. 17.—February 1 will mark a red letter day in the history of the State's treasury, and the experience of the city and county teachers drawing pay from the State.

For the first time in twenty years will their salaries be paid promptly on the date on which they are due.

For various reasons money has hitherto never been in the state treasury when the teachers' pay fell due, but on February 1, 1914, the office force of Treasury Tom S. Rhea will mail out checks appropriating $100,438 to rural teachers and $92,000 to city teachers for work done in January.

Assistant Treasurer Robt. Phillips made an examination of the State's books and discovered that this is the first of 240 chances which the State has had on which it was able to meet on time its obligations to the county and city teachers. During the 1913-1914 school term, including the checks sent out on February 1, $3,000,000 will have been paid by the State to its teachers.

Wheat From Canada.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—The opinion of some of the best authorities in Western Canada is that the wheat of that country will soon come into the United States free of duty; that with the meeting of Parliament this month the law will be so changed that the grain now held in bond by the various markets of the United States will be handled either on milling or export account. Many good men in the wheat trade of Chicago are praying that the law will be so changed as to admit the Canadian wheat free, as they figure that under those conditions the market of the United States will be natural and that manipulation would be more difficult.

It takes a female detective to follow the fashions these days.

Claims It is a 'Great Victory.'

The Courier-Journal said the other day that the selection of Hufaker for President pro tem of the State Senate would be an anti-Beckham victory. The Courier-Journal was exactly right but as Hufaker was defeated and Scott the Beckhams candidate was elected then the result must have been a Beckham victory. It was a remarkable victory at that, indicating the tremendous popularity of the ex-Governor with the Democrats of the State. That a private citizen living in Frankfort with no offices at his disposal, and no patronage at his command, should, single handed be able to name thru his friends the President pro tem of the Senate was a most notable and remarkable achievement. The influence of the newly elected proves what the News has repeatedly said: that the Democracy of Kentucky will nominate and elect J. C. W. Beckham U. S. Senator.

No citizen in our recollection in the history of the State has ever secured such a notable achievement as the defeat at Frankfort of the forces which were allied against him. For several days previous to the caucus there was gathered in Louisville the most potential political factors of the Commonwealth pulling for the defeat of the Beckham candidate and the election of Senator Hufaker. There was, first the powerful political influence of the Louisville organization, very naturally for a Senator from that district. Then there was Congressman Stanley, a candidate for the Senate, who desired to score a point against his most formidable rival, by the defeat of his candidate for the Senate office. Then, there was Gov. McCreary, also a candidate for the Senate, who was also for Hufaker in order to give Beckham a fall by his election. Then there were the five Revenue Collectors, all of whom are for Stanley and lastly the liquor interests led by Lawrence Reichert. It was a combination of men of position and distinction, holding and controlling all of the State patronage and Federal patronage for Kentucky and yet they could only command ten out of the thirty-two senators. There never has been anything like it before in Kentucky, but it will be repeated next August, when this same Beckham will meet these same combined forces and defeat them every word of the primary election for United States Senator.—Elizabethtown News.

Realized a Neat Sum.

The turnpike supper given at Hebron, last Friday night, was well attended and a nice little sum was realized for the benefit of the road. The supper was given by the ladies who are very much interested in public improvements and deserve much credit for the part they are taking.

Wants a Clean Score.

The county clerk is preparing a list of transfers for the use of the State Board of Equalization to use when it begins the work of reviewing the assessments of the several counties in the State. So far the State Board has not interfered with Assessor Willis' work during his present term, and it is hoped he will be given a clean record.

The Split Log Drag.

Hubert White dragged about three miles of the East Bend road the latter part of last week and it froze immediately after the work was done and instead of the road being left rough by the freeze it was in excellent condition, nearly as good as an asphalt road. White is an advocate of the split log drag and practices what he preaches in regard thereto.

Must Sign Your Name.

It may be that there will be several articles sent to the Recorder for publication in regard to the recent action of the fiscal court in fixing the salary of the County Superintendent of Schools, and those sending them must bear in mind that it is the rule of this office to publish the name of the writer under his article, otherwise the article will not be published.

Litterell afterward moved to Campbell county, where Mrs. Wilson's widow sued him for damages.

Many Visitors Present.

The local lodge of Knights of Pythias had a big time last Saturday night, about 60 members of the lodge being present to witness the degree work that was put on. The Petersburg and Erlanger lodges were well represented. About midnight a lunch was served at the hall after which good night was said and the brethren sought their virtuous couches, some of which were not hit until nearly daylight Sunday morning.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hays.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hays, mother, of Dr. H. H. Hays, of Bullittsville, died at her home near Bullittsville, last Sunday. Mrs. Hays was born in Covington 84 years ago, and was a daughter of Samuel Howard, a distinguished pioneer, who served in the Confederate army under General Simon Bolivar Buckner, who died a few days since. Shortly after the death of her husband, twenty-five years ago, Mrs. Hays moved to this county, where she continued to make her home. She is survived by one son, Dr. H. H. Hays, of Bullittsville. After a funeral service at the residence, Tuesday, the remains were taken to Covington and interred in Linden Grove cemetery.

Mrs. John Walton.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cropper Walton was born October 6, 1873, died January 3, 1914, at her home in Saylor Park, Ohio. She was married to Dr. John Walton, October 27, 1897. To them was born one child, Louise, who is in her 12th year. She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Cropper, two brothers, P. G. and W. D. Cropper, and her husband, and daughter. After a funeral service conducted at the home of the deceased at 9 a. m., last Friday, by Rev. Yount, Presbyterian, the remains were brought to Bullittsville Baptist church cemetery where they were interred. In the family Mr. Walton had been a long but patient sufferer of tuberculosis of the spine and everything possible was done to restore her health but of no avail. The bereaved parents and husband and child have the sympathy of many friends.

They Are in Earnest.

The people along the East Bend road for a distance of about five miles, beginning at Burlington, and especially about everyone of the land owners, have come to the conclusion that a turnpike is much to be desired in that territory, and have about enough money subscribed to put them in a position to secure the pike. The interest in road improvement has been growing along the East Bend road for several years, and it is hoped that nothing will intervene to cause a miscarriage of the present effort. There is one thing that the promoters of the present effort should bear in mind, and that is to make the present building will be one of the most important roads in the county and that its construction should be such as its importance demands. At this time the idea that any kind of a pike is better than a dirt road should not prevail. Don't waste money that way.

Justice Versus Indifference.

Let me say in the beginning that I ought to be no more interested in the schools of Boone county, as a citizen than anyone of her 9,000 inhabitants; or more interested as a patron than anyone of her 2,000 school patrons; or more interested in her schools than her 4,000 prospective patrons and grand patrons.

However, it is well admitted that we are indeed ungrateful as citizens when we see the development of school interests and yet do not show our appreciation in a substantial way to the present county superintendent thru our Fiscal Court.

The law says what the least any one as a county superintendent may receive as a salary, however incompetent he may be. The Fiscal Court has a right to say what an effective superintendent shall receive.

And what has been done for appreciation on the part of the citizens. The school fund of every district in the county has been supplemented at least $60 per year; school supplies for every district have been provided; central schools have been enlarged and built; County High Schools have been established and maintained. Normal trained teachers have been secured by enthusiastic encouragement; and finally a corps of High School students have been gathered which are a credit to the county. All this has been done by systematic planning and enthusiastic encouragement of the County Superintendent and the County Board of Education.

The least appreciation it seems the citizens could show, would be to supplement the county superintendent's salary. The most indifference would be to say for all this we will give you the salary the most inefficient superintendent could draw.

Conclude us by reasonable and grateful.

Florida Letter.

Eloise, Fla., Jan. 12.
We have been having rain and for the last three weeks but yesterday and today were very much like spring in Boone. There are more northern people here than usual at this time, and trading in groves, etc., is very brisk.

Jack Frost made his appearance here last week, causing considerable unseasonable frosts. Fruit growers and gardeners, but no damage has been done so far. There are millions of oranges and grape fruit around here and teams are busy day and night hauling.

The roads are lined with auto-land agents using them, showing prospectors their land. They are asking from $5,000 to $50,000 for groves.

When I first came to this place in 1906 land was selling very cheap, the same land today is bringing from $60 to $100 per acre. Tell L. A. Conner that the fish you get here can not be put in a quart cup.

Stricken With Paralysis.

Horace Hewitt, of Aurora, Indiana, was stricken with paralysis, one day last week while driving alone fifteen miles back of Aurora.

With one side paralyzed and speechless he drove home where he has since been in a critical condition. Mr. Hewitt is well known in this county, where he has sold sewing machines for many years. His wife is a daughter of Mrs. Sebe Berkshire, of Bellevue, by her first husband, William Presser.

Champion Butter Maker.

The Recorder's friend, A. L. Mallett, who is managing the creamery at Union, took first premium on the butter he exhibited at the dairy show in Lexington the first week in this month, his score being 55. Mr. Mallett is a very fine butter maker and wins first prize every time he exhibits his product for a premium.

Stands By His Record.

To the Teachers of District No. 4: Since it is the wish of the teachers of this district that I make a public statement as to the stand I took regarding the salary of the County School Superintendent for the new term, I take this opportunity of making such a statement.

First.—You say that previous to the election I favored an increase in salary. This I do not deny. I did and I do yet, but is not $700 an increase over $194.35? Further, you accuse me of voting and working for the minimum salary, $600 when it was brought before the court. This I deny most emphatically. The minimum salary was not even voted on. The first motion that was made was for a sum in advance of the minimum and I seconded that motion. The motion lost. When a motion for $700 was made it carried unanimously. $700 is an increase, is it not over the minimum? I've done nothing but vote my sentiments as did the others of the court, and I am ready to stand by them.

Respectfully,
J. P. B. C. District No. 1

Road Discussion General.

Better roads are being discussed everywhere in the office, bank, school, church, woman's clubs, boards of trade, grange meetings, bankers' meetings, conventions, railway meetings on the streets and along the public highways.

Better roads will make possible the two great links of civilization, the model home and the model country school.

Throw away your club and stop knocking and get into the good roads campaign.

Bad roads are responsible, to a great extent, for driving the young people from the farms into the cities, and is responsible, to a great extent, for the shortage in farm products and for the high cost of living. Why not make country life more attractive than city life?

Bad roads are an extravagance that no civilized nation can afford and is an injury to all home enterprise as it keeps the farmer at home to read catalogues of mail order houses and patent medicine frauds. No one knows better than myself, because I find it almost impossible to sell property located more than one-half mile from a pike, and the same property on a good pike will almost bring double value and a ready sale.

Elbert Hubbard says, "Instead of hitting to a star, why don't you get into the good roads movement? Why not mix a little industry, intelligence and patriotism together and erect a few milestones to civilization."

APPLE CROP DAMAGE

Cedar Rust Unusually Destructive in 1912 Season.

Leading Fungous Diseases of Fruit in Certain Sections—Nuts are Very Concentrated Food—Potato an Important Food.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The cedar rust or orange rust of the apple, which has its alternate generation on the red cedar, was unusually destructive during the season of 1912, especially in the Appalachian belt, and resulted in severe losses to apple growers in the autumn of that year. The main facts about this disease have been worked out by investigators and known to science for several years.

The remarkable increase of the cedar rust, apparently due to its new adjustment to the Mork Imperial and other commercial varieties of cultivated apples which have taken place within the last eight to ten years, has caused this to be the leading fungous disease of this fruit in certain apple-growing sections. Lime-sulphur solution, the standard fungicide for spring treatment of the apple, will kill the fungus, but on account of weather conditions and repeated infection periods during the time of leaf formation, it is difficult and usually impracticable to prevent the disease by spraying.

For several years the bureau of plant industry, department of agriculture, has been recommending the destruction of cedars in the vicinity of large commercial orchards which they injure, as a result of which considerable cedar destruction has been accomplished. The unusually severe outbreak of 1912 and the poor results of spraying in that season, however, emphasize the necessity of cedar eradication more than ever before, and the last year this was taken up more actively by the growers, particularly in Virginia and West Virginia, the department and the state experiment station pathologists lending their aid and advice to the movement.

The results of this work proved remarkably satisfactory during the spring infection period of 1913. In the valley of Virginia, where heavy losses were sustained the previous year, orchard after orchard recovered completely in a single season after having the cedars cut down within a radius of one or two miles. In order to insure thorough infection and thus make the effect of eradication stand out prominently, cedars were in some cases allowed to stand in the vicinity of certain orchards. From the result obtained in the work during the past year, it appears satisfactory to cut cedars within a radius of 12 miles, even though hillsides were covered with cedars beyond that distance.

Nuts as a Food.

The department of agriculture says that nuts are a very concentrated food, even more so than cheese, but when rationally used they are well assimilated and may form a part of a well-balanced diet. Nuts are a very valuable source of protein and fat, these two nutrients being the characteristic constituents of the more common nuts, of which the walnut and coconut may be taken as types. In nuts, like the chestnut, carbohydrates are a characteristic constituent. For most families it is undoubtedly wiser to use nuts as the regular diet than as a condiment or supplement to an otherwise heavy meal.

Vegetarians and others who use nuts in place of meat should not depend upon them as the main food supply, but should supplement them with more bulky foods with a low content of protein and fat. As a whole, nuts may be classed among the staple foods and not simply as food accessories. At usual prices, nuts are reasonable sources of protein and energy. Peanuts supply protein and energy very cheaply, even compared with such staple foods as bread and beans. There are a number of nut foods on the market, but it may be stated that there is little to be gained from the standpoint of food value or economy in their use in place of the ordinary nuts and home-made nut products, especially by healthy persons who are willing to masticate their food thoroughly and to use nuts in reasonable combinations. Unless something has been added, the nutritive materials in such special preparations can not be greater than the nuts from which they are made, though in the mechanical condition or in some other way the foods may be better fitted for ready assimilation. Furthermore, nut butters, and similar foods give a pleasant variety to the diet, and they are relished by many who would not care for the unprepared nuts.

Though less subject to contamination than other foods, nuts should be handled and stored under good conditions, and especially should be protected from dampness and insect enemies.

The Role of Potatoes in the National Diet.

The potato stands next to the cereals as the most important food of northern nations, according to the department of agriculture. In Germany this is particularly true, for the per capita consumption is 7.3 bushels, while ours is estimated at 2.6 bushels. An interesting study of Behrend shows that the consumption of potatoes in Germany stands in inverse ratio to the wealth and social status of the people. The well-to-do people there use 2.6 bushels each per annum, the peasantry 8.5 bushels, and the laborers in western Germany 12.3 bushels, while in the eastern provinces the per capita consumption of the poorer laborers is 15.7 — each per year.

Potato Starch. A certain quantity of potato starch is used in this country for sizing in cotton mills, for which purpose it is preferred to corn starch, says the department of agriculture. There has been in the country produced an average of 20,000,000 pounds of potato starch annually and large annual importations from Germany have been made. In addition, in 1910 there were imported 10,000,000 pounds of starch and 4,424,200 pounds of potato dextrin.

The manufacture of starch from potatoes in the United States is at present confined to the utilization of culls and of potatoes unfit for storage or shipment because of partial infection with tuber rot. The margin of profit is not large, in spite of the fact that the factories are able to run only six weeks in the year, and the interest and other overhead charges are therefore high. It seems possible to make some economic improvements in this system by introducing new factory methods, and the quantity of potatoes used could be increased, especially in districts remote from the markets, where a more rigid sorting should be practiced before shipment and all inferior potatoes kept at home. This would not only tend to reduce freight charges, but would give the consumer in a distant market a grade of potatoes which would waste much less in preparation for the table and for which a relatively higher price could be paid than for the present unsorted shipments. There is a possibility also that a method may be worked out for drying, culling and surplus potatoes on the farm and the dried product later used for starch making. The total quantity required would, nevertheless, not make a large impression on a surplus potato crop.

IMPROVING WITH FERTILIZER

Increase of 900 Per Cent. Result of Proper Fertilization Obtained With Apple Crop.

The illustration shows two rows of Rome Beauty apple trees on thin land. The barrels contain the respective crops of fertilized and unfertilized rows. The row to the left was fertilized in 1911 with five pounds each of nitrate of soda and acid phosphate per tree, and the dried product later used for starch making. The row to the right is unfertilized. Mulching, spraying and culture were exactly the same on both rows. An increase of 900 per cent. was the result and this is due alone to fertilization, and was obtained within eighteen months of the first application, the barrel crop being that of 1912.

DRAINAGE OF POULTRY YARD

Important Subject to Be Considered in Locating Yard and House—Southern Slope Is Best.

By E. R. MILLER. The drainage is a very important subject to be considered in locating the house and yard for the poultry. The ground should be well drained by sloping to the south.

A yard on a southern slope drains off quickly after a rain, and it gets the full benefit of all the sunshine, consequently it is always dry. The direct rays of the sun are great purifiers and destroyers of disease germs, and this helps greatly in keeping the chicken out of the flock. When the yard is well drained, the chickens are compelled to run about in a muddy yard and keep their feet clean and healthy, the fankers become dry, and in cold weather they become chilled. They will not lay under such conditions.

Disposers is also a direct cause of loss and all its kindred ailments, as well as reproduction.

In warm weather a wet yard soon becomes filthy, and is a good place for the growth of all kinds of disease germs.

If your poultry yard is already built in such a place, it will pay you to move it to a south slope. If this is not possible, then haul dirt and raise the ground in the yard high enough so that it will be dry clear away on the south side to let the sun in, and make some kind of a windbreak on the north.

Don't Market Cansons Too Early. An expert says that the one great mistake in raising capons is in marketing them too early, and not having enough fat on them. After caponing, keep them moving until they reach full size, which will take from ten to twelve months, then fat them.

This can be done in two weeks by shutting in a small, dark coop and feeding three times a day all they will eat of cornmeal and middlings, mixed with milk.

Water for Stock.

In giving any kind of live stock water in the winter that causes them to shiver, is a loss. A little shivering prevents a day's growth.

DAIRY

DAIRY COWS FED REGULARLY

Animals Soon Become Accustomed to Routine and Milk Comes More Freely—Keep Barns Clean.

By T. L. HARRIS.

If cows are fed at stated intervals, they will not worry for food until the time for feeding arrives. If it is then given to them in proper quantity, they will eat and lie down, chew the cud and sleep or rest contentedly until time for another feed. First give the grain mixture, and milk the cows while they are eating it. This routine is recommended because, with some cows, the milk comes more freely while they are eating that portion of their ration which has the most relish. Cured roughage should be fed after milking because it fills the air in the rumen with dust. Successful feed, like silage and roots should also be fed after milking, because of the odor that it gives. Feeding twice a day will bring better returns than more frequent and wasteful feeding. Give half the concentrates and half the roughage in the morning, and half in the evening. Cows will soon become accustomed to this routine. In the winter they should be allowed to spend the day in the stall, and for two or three hours about mid-day they should not be disturbed. Turning them out into the yard, or giving them access to a straw-stock or field of corn stubs, will cause them to shrink in milk, no matter how much or how well they may be fed in the morning and evening. No more feed should be given them than they will eat up. The managers should be absolutely clean and free from any feed, during the day and night.

DAIRY FARMING IN EUROPE

Much Attention Is Paid to Artistic Appearance of Farms—Everything Kept Neat and Orderly.

In many sections of Europe where dairying is carried on extensively the greater part of the land is owned by men who care quite as much for beauty as for profit. In consequence of which great attention is paid to the artistic appearance of the farms, and much pride is taken in keeping everything neat and orderly. No fence corners or hedge rows are left to grow up with weeds, no machinery is allowed to stand in the fields. There is a network of winding macadamized roads lined on both sides with hedges and trees, and leading through the fields in every direction are footpaths. The heather-covered hills, vine-clad cottages and fine cattle dotting the meadows make a beautiful picture—none too soon forgotten.

FEED YOUR COWS WELL.

"It sometimes happens that farmers are in possession of extra good cows, but not realizing the amount of feed required by cows giving a large yield they are soon allowed to shrink in milk because the feed given does not provide sufficient nutriment. While cows in good condition can, for a time, give more milk than the feed provides, by drawing upon the fat stored in the body, yet if the grain is not gradually increased as the cows lose in body weight there will soon follow an abnormal shrinkage in milk flow and also a decrease in the quality of milk yielded."

Buying Dairy Cows. When you buy dairy cows you do not want beef animals, for they are inclined to lay on flesh instead of giving value received for their feed and care in the bucket.

Value of Alfalfa.

A ton of alfalfa hay, cut when the first few blossoms appear and cured to leave all the leaves, is equal for milk production to a ton of bran, and costs about one-third as much.

REGIMENTAL COLORS IN PAWN

Odd Experiences of British Emblems Once Greatly Prized by Those Who Carried Them.

The discovery of the long lost colors of the old 50th regiment in the garden of Funtington house, near, Chichester, is a reminder of the strange fates that have befallen so many of these glorious military emblems, London Times remarks. The colors of the 51st foot—since disbanded—were captured by American pirates during the war of independence and hidden away in Ireland; the colors of the 26th regiment were deliberately burnt prior to the surrender at Saratoga to prevent their capture by the enemy.

At Berge-op-Zoom the Royal Scots, to save their precious colors from falling into French hands, sank them deep in the river, though the enemy later fished them out; and when the second battalion of the 8th foot was disbanded at Portsmouth in 1816 the colors were cut into small pieces and distributed among the ranks.

One of the colors of the 1st Northamptonshire regiment, which had been carried right through the peninsular campaign, was discovered some years ago in a pawn broker's shop, though how it got there is a mystery to this day. A similar uncertainty attaches to a pair of old colors of the 2d Border regiment, which were recovered from a London pawn broker, who was offering them for sale, by Lord Archibald Campbell in 1888.

Four years later four colors which had accompanied the Gloucester regiment in Egypt and in the peninsula were recovered from a pawn broker. It appeared that, having been bequeathed by an old colonel of the regiment to his son, they were ultimately secured by a servant, who, falling on evil times, pawned them for a few shillings.

SEVILLE STILL HAS CARMENS

Thousands of the Picturesque and Charming Cigarette Girls Are Employed There.

The most astonishing building in the Calle de San Fernando is the immense two story baroque edifice that covers more ground than the cathedral plus the court of oranges, and serves the purpose of a tobacco factory. The portal is adorned with busts of Columbus and Fernando Cortes, and I wish very much that we had had time to go inside and see these many cigarette girls at their work. As we passed I thought again of Carmen and the story of Elvira's fantastic Sevillian "opera," for about 5,000 Carmens, or "cigareras," like Carmen, are employed in this factory, and attire themselves today in gay gowns and fascinating mantillas, with flowers tucked under their ears and coquettishly placed in their hair, very like the heroine of the opera. Like the opera, also, adjoining the factory are the artillery barracks, and one imagines it to be quite possible that some impressionable Don Jose should be fascinated by some of these pliant and pretty Carmens.—From "Royal Spots of Today," by Mrs. Tryphosa B. Batcheller.

See Value of Exercise.
There is no doubt but that exercise is a good thing for those who do not get it, but to many the daily use of dumb-bells, weights and similar apparatus grows irksome, the reason being, a lack of stimulation owing to the fact that the person taking the exercise sees nothing accomplished as the result of the work and time spent. Gladstone preferred to work at the woodpile, and here and there was the constantly maintained interest of seeing the pile increase after each period of action. The same has been accomplished in a real up-to-the-moment manner by a French inventor who has taken an exercising machine which is rather familiar in the shape of a bicycle on a permanent stand, and has combined this with a storage battery. When the various members of the family are taking their daily exercise on this machine they are storing up current to be used in the form of illuminant after nightfall.

Architects Held to Account.
It is unusual for a house, however small, to be erected in France without the service of an architect, who not only draws the plans, but actually superintends the work. Usually it is he who orders the building material and assumes himself that its quality is up to specifications and requirements. The contractor and his workmen perform their duties in conformity with the architect's orders, and the latter, who is usually a man of capital, advances the funds required in order that the contractor need not wait for payment until the building is completed. Moreover, the French law imposes on the architect a serious responsibility, since he, as well as the contractor, is responsible for all defects of construction during a period of ten years.

Lame-Sickness Caused by Plants.
An investigation of the South African disease known as lameness, or lame-sickness, suggests that it is due to a special plant poison that is generated under abnormal conditions in grasses or other plants that are normally harmless. Its development seems to be associated with unusual weather and soil experiences, which summer drought is important. Through such conditions withering would favor the formation of the poison, and this gives explanation for the common belief that the disease results from eating withered plants.

HEART WOUNDS NOT FATAL

Modern Surgeon Operates, and the Results Have Been Satisfactory Almost Beyond Belief.

There seems to be no limit to the wonderful things modern surgery can accomplish. Recently Dr. Francis Stewart of Philadelphia reported five cases in which he had been obliged to sew up the heart after stab wounds. All the patients recovered. One of them lived for five years and then succumbed to pulmonary tuberculosis. The difficulties of this operation call for wonderful technique and skill. One man lay for three days and when swept into the circulation the patient dies as if shot through the brain. Constant motion of the organ calls for a quick eye and rapid, steady work. It is interesting to note that at the present time one-half of all such cases coming into the hospitals are saved.

A Peruvian surgeon restored heart action in a case of actual death. The patient was killed by an automobile. Believing that something could be done the surgeon ordered the patient to be put upon the operating table and an hour after death had been pronounced. The chest cavity was opened in 50 seconds. A pint of blood was found in the heart sac from a wound in the heart muscle two and a half inches long. This blood was removed, the heart was sewn up, and massage was begun. In a few minutes the pulse was felt at the wrist. The heart continued to beat more than half an hour and then stopped. It was found at autopsy that injuries to other organs had been too great for recovery, which would have been certain had the heart alone been involved.

ENDED SUPREME COURT LEAK

Legal Body Forced to Take Precautions for the Safeguarding of Its Decisions.

"Yes, it is true that supreme court decisions leaked in the old days," remarked on old-time Wall Street broker. "I remember a certain important suit about 20 years ago. It was the great case of those days, as big as its way as the Standard Oil and Tobacco suits of recent date. A week before the decision came down the son of one of the judges came into my office, and I told him that of the nine judges, one would decide 'so and so,' and we would refrain from any opinion, and the remaining seven would make a decision 'so and so.'"

"He smiled and went away. Shortly after the decision was rendered, and the matter had turned out as I had foretold, this young man came back to the office. He said his father was greatly worried over the leak in the court, and asked if I could help him trace the source of my information. I told him what I know. That one of the official supreme court stenographers had been selling advance copies of the decisions to a very prominent broker of that time. What this broker paid for his information, of course, we do not know, but it was established that I was correct as to where the weak spot was in the court."

"Since then every decision of the supreme court has been written in long hand (one copy), thus making it absolutely impossible for an outsider to get news in advance. This explains, in part, why it now takes so long for the court to announce its decisions."

Replacing Delusions.

If the popular imagination is to become heated to a point where it becomes an attempt at abduction in every "dizzy feeling" or momentary illness suffered by a young woman in a public place, it will be unsafe for a man to offer the slightest civility to any person of the other sex whom he does not happen to know. To assist a woman into a car will subject him to suspicion, and to go to her aid if she faints in the street will render him liable to arrest as a white-slaver.

Anatole France says somewhere that one result of getting rid of old delusions is that they are often replaced with others of worse aspect. This present phase of popular credulity on the subject would deserve to be regarded as silly if it were not for the tendency of an exaggeration of the famed dangers of the evil to confuse the public mind about its real dangers.

Why Parsons Might Not Hunt.

An English clergyman may shoot birds without outraging popular sentiment, why not, then, ride after a fox? To find the answer we must probably go back to those old days when hard riding meant hard drinking, and when spiritual life was at a low ebb. The "hunting parson" came to be a type of cleric who habitually neglected his duties. It is a happy circumstance that in these days of hunting need no longer be a reproach because the greater reproach has been removed. A parson who does his work faithfully and well need not be regarded a few hours' gallop in leisure moments. Indeed, he can do it all the better for the exercise, and with respect for his spiritual teaching by gaining a reputation for manliness and pluck.

Croesus Preferred.

Two poets sat having a frugal glass. "I wish Burns and Poe were with us tonight," said one. "We could have a rollicking time." "I'd rather have Croesus here," said the other. "He could buy a few drinks. Those other fellows wouldn't have a cent."

Mrs. Louise Stephenson and W. L. Sturgeon entertained quite a number of guests last Saturday and Sunday.

The Boone County Medical Society met with Dr. Menefee Wednesday evening at which there was a large attendance. All spent a very pleasant and beneficial evening.

Mrs. Ruth Roberts of this place received word last week that her son Charles Roberts was dangerously ill in St. Louis. Mr. Roberts left here several years ago for the West.

The "Rook" Club met with Mrs. A. R. Edwards on Wednesday evening. There was a very large attendance. All spent a very enjoyable evening after which there was a very delightful spread.

Birds Live to Eat. It is lucky for men that they do, or if the birds did not breakfast man would not dine. Some years ago a French scientist told the world that if all the birds should die suddenly man would have only a year's life left to him. The Frenchman proved his point to the satisfaction of other scientists, but laymen laughed and the usual proportion of them kept on killing.

It always has been my belief that the sin of gluttony had its beginning with other sins in the garden. Adam probably saw a robin picking away at a cherry and instantly said, "The bird is a thief." Then Eve very likely saw a scarlet tanager sunning itself and straightway coveted its plumage. So it is that the hand of man and the head of woman have been raised against the bird ever since.

Why should not a robin or a cedar bird or a catbird or any other kind of bird eat an occasional cherry? Their dinners of cut worms, caterpillars and other things noxious make cherry dessert their due.

How much does a bird eat? Take the robin as an example. It eats at certain seasons of the year about double its weight in insects and worms every day. A man in order to satisfy an equally well developed appetite would have to eat about 300 pounds of food all told at his thrice-daily meals. To do this he would need to be thirty feet tall, ten feet thick from front to back and about five feet across the shoulders.

The bird's dinner hour begins at sunrise and ends at an hour after sunset. Any legislation looking to the shortening of its hours of labor, which are coincident with its hours of eating, would bring famine. All the song birds and all the silent birds gave their service to man and the world for pay for it except to be let alone.

And the farmer who is wise will let the old shotgun rust before he turns it on his best friends.—Edw. B. Clark, in Country Gentleman.

STATE NEWS.

Why can't Olive Hill have electric lights? Morehead with a few more than half as many people, has near 1,000 lights, and owns the plant, too—the city; and the only street lights Olive Hill has is out of his shin in the dark and curses blazes till he gets home.—Olive Hill Progressive.

Two fine specimens of Hancock county corn are to be seen in the Hancock Deposit Bank. One is of several ears of differing grain grown by R. K. Blake on Caneey creek bottom land. His average yield was seventy bushels to the acre. The other was grown by Thos. Glover from seed produced by a winner in the Boys' Corn Club contest of last year.

Both are prominent farmers, and each is satisfied with the correctness of scientific findings. As to improved corn cultivation.—Hancock Clarion.

It will be remembered that last summer during the protracted drought 40-cent tobacco was common talk. Grant Dayton, a tenant on D. Deming's land, grew an inferior crop, even for the season. One day when things looked a cerulean tint Grant Dayton made him an offer of 11 cents straight, which he had the good sense to accept. The tobacco was put on the loose leaf market and brought an average of six cents, leaving Dayton's account of $150 on the wrong side of the ledger.—Mt. Olive Advance.

Progress turns into its fifty-eighth volume with a God bless for its friends and patrons and with an increasing desire to serve them better than ever before in its long history. Few papers in Kentucky are older than the Progress, and fewer still have been under the same uninterrupted management as long. For twenty-eight years the present editor and publisher has conducted the paper and directed its expressions. During that period of time many have been born and died, much history has been written and notable changes at home and abroad have taken place.—Trenton Progress.

We see a few who are leaving their manure and tobacco stalks to rot in the rain, why men with good sense and poor land will do these foolish things we cannot tell. No wonder they complain of hard times. They will always have hard times if they practice such extravagance and waste.

Frankfort, January 17.—Attorney General Garnett today said hold-over members of the Senate will receive the same per diem as the new members of the General Assembly, $10, notwithstanding the fact that the compensation has been raised from $5 to $10 a day during their term of office.

Attorney General Garnett, in an opinion given State Auditor Bosworth, holds that the word "salary" as used in section 235 of the Constitution, the section which says, "salaries of public officers shall not be changed during the term for which they are elected," does not include "per diem" as used in section 42 of the Constitution, which says, "members of the General Assembly shall receive from the State Treasury compensation for their services which shall be $5 the day during their attendance, provided that the same may be changed by law, but no change shall take effect during the session at which it is made."

We also congratulate the people on the great improvement of our schools during the last few years. Resolved, also that we urge the Fiscal Court to reconsider its action in fixing the salary of the County Supt. of Schools at $700, when we consider the great importance of this office, and the fact that it is a full-time position, involves an expense of some $300 or $400 per year and a high educational qualification, $700 is not fair compensation and such policy will not encourage capable men to seek the office.

Wrap the head and each bird in paper, so that any blood which may be left in the head will not come in contact with the body of the fowl and soil it. In some cases the whole bird is wrapped in wax paper.

Start a layer in the bottom of the box—take each bird—separately—and fold the head to one side, and place it in the box with the head up. Continue in this way until the bottom layer is filled. Put in the upper layer the same way, except that the head is in the middle and the side of the breast is up.

It is a good plan to establish a permanent trade with some commission firm, meat dealer or large hotel, to supply them with poultry. This will insure a better price than when shipped only occasionally.

Poultry should be sent so as to be on the road the least possible time. The cases, when shipped, should be plainly marked for whom and from whom they are; the number of birds in the case, and the weight.

SEASONS TO DESTROY WORMS

Peach and Apple Tree Borers May Be Best Eradicated in the Fall or Early in the Spring.

The fall and early spring are the two best seasons for destroying these worms. If not killed they will in a year or two completely girdle, and thus destroy the tree. The most effectual method to destroy them is to dig away the earth from around the base of each tree to the depth of six or eight inches, scrape the bark, clean and insert the end of a wire into their burrow and kill them.

If the worm cannot be found use a sharp-pointed knife and cut a narrow strip of the bark lengthwise of the trunk; he may usually be found just inside the bark. Examine each tree closely, kill them, then rub in rosin soap to fill up the wound.

The same means should be taken against the peach tree grub.

After the trees are wormed and dug around pack about one peck of wood or coal ashes around the base of each tree and allow this to remain until late in the summer. This prevents the beetles from depositing their eggs in the soft bark at the surface of the ground, the place usually selected. The fall is the best time to scrape the green moss off the trunk and larger limbs. A short-handled hoe, ground sharp, is an excellent little scraper. The young green bark should not be injured. After scraping wash the larger limbs and trunk of each tree with warm water and soft soap. Hard wood ashes may be used instead of soap. If ashes cannot be had tie pack around the trees, use slacked lime.

USEFUL RACK FOR FEED LOT

Vertical Slats Just Wide Enough to Permit Stock to Reach Through Are of Great Convenience.

In feeding cattle corn fodder or stover, the farmer will do well to provide a suitable rack to hold the feed racks provided with vertical slats only wide enough apart to permit the stock to reach through, as a large convenience. Thus the stalks are prevented from being pulled out of the rack and trampled under foot, making an unsightly litter in the feed lot.

Guard Against Vermin.
Hens should be dusted with insect powder occasionally, but the presence of a good dust bath will make these necessary occasions far fewer. Mix about one pound of powdered sulphur with each bushel of dust for the best results.

Individual Cow Best.
It is the individual cow in the dairy that helps along with the profits, and not the name.

Importance of Farm Horse.
The farm horse fills a more important place in production than any other animal.

RETAIN THE SOIL MOISTURE

Conservation of Water is Quite Important Factor in Growing Large Crops of the Small Fruits.

Conservation of soil moisture I regard as the most important of all the factors having to do with the production of large crops of small fruits. Under present methods the question of weeds does not concern me at all, for in the process of ideal maintenance tillage weed growth is suppressed in its infancy. The only time that weed growth is likely to prove a factor of any considerable consequence is during seasons of extremes in precipitation and, in the case of strawberries, during the blooming and fruiting seasons, says a writer in the Horticulturist.

During the first years of my experience as a grower of strawberries I thought that the one great purpose of cultivation was to kill weeds. Since that time the weed question has been eliminated as a factor of importance in fruit-growing operations.

Where the dust mulch is zealously maintained there is little chance for weeds. A few may escape, but such are easily disposed of.

The plan or methods of culture followed has much to do with the ease or difficulty of maintaining an efficient earth mulch. That method which permits of the stirring of the greatest amount of surface with horse-drawn tools is the methods the most to be desired.

It is essential that this mulch be maintained close around each individual plant, for if this is not done the aggregate area thus left open to surface evaporation is considerable.

Then, too, the moisture content of the soil directly under the mulched surface is considerably reduced by capillary action of water toward the dried soil under the unmulched surface.

Close around the plants the soil should not be stirred to a greater depth than one inch. One-half even will work wonders in conserving soil moisture.

How frequently should cultivation be given? This depends somewhat upon the nature of the soil, and frequency of showers. As a rule, once a week will be sufficient. In case of showers, the ground should be gone over as soon as the soil is dry enough to permit of cultivation. Where showers are of daily or frequent occurrence this rule cannot be followed. It then becomes a question of judgment, with an element of luck, perhaps, as to which shower is to be the last.

JACK FOR THE HEAVY WAGON

One Described and Illustrated Fills the Bill for Lightness and Also for Strength.

As it is difficult to get a jack strong enough for the heavy wagons without it being so very heavy, the one described, fills the bill for lightness and strength.

One piece, 2 by 8 inches—30 inches long.

One piece, 2 by 6 inches—30 inches long.

One piece, 2 by 4 inches—40 inches long.

One piece of No. 9 wire 5 feet long.

Two 20d nails to hold the wire to the sides of the upright piece.

One iron bolt three-quarters by 6 1/2 inches to hold the lever.

Two 2 by 2 inch mortises are cut in the 2 by 8, 12 inches from the front end. Tenons are cut on the upright 2 by 6 to fit them. The nails are driven in to the side of the upright piece to hold the wire, the bolt is put through the mortise and the lever and if the grease is handy you are ready to grease your wagon.

ONE REASON FOR FEW EGGS

Continuous and High Production Depends Largely on Supply of Green Succulent Feeds.

(By E. J. MILLER.)

One reason why so many farmers get so few eggs in the late fall and during the winter is that they do not provide their flock with green feed during these seasons.

A continuous and high production of both milk and eggs depends in a large measure upon a constant supply of green, succulent feed for the animals producing them.

Rye is one of the cheapest and best green feeds for these purposes that can be grown.

Selling Timothy Hay.

On some farms it would be a good business operation to sell off the best timothy and horse hay and buy standing grass of the lower grade to be cut and cured for the cattle. The crop is so good in many localities that a great deal of this meadow and brook grass is for sale at very low prices, farmers having enough of the better grass to fill their barns and not caring to stack the lower grades.

Humane Man.

'The humane man is comfortable when his stock is comfortable, and when they are ill at ease he is in the same condition.

FIND GINGER A HELP

HOUSEWIVES WELCOME CONDEMENT AT THIS SEASON.

Nothing Better for Desserts During Between-Season Lulls—Preserved or Canned It Will Be Found Equally Acceptable.

There are several between-season lulls every year when fresh fruits are not at their best. In the late autumn there is a period when peaches, grapes, and pears have passed their prime, and oranges, grapefruit, apples, and nuts have not yet reached their peak. Then the housekeeper and cook must get their wits to work to give their menus flavor. Preserved ginger helps solve the problem, so far as desserts are concerned.

Ginger cream is one of the good things to make with this candied fruit. The ingredients needed for it are a cupful of milk and a cupful of cream, half an ounce of gelatin, the yolks of three eggs, two ounces of sugar, a little lemon jelly, two ounces of butter, and a half cup of preserved ginger, some diced candied fruits, and half a gill of ginger syrup.

If you use preserved ginger, drain off the liquid in which it is preserved. If you use candied ginger, soak it for half an hour in just enough water to cover it, and then simmer it gently for fifteen minutes. Drain and use this syrup and use the drained ginger where candied or preserved ginger is called for.

Melt the jelly and pour it, with the candied fruits, in the bottom of a mold. Tip the mold from side to side until the jelly hardens, so that the ginger will be held in place evenly over the bottom of the mold. Heat the milk in a double boiler and pour it slowly over the egg yolks, beaten.

Then thicken this custard in the double boiler. Remove it from the fire and add the sugar and the ginger, and the lemon jelly. Stir gently. Cool it. Whip the cupful of cream, add the ginger, cut in small pieces, and stand it aside until it is almost set. Then pour it in the mold and let it harden. Serve chilled.

Baked Onions.

Peel as many good firm, medium-sized onions as the size of your family will require. Put them into a saucepan and parboil until tender, not done. Remove and drain water carefully off. Then place in a deep baking dish, close enough together that they will just swell. Season with salt, pepper and a few thin slices of butter. Cover with a layer of finely rolled bread crumbs, drop two or three pieces of butter on these, pour over all one cup of cream or rich milk and bake until the crumbs are a rich golden brown. Bake in moderate oven. Remove and serve in individual dishes, either plain or with a white sauce.

Breakfast Rolls.

Sift one-half pound of white flour into a basin, add a pinch of salt and mix it with four ounces of corn flour, then rub in one and one-half ounces of butter. Next add a heaped-up teaspoonful of baking powder and mix again, then stir in gradually one and a half gills of milk and work quickly into a smooth dough. When sufficiently kneaded, divide the dough into even sized portions, and shape them on a floured board into rolls. Place them on a greased and floured baking tin and bake in a well heated oven for about twenty minutes. Brush over the rolls with milk a few minutes before they are finished baking.

Favorite Salad.

Turn boiling water over firm ripe tomatoes for a moment, then drain, then pour cold water over them and drain again. Slice cold beets and also the tomatoes. Arrange lettuce leaves on a platter. Then place a slice of beet on each leaf, and sprinkle with a little salt and pepper. Now place a slice of tomato on the beet, then another slice of beet, then tomato, then beet, until there are five slices with beet at top and bottom, seasoning each one. Just before serving pour over the salad dressing.

Orange Cream Filling.

Put into a cup the rind of one-half and the juice of one orange, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, and fill with hot water; strain and put on to boil; add one tablespoonful corn starch, wet with cold water and cook ten minutes, being careful not to scorch; beat yolk of one egg with two heaping tablespoonfuls sugar; of milk, two cups, with one teaspoonful butter; cook until butter is dissolved; let cool.

Chocolate Bars.

One cup granulated sugar, one-half cup butter, two eggs beaten light, one-half cup flour (full measure), one and one-half teaspoonfuls of milk, two squares chocolate melted, one-half cup walnuts chopped fine. Flavor with vanilla. Bake in dripping pan. Cut into bars when done.

Hard Sauce.

Cream one-half cup of butter until very soft, gradually add one cupful of sifted powdered sugar and continue beating until the sauce is light and creamy. Flavor with one teaspoonful of vanilla or lemon juice. Pipe on a fancy plate, chill and serve at table with hot puddings.

To Keep Parsley Fresh.

Instead of keeping parsley in water, which often turns it yellow, put it in an airtight jar in a cool place. This keeps it fresh for a much longer time.

EVER POPULAR CHOW-CHOW

How to Prepare Delicacy All Like With the Cold Meat of Luncheon or Supper.

Materials: English mustard, one-half pound; tumeric, one-half ounce; sugar, one-half gallon; brown sugar, one cup; oil, one-half cup; cauliflower, one head; tiny cucumbers, one quart; button onions, one quart.

Directions: Cover the cucumbers with strong salt water and let stand over night, drain and wash. Boil the cauliflower and onions separately. Put the vinegar into the kettle, mix the mustard and tumeric, then stir them into the hot vinegar and stir continuously until it begins to thicken, then add the remaining ingredients and pour this while hot over the cucumbers. Seal jars and medium-sized cucumbers may be used and cut in pieces, not sliced.

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Among the chair seats which come ready to adjust are those of leather, leatherette, wood or cane. Each has some points to be noted in its use, and none is difficult to fasten into place.

Custard bowls is the name given to the pretty low blue and white bowls, which are quite as nice for bread and milk, or berries and cereal, as for custard.

To remove iron rust from white material wet the goods with lemon juice, rub on salt and put out in the sun. If the first application fails, try it again.

If salt fish is required for immediate use it will freshen much more quickly if soaked in milk instead of in water. Sour milk will answer as well as sweet.

Mix equal polish with equal parts of household ammonia and turpentine and apply to the coal stove; rub it with a soft woolen cloth.

A porcelain sink can be quickly cleaned with paraffin. Dip a flannel lightly into the paraffin and rub the sink till all stains are removed, then thoroughly wash it with soda water.

About Paprika.

Now that paprika is becoming so much used it is apropos to pass on a hint given by a man who is a connoisseur. He says paprika should be spread out on a paper and left in the sun for three days, which brings out its true flavor, making it far more appetizing. Nearly all cooks are now using it in French dressing. A bit sprinkled on cream cheese is delicious in brown bread sandwiches; and what could be nicer than a meaty baked potato, that has been baked open enough to put inside a big lump of butter and a generous sprinkling of paprika, all so quickly done that it is—must be—served piping hot.

Brown Mushroom Sauce.

Open a can of French mushrooms, turn into a bowl and let sit one hour. Just before cooking the steak, melt four tablespoons of butter, add two tablespoons of flour, stir and cook till a dark brown, then add one cup of stock if you have it; if not, one cup of water and the liquor of the mushrooms, season with salt, pepper, pinch of sugar, one tablespoonful of table sauce, one tablespoonful of tomato catsup, one tablespoonful of sherry, and if you use water take a piece of butter the size of an egg. Add mushrooms, put back on stove to heat, but do not cook them, as that makes them tough.

Cucumber Sauce.

A new use for cucumbers is in a sauce which may be made in quantity and kept to serve from time to time with cold meats and fish. With cucumbers at their best, now is a good time to try this. Use 12 large green cucumbers, one onion, half a teaspoonful of red pepper and one teaspoonful of salt. Chop the onion and cucumbers and squeeze the water out of the latter in a piece of cheesecloth. Add salt and pepper and also one cup of hot vinegar. Mix all thoroughly and bottle in glasses with paraffin over the top.

Cream Salmon.

One quart of milk or half milk and half water, come to a boil, then thicken this with three tablespoonfuls flour or cornstarch which you have mixed thin with a little water before adding to the boiling milk; let come to a boil, then remove from fire and add one tablespoonful butter, salt to taste and one shake of pepper, then add one can of salmon and serve. Never boil after salmon has been added. Shredded codfish is very good if used in place of salmon.

Resolets.

Chop fine some cold lamb or mutton, season and add half as much bread crumbs as there is meat; moisten with a well-beaten egg or a little thickened yolk; press into small, egg cups, turn them out into a baking pan; put a little bit of beef dripping or butter on the top of each resolet and bake in a hot oven about twenty minutes. Serve with thickened gravy or tomato sauce.

Keeping Mint Fresh.

Whenever you have any mint leaves left over never throw them away, but keep them fresh to use again in the following manner: Sprinkle the mint well with water; then roll in a well-dampened cloth. This will keep it as fresh as when bought.

German Pan Cakes.

To each egg take one tablespoonful of flour, a pinch of salt, a pinch of baking powder and add enough milk so it will pour easily into the pan. Make about as thick as griddle cakes.

Forty Years Ago.

The sun was titling far to the west and shadows were reaching far to the east, the natural result of a day's long tug. John Koaler had succeeded in tearing himself loose from the kindly environments of Union. The day had been an eventful one in John's life. It was fraught with adventure and filled with food for thought and its likely thoughts have lingered in his mind for these many years. In all probability that day's recollection are as an oasis in the most barren fields of old age, made like unto a desert by rheumatism, &c.

John went with elated step and buoyant spirits westward as the crow flies toward Hathaway, and as he strode along his thoughts were interrupted by a gentleman coming onto the road half mile west of town. The gentleman was perhaps 60 years old and active for his age, so he adjusted his step and went on with him for another half mile. He spoke of the beautiful day, hoping more would follow. He was too well bred to manifest any unusual feeling in the matter, but being interested in the world and any fragments of its population that happened his way, he soon learned out the drift of John's purposes and intentions. At any rate it developed this fact: John Koaler had met Mr. Joel B. Frazier, a great friend and admirer of Mr. Robert K. Conner, the popular and successful merchant, corner High and Main streets, Union. Later on John found out that Mr. Frazier was a pioneer citizen, prosperous farmer, man of influence and ability, admired by all who knew him.

The sun continued to go down and John continued to go on until he stood upon the high ground overlooking Hathaway, the grand canyon city of Boone county. Looking down into the quiet village one might guess there was "nothing doing," but when John got there he found people engaged in all kinds of peaceful occupations, such as store keeping, cooking, milking, wood cutting, &c. Then as now the citizens were polite, so all needed information was soon obtained about where Mr. Adams lived. As the sun was losing its identity and force of character by hiding behind one of the prominent hills that grow and flourish along the banks of Riddell's Run creek, the home of Mr. Adams was sighted soon after John stood in the presence of Mr. Adams. John's presence did not seem out of the ordinary to Mr. Adams, for he was building a new house and, of course, was expecting most anything to turn up at most any time.

John cordially and invited him to come in. Well there are times in a fellow's life when these simple words spoken in earnest and with a kindly smile thrown in for good measure, that they touch the innermost recesses of one's soul and make great chunks of gratitude jump up into one's throat. John might say "thanks," I will with more emphasis than any words he uttered that day to say the least.

The facts are John was a long ways from home, four hundred miles at the lowest estimate, and he was tired, hungry and footsore, so it is easy to see what charm these words had for him. Of course he figured that once he was in there would be a long chance of staying in. All his life he had been a regular Kentucky hospitality had no limit when once offered and the truth of this teaching was fully verified before John left the home of Mr. Adams. Uncle John McAtee was there with his son, James, Theo. Chambers, of Walton, and his father, were there too and anyone familiar with this quartette of genial souls will conclude there was no chance to get lonesome, so look out.

The One-Horse Farmer.

He will ride around a week looking for a $2.00 pig.

He will sprain his back lifting something to show how strong he is.

He will pay $3.00 for a new bridle and then let the calf chew it to pieces before Sunday.

Stock will get in and destroy his crop at a place in his fence, he has put off fixing for six months.

He will complain of hard times and then tear his pants climbing a fence where a gate ought to be.

He will get all the neighbors to help get a cow out of the barn, and then let her die for want of attention.

He will alarm the neighbors by getting up two hours before day and sit around and not go to work before sun-up.

He will ridicule the mechanism of corn planter, and then go and mash his thumb nailing a board on the fence.

He will talk all Sunday on what he knows about farming when ride around the neighborhood Monday looking for seed potatoes.

He will go to town Saturday and come back with fifty cents worth of coffee, a paper of pins and a dollar's worth of chewing tobacco.

He will go in his shirt sleeves all day to show how much cold he can stand, and then return home at night and occupy two-thirds of the fire place till bed time.

He is economical; he will save ten cents out of axle grease and ruin the spindle of a wagon. He won't subscribe for a paper, but will borrow one from his friend and forget to return it.

NOW UP TO GARNETT.

The Attorney General is Directed By Senate to Take Action Against State Board of Health.

By petition through the Senate a resolution directing Attorney General Garnett to "take such action as he may deem proper to recover from the proper parties all sums, if any, which have been improperly paid out of the State Board of Health." The Senate "Probe" Committee, headed by Senator Walker C. Hall, of Covington, took its first decisive step looking to the correction of alleged faulty conditions. The resolution was offered by Senator Hall at the direction of the other members of the committee and was adopted unanimously.

Preliminary to the introduction of the resolution the "Probe" Committee submitted what it termed "a partial report," in which it was set forth that "the late Legislature by resolution instructed the State Board of Health to report its findings to His Excellency, the Hon. James B. McCreary, Governor of Kentucky."

"Said investigation has been made, and placed upon the desk of each member of the General Assembly." The report reads: "It is a most comprehensive report, fearlessly drawn and ably edited, setting out in full the income from what sources derived; the expenditures and to whom paid."

"Among the many items referred to in said report, your committee makes reference to the item under the head 'recapitulation of amounts due the State,' on page 66 of said report, which amounts, in the aggregate, to $2,883.18, and recommends that the State's legal department be instructed to investigate same, and take such steps in the matter as may, to said department, seem to be proper."

It is recommended in the report that a bill be enacted authorizing the removal of the offices of the State Board of Health from Bowling Green to Frankfort, and a bill to that effect was introduced at the Senate last Thursday afternoon by G. G. Speer, of Frankfort, a member of the Senate "probe" committee.—Oldham Era.

The owner refused to take the money.—Savilleville Cor. Georgetown News.

Was Not His Son.

Henderson, Jan. 21.—After paying for the shipment from Oklahoma City of a body supposed to be that of his son, preparing a grave and making all arrangements for the funeral, A. J. McMullin discovered that the body was not that of his son. The entire family had arrived from Marion and other points for the funeral, but all funeral arrangements were called off pending an investigation into the identity of the man. Mr. McMullin, who lives in Marion, had received a telegram relayed by phone saying that his son had died in Oklahoma City and asking for orders as to the disposition of the body. He received instructions to send the body of his son to Henderson to W. H. Kees, as he has a lot in the cemetery here.

Chairman O'Sullivan said: "The board did not make a longer contract for the reason that they are waiting any action that may be taken by the Legislature. The Kentucky Broom Co. formerly paid only 75 cents a day per man. This contract will begin February 1, and will run until May 15. "The board did not make a longer contract for the reason that they are waiting any action that may be taken by the Legislature. The Kentucky Broom Co. formerly paid only 75 cents a day per man. This contract will begin February 1, and will run until May 15. "The present price of 75 cents is the largest figure ever paid for convict labor in the Eddyville Penitentiary. This increase in price will net the State $6,200 more a year than secured under the old contract."

Riley Edwards, who farms on Mr. North's farm near Kidds store, found a large Indian pipe while plowing that will excite anyone's curiosity. It is made of some peculiar stone, and represents a bird in shape. It is about ten inches long and weighs three and three-fourths pounds. It must have been a pipe of peace, as it is large enough for several to smoke from at the same time.—Casey News.

BOONE CO. RECORDER

W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

Not much doing at the front in Mexico the past two weeks.

Lincoln county wants the Legislature to pass a bill for the guarantee of bank deposits.

Notwithstanding organized baseball is putting on a bold front the incursion into its ranks by the Federal league is worrying the magnates considerably.

A fist fight between Representative Johnson of Kentucky and John R. Shields, an attorney, broke up a meeting of the house committee at Washington on District of Columbia, one day last week.

Four men were blown to bits and more than a score injured by the explosion of a boiler in Horwick hall, The building which was the pride of Ottawa, Ont., and the scene of many exhibitions, was wrecked.

Cincinnati and Louisville each is making a lively fight for a regional bank under the new banking law passed recently by Congress. As they cover about the same territory one of them will be denied its request.

They are talking traction road again in Rising Sun. A gentleman was there a few days ago looking over the ground, his proposition being to build from Aurora to Vevay. No doubt but what Rising Sun will do her best.

When an alleged "blind tiger" in the dwelling of John Williams, colored, at Versailles, was raided, twenty-eight quart bottles of whisky, each wrapped separately in a piece of newspaper, were found in a bureau, in closets and in a woodshed.

That the enactment of a workmen's compensation law is inevitable, and that it would be wise for both employer and employee to get together and work for the passage of a law that will be fair to both labor and capital, was the sentiment expressed at a meeting in Louisville of the secretaries of building and trade exchanges.

The Democrats occupying positions in the Government Building in Covington, ought to have pride enough to replace the old rag that is floating over that edifice with a new flag. The remnant that clings to the flag staff is so dirty and dilapidated that it is hard to determine the nationality of the original. Come boys, run up a new flag.

It was announced before the legislature convened that the body would be composed of business men who would carefully guard the State's interest, working along economical lines, and in some directions it looks like it may make good in that respect, but when on the opening day an effort was made to create numerous new positions at big pay, that some of the members might fill them with relatives or particular friends, the taxpayers began to wonder if they are again at the mercy of a set of profligates.

Major W. Scott, Boone's member of the lower house of the General Assembly gave the Kentucky monster, "extravagant legislation," a jolt the first opportunity offered. At the threshold of the session a resolution was introduced authorizing the employment of considerable extra and unnecessary help at a large cost per day, on which resolution the Major voted "no" with a vim that startled the would-be raiders of the State treasury. The Major will be found throughout the session doing all that is in his power to keep the rats out of the crib.

A warship will be rushed to Cape Haitien to protect American lives and interests in the rebellion which now threatens to engulf all of Hayti and overturn the government Secretary Bryan requested the navy department to send a war vessel. The situation in Hayti is hourly becoming more critical, according to state department advices. The gunboat Nashville, now in Central America waters, is expected to be dispatched to Hayti at once. Official advices from Hayti indicate that the revolution which commenced only a few days ago is gaining force rapidly. Owing to the large number of Americans on the island, the state department desires to take action looking toward their safety and it is planned to keep at least one war vessel in Haytian waters until the rebellion is ended.

DELINQUENT TAXES.

Some of the county papers are calling attention to the small amount of delinquent taxes for which sales of property have been advertised in their counties, and when comparisons are made Boone county has about as few lists advertised as any county in the State, and the amount of these lists is only $199.10. This small delinquent list shows two things: That the people of Boone are prompt taxpayers and that they have had a good collector. Twenty-five years ago it was said of a man when elected Sheriff of Boone county "he will be collecting taxes the remainder of his days." In those days the Sheriff was elected for two years and generally reelected at the expiration of his first term, and to collect taxes he made a house-to-house canvass, and invariably had thousands of dollars due him on unpaid taxes when he retired from office although he had settled in full with both the county and State. Previous to the present system of collecting taxes very few who had been sheriff of this county knew what they had made out of the office, owing to the long list of delinquent taxes they had assumed. It was in those days that it required considerable nerve on the part of a man to want to be Sheriff, owing to the financial difficulties in which he was liable to be involved.

A CORRECTION.

A friend of the Recorder and a member of the Grange writes under date of January 12th as follows:

"I note your article in last week's Recorder with regard to the National Grange's attitude toward President Wilson and the Secretary of Agriculture, and am sending you the Journal of Proceedings of the National Grange. Kindly read the marked articles on the turned down pages, and if you find that you were mistaken, please publish in your paper a correction and give it the prominent place in the original statement. The treatment the Boy Corn Growers of Ohio, met at the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture and his protest from the Ohio people would tend to prove the National Grange's estimate of Mr. Houston not far wrong."

That part of the proceedings of the National Grange referred to in the above letter is found in the report of the Committee appointed to confer with President Wilson, and is as follows:

"We were impressed with his good intentions toward an agriculture, but his failure to grasp the true farmer spirit of the country was clearly manifested. Anybody else was hardly to be expected from his life work, his training and environment. All this work was frank and courteous and showed a genuine desire to do the very best he could for the farmer. We presented what we believed to be the Grange and the farmer's point of view as forcefully as we could, without urging specifically anyone for the place."

Along towards the close of the committee's report the following is found, although not marked by the Recorder's friend:

"When the cabinet list was announced I mentioned the name of David Franklin Houston as Secretary of Agriculture. That this appointment gave a distinct shock to every agricultural interest in the country can not be denied."

Probably the article for which the Recorder's Granger friend calls it upon the carpet is an exaggeration growing out of an interpretation of the last above quotation from the report of the National Grange Committee.

After the above report was made to the National Grange President Wilson expressed his appreciation of that body's endorsement of his Mexican policy, notwithstanding the distinct shock he had given every agricultural interest of the country.

The probe committee at Frankfort of which Senator Walker Hall, of Covington, is chairman, is showing that past legislatures have been decidedly reckless in making appropriations for State institutions. Smaller appropriation on the part of the legislature and better business administration on the part of the boards selected to manage these institutions will save, annually, very large sums of money. Too liberal appropriations for State institutions and incompetency on the part of their management are largely responsible for Kentucky's financial condition, and the question is what the legislature going to do about it?

An exchange truthfully remarks that "the deer too many people are killing in the winter will not cast their bread upon the waters unless assured before hand that it will return again in a few days a full grown sandwich, all trimmed with ham, butter and wrapped in a warranty deed for half the earth and a mortgage on the other half."

From every view point the farming class of this county is in better shape now than at any period since the civil war. More people own homes and little farms, more are free from the yoke of bondage inflicted by burdensome debts; more are becoming independent each year by making a comfortable living for their families, more are waking up to the necessity of giving their children better educational advantages, and wealth and contentment seem to prevail throughout the county. Let progress still be our watchword.

The body of an unknown negro man was found near Devon Tuesday morning. He had been shot in the mouth the bullet coming out at the back of the head. County Judge Cason was notified and he directed E. H. Tanner, of Florence, to hold an inquest and have the body interred. The man had evidently been dead several weeks as his nose and one ear were eaten off.

Argentine Butter.

New York, Jan. 22.—The first big shipment of Argentine butter, consisting of 2,000 boxes of sixty pounds each, was received here yesterday, and it is said, was one of the causes of yesterday's decline in the butter market. The butter cost about 29 cents laid down in New York, with all charges paid. New York will not consume all of it, as 100 boxes will be shipped to Chicago and 400 to Boston.

Another cargo of 5,000 boxes of Argentine butter is on the way here.

A dispatch from Washington, D. C., says:

"That Japan has extended both her moral and material support to Huerta has been conclusively proved, it is said. For some time this Government has been endeavoring to ascertain where Huerta obtained his military supplies. That he is well equipped with guns and ammunition the Administration has known. It was supposed he has been purchasing them in Europe, but where he obtained the money has been an unsolved mystery. It now is stated those supplies of war have been supplied, not by Japanese firms willing to take the risk of ultimate payment, but by the Japanese Government. Advices to this effect, the accuracy of which is not to be disputed, have been received in Washington."

Notwithstanding the constitution of Kentucky provides that a member of the General Assembly who rides on a free railroad pass shall forfeit his office, it is said there is a member of the House at Frankfort who has frequently, in the most brazen manner, announced to the members while in session that he rides on a free pass, and yet that member on two occasions of the assembling of the General Assembly has held up his hand and swore that he would support the constitution of Kentucky. A member who will violate his oath and then brag about it is not fit material for a lawmaker, and should have the rollers put under him a la Sulzer, of New York.

So everybody at Frankfort is happy! Nobody ever suspected St. Percy and St. Sam of ever being lobbyists and having anything to do with the legislature! And good-bye hangs his head over the sacred "dignity" of the House of Representatives!—C. J.

Local Happenings.

It is about time to burn that tobacco plant bed.

The Ohio river is unusually low for this season of the year.

The spring like weather last week caused many persons to contract colds.

The rain fall the past month has been light and water in some cisterns is scarce.

The maple sugar season is at hand. The old fashioned sugar camp is about a thing of the past.

Eggs are worth too much to take the risk of losing them by allowing a hen to try to hatch them.

Last Friday was a delightful spring day, but the weather could not last and that night it began raining.

That cold weather predicted for last Saturday and Sunday evidently thawed out before it reached here.

This week will exhaust twenty-seven of the sixty legislative days to which the session of the legislature is limited.

The road leading from Lima-burg to the Hebron pike is in a bad condition, and in places is nearly impassable.

Get that plow and harness ready for use. You want to get your corn land broken now as soon as possible.

Some are predicting a very severe ground hog winter this year, the prediction being based on the very mild winter so far.

Hume & Fowler brought out three more new Ford autos last week. They have a prospective buyer for each machine.

Cliff Hedges was in town one day last week with one of his trading animals and made it interesting for some of the boys.

The powers that be at Washington, D. C., designate Boone as one of Kentucky's blue grass counties. Some what of a compliment, eh!

The sales at the loose leaf tobacco warehouse this winter have been better than those made on the breaks at the city warehouses.

The parties who borrowed my buggy shafts will oblige me very much if they will return them.

R. S. CRISLER

When eggs are bringing the best prices your hens quit laying, and when butter is selling for close to fifty cents a pound your cows fail in their milk.

From the way some of the girls have been training in their hobble skirts, there ought to be some exciting contests in the way of sack racing at the county fairs this year.

The Nicholas county Board of Supervisors of tax and tax-payers summoned to appear before it to show cause why their lists of taxable property should not be increased.

Next Monday is county court and ground hog day, and judging next court day by several of the past it is here predicted his hogship will not gaze upon his shadow next Monday.

The Burlington Garage, Eddins & Jarrell, proprietors, has an advertisement in this issue. Considerable repairing has been done at the garage this month. Read the ad, and give the firm your work.

February is lamb month with most of the farmers, who would like to see the weather same as that which has prevailed this month, but for several years past the intense cold weather of the winter has come in February.

Card of Thanks—We desire to extend our thanks to the neighbors and friends for their kindness shown during the illness and death of our mother and grandmother.

Mrs. Eliza Walton and Children.

An automobile has had no business on the James T. Gaines hill on the Petersburg pike at Idle-wood the past two weeks. A long string of broken rock spread thereon has made that piece of road nearly impassable for auto travel.

The tentative increase resulting from the work of the county board of equalization as published in the Recorder before last week was $82,140. At its meeting last week the board recinded work to the extent of $7,590, leaving the next increase $54,550.

The fact that W. L. Kirkpatrick, one of the local grocers, shipped two large boxes of provisions to members of the Boone county colony in St. Petersburg, Fla., last week, must not be taken as proof that the colony is short on rations.

John Haley, of Devon, was in Burlington, last Saturday to place in the Recorder an advertisement for a large sale of personal property February 25th. Mr. Haley is one of the substantial men of his neighborhood, and his worth is fully appreciated by his neighbors, and he has the sympathy of all in his bereavement.

Rice-Corbin Wedding.

Miss Alma Carter Corbin, accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Corbin, of Erlanger, and Mr. Robert Perry Rice, son of W. H. Rice, of Florence, were quietly married at the home of the bride's parents last Saturday at 4:15 p. m. Rev. J. C. Taylor, pastor of the local Baptist church officiating in the presence of the bride's immediate family and the following invited guests: Miss Permelia Corbin, Mrs. M. J. Corbin, of Erlanger; Miss Ben Snyder and daughter, Miss Sadie Lee and James Robert Rice, of Florence, and Mrs. Anna Rice, of Cincinnati. Immediately following the ceremony the happy couple departed for Cincinnati which city they left that night via New Orleans for California, where they will spend the winter with the bride's uncles, Messrs. John and Barnett Rogers. They will return via Denver to St. Louis, and will be at home April 1st, in Florence. Mr. and Mrs. Rice have the best wishes of a host of friends.

Wants Two Petitions.

To the Voters and Taxpayers of Boone County: I understand Bro. Edgar Riley has in circulation a petition for the purpose of raising his salary as Superintendent of Schools. If he wants to be fair, why don't he put out two petitions, one for those opposed to same so each side will have a chance to show its wishes and what the majority of taxpayers think of the Fiscal Court's action? He knew at time of his election that his salary was fixed by the fiscal court and he should abide by same. Many taxpayers do several times the same amount of work at much less pay than he, why doesn't he resign and let some one else have the office, as I expect there are as competent men who would be glad to take the office at his salary.

F. M. CLECK.

A Big Turnpike Meeting.

A considerable number of those who have subscribed money for building the Hebron and Lima-burg pike met at the latter place last Saturday afternoon and it was found that the subscription papers call for $2,500 while several persons whose names are not carried by the papers have promised to give. The ladies in the territory mostly interested in the road are taking an active part and expect to make a hundred dollars or more for the road. There are about twenty who are interested to pike, and those who are leading in the work are confident that their effort will be successful, and the following officers were elected: R. L. Rouse, W. L. B. Rouse, H. S. Tanner, C. H. Youell, J. M. Craven.

Seriously Injured.

Last Thursday morning as H. G. Blanton, liveryman and undertaker at Erlanger, was driving a young animal attached to his buggy one of the buggy shafts dropped when the animal began kicking and whirled around, turning the buggy over. Mr. Blanton was caught beneath the vehicle and his collar bone and one shoulder blade were broken and other injuries inflicted. The party who was riding with Mr. Blanton jumped out of the buggy and escaped unhurt. The accident very near the spot where Mr. Blanton was badly hurt several years ago when a horse reared up and fell backwards with him.

A Splendid Gate.

In a short time Chas. Stevens, of Idlewild neighborhood, expects to have his patent farm gate on the market all who have seen the gate pronounce it the best they ever saw. It is of light construction yet substantial and is opened and closed by pulling a cord. To open the gate a cord is pulled and it rises until it stands on end, when you pass through and pull the opposite cord and the gate closes by descending. The mechanism is confined to a small space and operates smoothly, a child being able to open and close it.

Letting His Light Shine.

Newton Sullivan, a local grocer, is one of those who believes in letting his light shine, and last Saturday night he installed a powerful gasoline light on the corner at his grocery which enabled pedestrians to find the stone street and avoid the mud and slush that night were heard to exclaim as follows or something like it: "Blessed thou art Sullivan, and thy good deeds shall live after thee."

Dragging Their Roads.

Among those who have used the split log drag often and very successfully this winter are Harry Tanner, Chas. A. Gaines and Temp Graves, and the roads on which these gentlemen used the drag have been in fine condition all winter, and their labor is much appreciated by the public. Such men are a benefit to a community.

Got The Verdict Wrong.

The Recorder was in error last week when it announced that the damage suit of Wilson against Litterell in the Campbell county circuit court Wilson was given a verdict for $10,000. The verdict was in favor of the defendant Litterell.

Shelter the Chicks.

Don't try to raise early chicks unless you have a place to properly care for them. It is a waste of time and money. A good many think if they can hatch the chicks brooding them is a small matter. Such is not the case. Brooding the early chicks successfully is a subject that needs more attention than is usually given it. Hatching early chicks is comparatively easy.

To artificially brood the early hatched chicks successfully, warm comfortable quarters that are not subject to sudden change of fitful winter and early spring weather must be provided. More people fail in the brooding than in the hatching, and no doubt for the reason stated. Give the brooding more attention and see if the result will not be better.

Mrs. Forest Brady Dead.

Mrs. Forest Brady, who was taken to a Cincinnati hospital a few weeks since died at that institution on the 21st inst. After Mrs. Brady was received at the hospital an abscess formed that resulted in the perforation of a bowel, and her condition was never such that she could be operated on. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Rector, of Petersburg, and besides her parents she is survived by her husband and two children, all of whom have the sympathy of many friends.

BULLDOZING THE BULL.

A few years ago I took the short course at our college of agriculture, and, besides learning to judge calves and so forth, I learned the university yell. During the following summer our neighbor's bull bothered us at times by breaking thru the fence and coming up from the pasture with our cows. Finding this breachy bull in the lane one night, my brother, who also knows something about college yells, and I each took a pitchfork and started after him.

The bull took to his heels and ran until he came to a good sized elm tree. Here he wheeled and started pawing up the earth and bellowing and otherwise showing an inclination to fight. To keep up our own courage we started giving the college yell. The bull gave our startled look and then made for home the straightest and swiftest way. It took him through two barbed wire fences, but they did not hinder him any. He did not trouble us again. The moral of this is: When you go to college learn all you can, for you never can tell what you may have use for—Country Gentleman.

An Excellent Woman Gone.

Mrs. Elizabeth Kelly Neal died at her home in Bellevue last Sunday morning. She was a daughter of the late Jesse and Jane Kelly and was one of a family of thirteen children all of whom are dead except Z. T. Kelly, of Rabbits Hash, and Miss Cynthia Kelly, of Bellevue. Mrs. Neal was born and raised in the Waterloo neighborhood, and was 83 years old, being born December 17th, 1830. She was married to William Neal in June 1874. Mr. Neal died about eight years ago. Mrs. Neal was a member of Bellevue Christian church, and Rev. Edgar C. Riley conducted a short service at the residence Tuesday morning, after which the remains were taken to the family burying ground on the old Kelly homestead near Waterloo and interred. Mrs. Neal was a most excellent lady, and her long life was one worthy of emulation, and her many kindly acts will be missed by those with whom she associated.

Sam Johnson has about completed the work of moving his mill from Woolper to Burlington, and will soon be ready for business. He is one of the best saw mill men in the county.

IN MEMORY OF MARY ELIZABETH WALTON.

In a quiet, country church-yard where a host of friends had gathered God's benediction closed the earthly mission of years of the great and beloved soul of Mary—friend, sister, daughter wife and mother. Sublimated and refined by unusual suffering and austerities she passed out into the life beautiful.

Only memories, real and fragrant, as the breeze that blows over fields of flowered clover are left to sweeten and better the lives of those who knew and loved. Possessing a serene and peaceful cheerfulness, so characteristic of her life, and even in her last moments, with mind clear and calm, dispelling death's shadows and fears, lips framing words of love and hope, face illumined by the rarest resignation and expectancy, with eyes undimmed, she looked upon her loved ones, gave her last fond good-bye and fell asleep.

Those who best knew that constant, pure and devoted love, uncontaminated by selfishness or mercenary hope, still find in our bereavement the richest treasure of comfort and happiness that she gave in life with such a lavish hand. Such a love as hers is the triumphant crown of a real and noble life. Such an uplifting and guiding influence will live beyond marble shafts or perishable memorials, and even carry memory to the shores of endless time.

She regarded life as an opportunity and a privilege rather than a sacrifice, and she lived as she died, for all that made life beautiful with a quiet and unpretentious cheer, that dispelled all sorrow and solitude. She lived mid pleasures that had no rivalry and affections that had no change, but growth. She lived to make the world better and after scaling the heights of usefulness, she was called away to join the throng on the other shore that she might beckon her loved ones heavenward.

Scientists tell us nothing can be destroyed and that nothing is lost. O Almighty God, who even notes the sparrows fall, I know that in thy divine plan of eternity, her undaunted soul lives on, and on, and on.

"O grave where is thy sting," R. R. Walton.

DAIRY

GOOD FORM OF DAIRY COW

Development of Digestive, Secretive, Circulatory and Nervous Systems Are Essential.

(By W. C. RICHARDS, North Dakota Agricultural College.)

The form which good dairy cattle possess results from the milk producing functions which they develop. There are four main centers of activity, the digestive system, the milk secreting system or udder, the circulatory system, and the nervous system. To produce large quantities of milk, it is necessary that a cow (or a bull if he becomes the sire of cows capable of producing a large quantity of milk) have these systems well developed. Good producing cows and good dairy sires invariably have good dairy form, because it is the high degree of development of these parts known as the digestive, secretive, circulatory and nervous systems which give the dairy animal the dairy form.

A cow that has a good dairy form has a lean appearance over every part of the body which indicates a nervous temperament and that she utilizes a large proportion of the feed consumed for the making of milk. She has a wedge shaped appearance, coming from above, in front and from the side. The wedge shape appearance from above results from the narrow projecting withers which form the apex of the wedge and the large barrel, below, the base of the wedge. The wedge viewed from in front is made by the narrowness of the cow in front compared with the width at the widest part of the barrel or through the region of the hips. The wedge shaped appearance from the sides comes from the dairy cow having less depth in the region of the shoulders than in the region of the barrel and udder. The more marked these wedges the more closely the animal conforms to the dairy type.

BREEDING STOCK FOR DAIRY

Cow Should Have Large Middle and Strong Constitution—Real Good Sires Are Rare Thing.

(By PROF. W. J. KENNEDY, Iowa Station.)

In selecting dairy cattle the real test must be the scales and the Babcock tester. The cow is a machine to convert food into milk; thus she must have a large middle and a strong constitution to insure the best results. She must also have a large udder, large milk veins, large crooked milk veins and good-sized teats.

Her head should be clean and angular in appearance, with the eyes standing out prominently. The neck should be rather long and lean in appearance; the shoulders pointed and the backbone rather prominent. The skin should be loose and soft to the touch. In selecting herd bulls either mature animals which have already demonstrated their worth as sires or younger animals from high-testing dams and sires only should be used. The best and surest will always follow the use of a mature sire which has sired heifers with good records. A good dairy bull should be kept until he is twelve or fifteen years old; in fact, as long as he is a sure sire. Real good sires are so rare that when we do find one he should die only of old age. All breeders of dairy cattle should secure yearly tests on each and every cow in the herd. Shorter tests do not really mean very much. It is the cow that stays by her job that is really valuable.

Feeding Raw Beet Pulp.

Our leading dairymen have silos and feed ensilage nights and mornings and a feeding of hay at noon. They are not feeding very much grain at all, and not prices. The best wheat feeds, gluten and cottonseed meal, are the principal grains.

A few dairymen are feeding beet pulp and receiving good results. One farmer who is milking 12 cows told me a few days ago that since he commenced feeding this with the same amount of grain, his cows had gained a little over a 40-quart can of milk per day, says a writer in an exchange. Beet pulp costs three dollars per ton in California. Farmers give about eight quarts to a feed per cow twice a day.

Don't Hurry Cows.

Do not hurry the cows or encourage them to rush pell-mell in and out of the stable. Great danger can result. Careless hired men and the boys should be cautioned against this.

Angels Feed Supply.

An acre of good alfalfa, cut and fed to cows confined in a yard, will keep a cow in good condition for the summer.

NOT LIKE THE REAL THING

Critic of Novelists Complains That Writers Do Not Properly Represent Life as It Is.

Mrs. Durnford was known to disapprove of literary people, writes Mrs. Mary C. E. Wernz in "People of Popham" and her proud boast was that she never read novels. "I can see life as it is, without its being made ridiculous by people who know nothing about it," she would declare.

"You see, Miss Hope, what I object to in writing is this," said Mrs. Durnford. "You set out to write a book, which heaven forbid! You write about me! Well, you haven't the least idea what I am thinking about! You say, 'Mrs. Durnford was very much touched when I told her about old Mr. Tubb's death. Her eyes filled with tears.' Well, they didn't," wanted to sneer, that "real all"?" "Well, that would be called literary license. I am sure you would feel the death of a Mr. Tubb dreadfully; I can imagine any one would," I said. "I just happened to think of the name. I don't suppose a name makes any difference," she replied. "And in describing love to my dear," You may have had proposals, of course. If you have, you will know that not one man in fifty kneels. I shouldn't have respected Doctor Durnford's intelligence if he had. Now take proposals in books! Pages and pages, chapters sometimes, whereas the real thing happens like this: Doctor Durnford met me at the corner of the road; by the sign post, and he asked me what I was going to do, and I said I was going for a walk. And he said, very naturally, I thought, 'May I come, too?' I bowed. Then he said nothing till we got to Dyer's Pond, and then he said, 'May I walk with you through life?' I said, 'Yes.' That was all. He gave me the ring; it was in his pocket. Diamonds and sapphires, small, but large enough."

"What a life is simpler? We had an oak suite in the dining-room, a mahogany suite in the consulting-room, a satinwood suite in the drawing-room and ash in the bedroom. We had good carpets throughout, changing on the stairs from pile to cord at my bedroom. They are all as good today as they were then."

I said I thought she had chosen most wisely, both in husband and furniture.—Youth's Companion.

NOT SPOILED BY POSITION

President of the French Republic Pleased to Greet Humble Companion of His Boyhood.

A pretty little incident that throws a pleasing light upon the character of the president of France occurred recently at a banquet given by the French bar to President Poincaré.

At the close of the dinner M. Poincaré called up the waiter who had watched over his comfort. "Thank you, Jacques," he said quietly, and shook him by the hand. At the same time the president managed to slip a bank note into the waiter's palm.

"I won't have it!" cried Jacques, and to the amusement and astonishment of the guests there ensued a friendly struggle between the waiter and the president of the republic. M. Poincaré ended the amicable dispute by pushing the note into the man's pocket and good-naturedly slapping him on the back. The waiter could not resist this sincere geniality, and finally after another handshake, retired, wreathed in smiles.

When the president turned back to the table he noticed the perplexed looks on the faces of the guests, who did not know what to make of the scene.

"You see," he explained simply, "I was at school with Jacques when at Sam-pigny."—Youth's Companion.

Valuable Horse.

The talk in the lobby of a Washington hotel the other evening turned to horses, and Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick of Georgia recalled an incident that recently happened in the south.

Rambling along the road one morning a colored party named Rastus met his neighbor, Sambo. Instantly it was seen that Rastus had large tidings to impart.

"Look yeh, Sambo," he excitedly remarked, "did yo' know dat some body done go steal Deacon White's horse last night?"

"Yo' doan mean it, Rastus?" exclaimed Sambo, with an expressive cast of countenance. "Did dey find any clue to de thief dat done do crime?"

"Yes, dey suah did," answered Rastus. "In de stable whar dey took de boss from dey find a quort bottle full ob gin."

"A quort bottle full ob gin, eh?" returned Sambo. "Good! Den de Deacon doan lose nuttin' on dat hoss!"

Rabbits Know Geography.

Since the Connecticut game law went into effect there has been much trouble along the state line over Rhode Island shooters coming over to this side. Connecticut game wardens and protectors are scattered all along the line looking out for law violators who plead ignorance of the state line whereabouts.

Two Providence men were fined $30.44 for each rabbit "holed" for they hadn't caught any.

One of the men said: "Them gosh darn rabbits appear to be well posted on southern New England geography, and coax us over the line so you darned loafers can get a chance to make money by roping us in."—East Killingly (Conn.) Dispatch to N. Y. Herald.

The DAIRY

MAINTAIN PURITY OF BREEDS

Dairy Type is Sparse and Angular With Soft, Pliable Hide and Covered With Soft, Smooth Hair.

(By J. H. FRANSEN, Professor of Dairy Husbandry, University of Nebraska.)

A comparison of the beef and dairy types of animal is perhaps the most effective way of showing what are the distinct dairy characteristics. The beef is generally heavy and sluggish while the dairy animal is spare and angular and refined with a soft and pliable hide well covered with smooth, soft hair. The head is lean and a little longer than that of the beef type. The neck is long and lean, joining to the body rather abruptly. The withers are sharp, with the spinal column prominent and the barrel long and capacious, indicating good feeding capacity. The ribs are sprung down and outward and wide spaced, the heart and loin girth large and the tail fine with a heavy switch. The form of the dairy cow is frequently spoken of as the "triple wedge" form. First, she shows increased depth of body towards the rear when viewed from one side. Secondly, she widens gradually from the breast to the points of the hips. Thirdly, looking down on the back the form widens gradually downward like a wedge. The udder is well developed and even quartered; is soft and pliable but not flabby when emptied. The milk veins are large and tortuous and enter the abdominal wall in two or more large milk veins.

The dairy type can be found in many of the breeds but most characteristically in the distinct dairy breeds. By the dairy breeds are meant those that have become most noted for uniformly conforming to the true dairy type. These are the Holsteins, Jerseys, Guernseys and Ayrshires. Owing to the careful work of the breeders in maintaining the purity of the breeds and fixing their characteristics, these breeds can, in most cases, be counted on to reproduce their dairy qualities and their ability to produce butter-fat in large quantities. It is largely for this reason that the dairyman who desires success to follow his efforts should stick close to one of the dairy breeds.

RAISING BEST DAIRY BREEDS

No More Profitable Line of Stock Growing Than Raising Good Cows and Selling to Dairymen.

Any farmer is safe in breeding and raising for sale large milkers or butter-producing cows. As an industry there is no more profitable line of stock growing than raising good cows and selling them to the dairymen who are making a specialty of producing market milk or selling their milk to condensary plants where they do not have the by-product returned to their farms to feed out to the calves that are being raised to replace the cows that are annually discarded from their herds.

The keeping of more cows for creameries and cheese factories is also encouraging and many men are willing to pay a good price for well-bred dairy cows.

Keep the Best Cows.

The man who comes to your dairy farm and wants to buy the best cows from the best cows is not always your best friend. Be careful before you sell them to him. It is moving backwards in the dairy industry to let these go.

Great Benefit to Buyers.

Financially, cow testing is of very great benefit; young bulls sell for higher prices, cows sell for double the old prices when buyers see records.

Treating Scours.

When common scours appear immediately reduce the feed one-half.

Feeding Unprofitable Cows.

And still some farmers go on feeding 70-cent corn to unprofitable cows.

Good News If True.
J. Claud Hume, of Vevona, spent Monday here on business.

Dr. Will Sleet, of Latonia, spent the first of the week here with relatives and friends.

Last week J. H. Jackson sold his fine farm about four miles from here in Kenton county consisting of 163 acres to James Sellers, of New Richmond, Ohio. The price paid was $10,000. Mr. Jackson will have a public sale of his stock, personal effects, farming implements, etc., February 12th, 1914, and he and his family will move to California.

W. C. Moxley had the misfortune to have a couple of fine milk cows killed on the Southern Railroad tracks Monday while he was driving them to pasture. It is thought the railroad company will reimburse Mr. Moxley for the loss of the cows as the place where they were killed was an unprotected crossing. It is estimated they were worth $75 apiece. Another cow he was driving was thrown from the track and Mr. Moxley thought it was killed also but it got to its feet and he drove it home.

ERLANGER.

Mrs. Jack Cody entertained the Pastors Aid Society Wednesday. Work of installing the new electric light system began Monday. Mrs. P. H. Shearer is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Shearer, of Newport. The M. E. G. Society was entertained by Miss Jennie Geiger, Monday evening. Miss Rose Gale had as her guest, Sunday, Miss Helen Brunner, of Covington. The wedding of Miss Alma Corbin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Corbin and R. P. Rice, of Florence, took place Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Rice left for a three months' stay in California.

GOOD ROADS AND SCHOOLS.

Having written an article some time ago in regard to the road proposition and having been urged to respond again, I thought if I could be of any use to my countrymen and fellowmen, I would try again.

The road and the school are the two institutions upon which we must depend for whatever success we have in perpetuating the principles of Democracy upon which our forefathers founded a nation. We can view with alarm the tendency of society in this land of "equal opportunity" and the paved streets and the White Way terminating at the city limits in a mud road with broken in culverts and bridges, thus separating us into two distinct classes, rural and urban.

Most of the progress or all that has been made in the last quarter century has been in the city schools. More than sixteen million of our future citizens are now studying in our rural schools, where the farmer and farmer's wives of tomorrow are receiving their education, and all that they will ever get and a great many are less efficient than they were twenty-five years ago. Now, why then, what's the reason for this? Is it because the roads are responsible for this lack of progress? Good roads have always been closely associated with and a necessity for developing a good system of rural schools.

We have five states who have the best system of public roads and the average length of the school year is 180 days. In states that have given the least attention to roads the school year is less than half that. Daily attendance in states with good roads average is 76, in bad road states 52 per cent.

Good roads will surely bring a good class of citizens into a community and what is more important they will help to hold in the country the best boys and girls. The best men and women for leadership are from the country, but these are the first to leave the country districts.

Consult Who's Who in America and you will find that two-thirds of the people who have risen to distinction were born on a farm or in rural districts. Everything that can be done to establish closer relations between town and country people must be or ought to be encouraged.

Where is the money to come from? To improve permanently the highways in the whole United States that are most important roads cost two and one-half billion dollars. Did any one say anything when we paid one hundred and seventy-five million for the support of the Navy, or enough in five years to improve all the principal roads in the U. S. Nobody said a word when we paid fourteen million dollars in sending our navy around the world, or enough money to build a standard permanent road from New York to San Francisco.

The national government expended in round numbers a billion dollars in aid of railway construction and another billion in aid of river transportation or more than enough to meet the government's share of improving the public highways that would carry nine-tenths of the total traffic of the nation. Prepare the way to get some of the countless governmental obligations before it is everlastingly too late. G. B. POWERS.

Another distribution on the 1907 and 1909 crops of tobacco in the Burley pool will soon be made. Due announcements will be made through the county papers. These distributions have been delayed on account of numerous tax suits against the Burley Tobacco Society. There are also a number of stock certificates of the Burley Tobacco Company in the hands of the Secretary ready to be given out. We want to call the attention of the farmers to the fact that it is just as necessary to support the Burley Loose Leaf House today as it was to support the Burley Pool during the trying times of 1907, 1908 and 1909. It is the same farmers movement and run in their interest and for their protection. Should the Burley Tobacco movement ever go down, the farmer will go back to five cent tobacco, and will again be at the mercy of the sharks. Every man in the 1909 pool has a direct financial interest in the success of the Burley Loose Leaf House and every crop of tobacco delivered to the Burley Loose Leaf House increases the value of his stock just as much. Let every man who was in the pool and saw the price of tobacco jump from five cents to 17 cents per pound stand by the gun that brought him victory, and help maintain the prices. Beware commission paid sharks who stand on the street corner and try to gull the farmer by misrepresentation. These people are not friends of the farmer, and never were. We do not put out false statements of the averages made at the Burley pool. We will give you the very best prices. Stand by the bridge that carried you over. When you come to town have your wagon headed for the Fair Grounds and keep on going until you reach the Burley Loose Leaf House.

Yours Truly

Factional troubles between suffragettes who are intent upon influencing Congress to adopt a constitutional amendment for equal suffrage reached a crisis when several of the members of the Congressional Union, in rebellion against certain features of their leader's program, met at the headquarters of the "National Woman's Suffrage Association" to declare their opposition to the tactics of the union.

FEEBLE OLD PEOPLE

Are Told How to Regain Strength and Vigor.
As one grows old the waste of the system becomes more rapid than repair, the organs act more slowly and less effectively than in youth, the circulation is poor, the blood thin and digestion weak.
Vinol, our delicious, cod liver and iron tonic without oil is the ideal strengthener and body-builder for old folks, for it contains the very elements needed to rebuild wasting tissues and replace weakness with strength. Vinol also fortifies the system against colds and thus prevents pneumonia.
Mrs. Mary Ivey, of Columbus, Ga., says: "If people only knew the good Vinol does old people, I am sure you would be unable to supply the demand. I never took anything before that did me so much good as Vinol. It is the finest tonic and strength creator I ever used in my life."
If Vinol fails to build up the feeble, old people, and create strength we will return your money.
P. S.—Our Sazo Salve stops itching and begins healing at once.

The people are going to build turnpikes this season and let their lands grow up in weeds. Boys, you would better try to raise something to eat, then build roads. Of what use are the roads without something to haul over them? Automobile riding is not going to make you a living. It is a lot to have we chronicle the demise of sister Elizabeth Kelly Neal, who departed this life January 25, 1914. She had been suffering for several years with a complication of diseases. She was born December 27, 1830, consequently was just past 83 years of age. She was a member of the Bellevue Baptist church for about 30 years, but about ten years ago she united with Bellevue Christian church under Elder Edgar Riley's preaching. She had left an example that we all may strive to emulate. She gave her sweetness as does a flower, everywhere and without stint. In her home where she was the chair, the loving hearts are full of tender, never-fading memories of the loving sister whom the Lord has called, which is far better than any offering of earth. In the church and her Sunday school a gracious presence is lost, one whose strength and steadfast behavior have left an impression never to be erased and whose beauty and purity will ever be cherished in loving remembrance by her home, church and Sunday school. She was loved by her home as a faithful daughter, sister and wife, and in her death we and they feel that all have lost a jewel that cannot be replaced. After a brief service at her home conducted by Elder Edgar C. Riley her remains were conveyed to the Kelly family burial ground on the old homestead on the East Bend road and laid to rest. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family. C. H. A.

HIS OPINION OF FLORIDA.

Dear Sir:-I take pleasure in answering some letters through your paper. I have received some letters from some of your subscribers asking where is the best place to buy land in Florida; also what do they raise there. In answer to this will say that according to my conception of Florida there is only one place there that farming ever will be profitable and that is in the Everglades land, and as this is all unsettled and no way to market what you would be able to raise on account of no railroads and no water ways open yet as the canals are not opened out. My opinion is that a man should not invest in any of this land unless he has the money and don't need it at present and desires to go and personally conduct his farming, but I think things will not be settled sufficiently to warrant a man to go there for farming for at least five or six years. If a man wants to do this kind of course now is the time to get hold of it while it is cheap for there is about 5,000,000 acres for sale and it seems to be selling fast and is selling for only $65 per acre. I don't know of any of the limited means to take hold of the proposition at all, as it costs considerable to farm any kind of land there, and the land is so clear out of the question as it requires about two tons of fertilizer to the acre, besides they have to ship their own manure and use lots of it at an expense of $13 per wagon load by time they get it on their farms, which are from six to twenty miles from railway station; also they have to have some sort of an irrigating system, and I am sure if a man would take the same amount of time to build a canal, or a good soil, he would produce twice as much as he could in Florida, and of much better quality and have a much better market. What I say here is not that I am a booster for our country and I am not a knocker for Florida, but I am only telling the truth as I see it. It is true there is a good climate there in winter time while we are having bad weather here, but turn it around and in summer time there everything is inclined to be bad, and you can not raise anything. Having all questions asked me I remain, Yours Truly, W. J. Brill.

A SAD HOME.

Died-Near Limaburg, Feb 2nd, Rosa Mae, aged 15 years, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moore. Dear Rosa was a more, her spirit has taken its flight to Him who gave it. A brighter spirit never passed from earth to heaven. Her life was full of love. All the loving hands could do was done to prolong her life but proved unavailing. Weep not fond parents your darling girl is not dead. She is at rest beyond the grave. It was only through love that God has thus taken her home with Him, for He knew that she would rest assured she now dwells with God and his workers. She has only gone from a world of sin and sorrow to a brighter world beyond the grave. No more sorrow and sickness never come, and where parting words are never spoken. God has taken her from us to everlasting rest and to dwell with the angels above, and there she awaits in his throne for loved ones left here in this world. Surely God works in a mysterious way. Not now but in the coming years we'll read the meaning of our tears and then up there we'll understand. Rosa Mae, leaving father, mother, two sisters and three brothers to mourn her death. Miss Pearl Stephenson.

Farming In 1914.

One of the many signs of a prosperous year is the announcement of a greatly extended acreage by American farmers. Crops far in excess of any ever sown have been put in the ground, and if the yield is reasonably satisfactory, there will be an enormous increase in the national wealth before the year 1914 is ended. Despite gloomy forecasts to the contrary the efficiency of the American farmer is steadily increasing and this is notably true in the great wheat belt of the West and South, where farming opportunities were for a time neglected because of the movement westward. The South is coming into its own through the export of Kentucky loads in tobacco, and will raise more wheat and corn this year than ever before, barring bad weather conditions. Weather conditions remain to be considered and they can make or seriously mar the crop. The cold winter has been exceptional for planting, and a severe spring might do harm. The repetition of last year's drought would hurt the crops, but here the increased acreage and the increased percentage of increased production from drought or excessive rains.-Louisville Evening Post. Miss Rosa Mae Moore, who died of pneumonia, is quite ill of that disease at the home of W. E. Walton, in Ft. Pleasant neighborhood. She is under the care of a nurse.

FISCAL COURT.

The fiscal court held a very important session last Tuesday with all the justices and the county judge present. Several matters of minor importance were disposed of before the road problem was tackled. When the question of subscribing money for the construction of the new road was taken up, it was proposed to build in the county was called up Esq. Stephens, of Petersburg, made a motion that the roads be considered in the order in which application for assistance had been made. To this motion Esqs. Tanner, of Florence and Bedford, of Walton, objected. Some discussion followed, when the court went into executive session for about an hour, when it reported that the roads would be granted assistance in the order in which application for assistance had been made, and that it would require all the money at the courts command this year to make good its subscription to the first four of which are the Petersburg and Bellevue, Sand Run and Hebron, Walton and Beaver, which leaves the Burlington and East Bend and the Rabbit Hash and Landing roads out in the cold this year so far as assistance from the county is concerned. The court will meet again next month when it is expected to close the contract for the work. The court ordered a vote taken at the next regular election on the proposition to issue county bonds for laying and building pikes. The court made the following tax levies on each $100:- General Expense 10 cents. Road Tax 15 cents. Turnpike Tax 25 cents. The petitions presented by Supt. Riley in regard to his salary were not considered by the court. Each road was represented by a considerable delegation of interested parties and the four roads to which assistance will be given were delighted. The county will give a dollar for each dollar that is raised by subscription, and will require each road to execute to the county a bond guaranteeing the payment of the amount of money subscribed, which is a very necessary precaution on the part of the fiscal court. The usual acreage of tobacco will be cultivated in this county this year. The 1913 crop is filling the growers' pockets with shekels. The property tax for county purposes in Boone county for 1911 is 10 cents on each $100 of taxable property. Another blizzard is advertised to appear in this part of the country the latter part of this week. Don't forget that the school tournament will be held in Burlington in May next. The ground hog weather, so far is very satisfactory. Quarterly court is in session today, Thursday.

Cover crops are used for the purpose of preventing the soil from washing during the hard rains of winter and spring, as well as for the addition of fiber to the soil.

Two acres of cornstalks placed in the silo are worth in feeding about the same as five acres of stalks cut and fed as fodder. This shows how the corn crop may be utilized.

A tractor for farm machinery that is driven with reins is a novelty, too, being done the same way as a third controlling the motor, while a fourth may be used on the brake if desired.

The manure spreader and the silo are two things that point the farmer towards a better bank account, and it is not going to be so very long before we will add to this the milking machine.

A post that is well set may last longer than one which has been made smaller by sharpening so as to drive it easily, but it is seldom as solid as the driven post. When the soil is water soaked the set post is more easily loosened by stock pushing on the fence.

Sweet clover is a great soil builder. It is a great feed and it is a great crop but it is only a few years since sweet clover was looked upon as the rankiest sort of a weed to be guarded against and fought under every circumstance.

Irrigation has been practiced in Spain nearly a century, the first canal having been begun in 1814.

Don't try to sell a skiny horse. Fat on a horse brings a higher price than on any other farm animal.

Hall may knock down the wheat and chinch bugs take the corn, but the cream check comes every month.

Get a thoroughbred, butter-bred bull calf now, if you have none, and grow him well to begin to improve your dairy.

Let the sunshine and fresh air come into the hen house through the windows instead of through cracks in the siding.

Plenty of grit and plenty of pure water are just as essential to egg production as good houses, and the right kind of food.

The poultry raiser should have a bone cutter. The cost price is reasonable and one will more than pay for itself the first year.

Both sexes in geese are feathered exactly alike, which makes it difficult to distinguish genders from geese, especially when young.

The seed corn should be stored where there will be little danger of frost. This is especially true until the ears are entirely dried out.

It doesn't look as though the markets could be overstocked with dairy products. Milk and butter prices are staying up well, in the cities at least.

The rich butter fat cows can be made more numerous only by careful breeding. If you mate rich butter fat stock only, the improvement will be rapid.

Eggs at 25 to 30 cents a dozen make an expensive cure for scours in calves. The better plan is to keep a quantity of dried blood meal on hand for this purpose.

Next to alfalfa there is roughage grown on the farm that will compare with clover hay. Of course, the brighter and cleaner it is the better for the stock.

Milk is a food, not a beverage. It is usually looked upon as a drink only, but the truth is it is a food supplying the need of practically every form of human necessity.

If any new males are to be bought this season it is a good plan to get them now while those who are selling have more to select from. As a rule, too, prices are low.

In drying off your cow don't dismiss her finally till you find that she is truly dry. Any milk or thick matter left in the udder is likely to produce disease later on.

The farmer who arranges his work so as to be busy all the year around and to keep his men busy all the year around is the man that gets the largest profit and has the least trouble with help.

Dairying compels a farmer to diversify and to adopt a rotation in crops, and there is nothing that the average farm needs more, unless it is fertility and the dairy business provides that too.

It is a recognized fact that animal food must be given during the winter months to get a satisfactory egg yield and keep the fowls in a healthy condition, and while it may be supplied in other ways, green bone is the most economical.

Observe the methods of others in making money, but work out your own individual problem in the dairy. There are no two persons with exactly the same conditions and facilities. Use the experience of others to guide you, but still do your own driving.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

MAKE yourselves nests of pleasant thoughts, bright fancies, satisfied memories, noble histories, faithful sayings, treasure houses of precious and useful thoughts, which care cannot disturb, nor pain make gloomy, nor poverty take away from life-houses built without hands, for our souls to live in.
—John Ruskin.

THE SUNDAY SUPPER.

The Sunday supper is usually the most informal meal of the week, and if a guest arrives he is given a part to perform in the preparation of the meal. The most delightful part of it all to men, especially, is being allowed to make something, and the men and women worth while are those who are doing the things. It may be the most appreciated accomplishment that a man possesses, if he may add to the comfort of somebody some time by being able to prepare a cup of cocoa or coffee, a piece of toast or cook a steak.

One hot dish for Sunday night is considered sufficient. The chafin dish is very popular, or if one has an electric plate or appliances, the meal may be made especially delightful. The nice thing about a chafin dish—if one has the fuel, it is just as easy to use it out on the plains as in a model city apartment.

A plain salad with sandwiches, a bit of fruit, either fresh or preserved with some kind of cake, will make a good meal, even for company.

Beef With Savory Sauce.—Cut cold boiled or roast beef in thin slices. Heat together one tablespoonful of butter, two of tomato catsup and a cup of thickened gravy. The gravy or sauce may be made of stock. If not at hand, Season well and lay in the meat to be heated through.

Egg and Cheese.—In a saucepan or chafin dish put a tablespoonful of butter and a half cupful of milk; add a quarter of a teaspoonful of dry mustard to a half pound of finely cut cheese, a dash of salt and a half teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Heat slowly until the cheese melts, then add six well beaten eggs, and stir until thick. Just before serving add two tablespoonfuls of orange juice. Serve hot. A creamed dish making a rich white sauce and adding any kind of diced meat from chicken to cold roast pork, makes a good hot dish to serve with or on toast.

Deviled Meat.—Rub together one tablespoonful of softened butter, a quarter of a teaspoonful of dry mustard, a dash of cayenne and a half teaspoonful of salt, then add gradually one-half teaspoonful each of Worcestershire and vinegar. Cut underdone slices of roast and dip in this mixture, then saute in a little butter until well heated.

Refrigerator.—Rub together one tablespoonful of softened butter, a quarter of a teaspoonful of dry mustard, a dash of cayenne and a half teaspoonful of salt, then add gradually one-half teaspoonful each of Worcestershire and vinegar. Cut underdone slices of roast and dip in this mixture, then saute in a little butter until well heated.

Refrigerator.—Rub together one tablespoonful of softened butter, a quarter of a teaspoonful of dry mustard, a dash of cayenne and a half teaspoonful of salt, then add gradually one-half teaspoonful each of Worcestershire and vinegar. Wireless Dispatches.

Morganfield.—The roads of Union county are thick with automobiles, the roads being perfectly firm and smooth, a thing never heard of here until the use of the split log drag began.

Lancaster.—Five wagons are now used to transport the children to and from the Buena Vista school in Knox County, the old one having been added recently. A fourth teacher was added to the faculty recently.

Mayfield, Ky.—During a recess hour at the South Ward school, Johnnie Reynolds, 12, was stabbed. The wound is four inches long in the small of the back and is of a serious nature. The wounded boy is a son of Walter Reynolds.

Henderson.—A peculiar verdict was rendered by a jury in the Circuit Court in the case of Aaron Mann against Geo. Smith, a negro. Mann sued the negro for $1,000 on a rent contract and the jury gave the negro a judgment for $100.

Federal.—Allegations of a sensational nature are contained in a suit filed in circuit court here by Samuel Liebel, a real estate dealer, against his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Liebel. He is suing for $100,000 worth of property which had been decided to her since 1901. He alleges that it was understood between them that she was to receive the property to him when he so desired. Liebel alleges as his reason for wanting possession of the real estate that his wife has been literally cut to pieces and ignores his kindred entirely. They have no children.

Exchange Echoes.

It is freely predicted by mule traders that the prices of mules this spring will be higher than for several years. Prices have begun to soar already and there is no telling where they will stop. —Wilmore Enterprise.

Sunday morning, when Cam Mabe, a farmer near Upton, viewed his orchard, he found that 32 peach trees and 11 apple trees had been literally cut to pieces and ruined. Mr. Mabe realizes that the work was done by an enemy of his. —Elizabethtown News.

Mr. P. A. Fowler, a progressive farmer of Route 7, brought to this office Saturday one of the most freakish cars of corn we ever saw. It was white and red. Evidently when the wind was blowing during the blooming period the mixture took place. —Fulton Leader.

The Democrat's correspondent at Oxford, Scott Co. writes: "When Jesse Garnett was somewhat of a 'kid,' living at Leesburg, he captured a large turkey buzzard in a steel trap. He converted an oyster can into a bell by tying a large nail in it for a clapper, wired it to the bird's neck and set him free. After a ten-year captivity for the bird over various vicinities perhaps, one day last week Jesse's uncle, Wren Wilson, recaptured his buzzardship near the place where he was first caught, with the bell still about its neck." —Cynthiana Democrat.

James Harvey, who lives on Troublesome, in Perry county, undoubtedly owes his life to his grit and determination. On Monday afternoon while carrying an axe, he fell and cut the arteries in his wrist, and, being unable to stop the bleeding, rode to Jackson, a distance of nearly twenty miles, to get medical aid. When he arrived in town he was nearly dead from loss of blood, and it required very prompt work on the part of Dr. Wilgus Bach to save his life. After having his wound attended to he was given some stimulants and removed to the home of his father, where he is now doing nicely, and will recover. —Jackson Times.

The apple market is out of reason. Why? Because the people are neglecting their orchards. Owen county climate and soil are both fitted for fruit growing. Then what is the reason we do not grow more fruit? Because the people are uneducated. In the work of raising orchards and growing fruit, with a study of the business Kentucky farmers could be living easy in a few years on the fruit crop that might be grown upon the old fields of the State now in waste. Apples at $2 per bushel would pay for hauling them to the river or railroad and we might expect a few more and enjoy them if they were plentiful. —Owenton Democrat.

That farmers can use advertising in the New Era to just as good advantage as the storekeeper has been proven by at least one wide-awake farmer of this county. This farmer recently had some corn to sell. It was good corn and the price right, but the farmer tried to sell it the old way, from place to place trying to sell it, so he called the New Era office over the phone and gave a short reading notice for three insertions. The result was that the issue of the paper came out with the advertisement he received several calls, and before the third advertisement had appeared he had sold his entire supply, about 140 barrels.

From time to time during the year he has advertised various things he had to sell, a cow, some hogs, etc., and every time people have besieged him to buy. Saturday he stated that during the year 1913 he had sold at least $1,000 worth of products of his farm solely through advertising, and the entire expense of the advertisements had not been more than $5 or $10. But he declared that the saving in time and energy and worry by having the buyer hunt him up instead of him having to hunt the buyer, meant many more dollars in his pocket. —Hopkinsville New Era.

FIND THEIR REWARD SMALL

Shabby Treatment Accorded to Men Who Have Contributed to Advancement of Age.

In what we proudly call an "Age of Science," the world still treats scientists like dogs. An appalling array of recent news notes is at hand to furnish the counts of this indictment.

"Poor I have lived, poor I die!" were the last words of Charles Tellier, who, half starved and in agony, died the other day in a shabby room in Paris. His experiments of half a lifetime made refrigeration systems possible. One of the many corporations that he had helped to enrich offered him in his last hours a gift of $20,000. Tellier scornfully rejected it. He accepted a ribbon from the Legion of Honor, but spurned aims.

J. H. Fabre, the French poet-entomologist, called "The Insect Homer," at last has attained deserved honors—but he had to live until ninety to get them.

"A little longer," he quaintly observed, "and the violins would have come too late."

Yet France is no more ungrateful than other lands. The Wright brothers found quicker recognition there than in America.

That Germany may live in a glass house, too, might be seen in reading the story of Doctor Diesel. His work may prove epoch-making, but he died a bankrupt and possibly a suicide.

England rewards Marconi, the scientist-livesaver whose invention has rescued hundreds at sea, by connecting his name with a financial scandal, and France has given shabby treatment to Mme. Curie—Columbia Weekly.

RUSSELL SAGE AND THRIFT

Apostle of Saving Was Financier Who Died Worth More Than Sixty Millions.

It has been developed, as the result of a suit in New York, that the late Russell Sage left an estate of $66,000,000. It was generally supposed that the financier was a very rich man at the time of his death, but few persons imagined that his holdings would run into so many millions of dollars. He was a unique figure in many ways, and while he was never very popular, few persons questioned his personal integrity. He might fairly be called, the Apostle of Thrift. A man who made his lunch from an apple or two, and who spent little or nothing on personal adornment or pleasure, was bound, in the nature of things, to accumulate money.

Some persons are apt to disdain the habit of saving and to say that fortunes are rarely built in that way. They seem to imagine that enormous sums of money are the result of reckless speculation and that the poor man has little or no chance in this feverish age. It has been humorously said that the great effort consists in getting the first million and that after that it comes easily. We cannot all be Russell Sages, but thrift, accompanied by industry and brains, is bound to meet with success.

Sangfroid. "President Wilson's sangfroid is unfailing," said a diplomat—"as unfailing as his fund of anecdote."

"Apropos of the shipping rebate, I complimented the president on his sangfroid the other day. He replied, with his dry smile, that he tried to imitate the grave digger."

"A grave digger, he explained, had the habit of visiting the cemetery every night at about midnight to see that all was going well."

"Some boys decided to play a trick on him. They dug a trench in a dark spot which the grave digger always passed over, and one of their number, clothed in a white sheet, hid behind a tree."

"The grave digger at midnight duly appeared and, sure enough, he stumbled and fell into the sheet."

"Then the boy in the sheet stepped forth and said in hollow tones: 'What are you doing in my grave?'"

"What are you doing out of it?" the grave digger calmly replied."

Losses of Civil War. It is usually estimated that the life losses during the Civil war, on both sides, measured up to the million figure. The actual killed in battle numbered, on the side of the north, 100,000; on that of the south, 90,000. A large percentage of the losses was from wounds, but the largest of all was from sickness, caused by climate and exposure. Of the million or thereabouts, who were sacrificed on account of the struggle, the north lost between 650,000 and 700,000, the south between 300,000 and 350,000. The southerners, being acclimated, did not lose as many men from sickness, in proportion to the number enlisted, as the north did.

Dramatized Fish Story. The scene is a restaurant. The characters are A. E. Anson, now playing in "Romance," and a waiter.

Anson—Waiter!

Waiter—Yes, sir?

Anson—This salmon (business of nose ascending).

Waiter—Yes, sir?

Anson—The journey in a confined space from British Columbia has been too much for it. It's rather—well, let's say, altered.

Waiter—It's not British Columbia salmon, sir, it's Scotch—imported Scotch salmon, sir.

Anson—Oh! Scotch, of course. That accounts for its canyness!

PAWNSHOP A VITAL ISSUE

Italian Government Compelled to Take Steps to Protect Interests of the People.

It is rare that a pawnshop is a vital part of the national life of a people, but such is the case in Italy. This is true to such an extent that the government is now considering a plan by which the people may be relieved from the excessive rates of interest they are compelled to pay to private brokers. According to an Italian newspaper, the great curse of the Italian poorer classes is their vanity, the savings which they might put in the bank being devoted to the purchase of ornaments of gold or silver. When the time of need comes these articles go to the pawnshops, of which there is a great deficiency, the total number being 633 to 8,262 communities.

The majority charge a rate which, with the government tax, amounts to fully 15 per cent, many of the shops working on borrowed capital being compelled to charge this rate to make a profit.

For the purpose of making loans, articles pawned, on which were raised 103,830,735 lire. Of this number, pledges 411,697 were abandoned. The government now proposes to utilize the money—some 900,000,000 lire—which has been accumulated by the poorer classes in the postal savings funds, for the purpose of making loans on precious metal. The loans will be made at a low rate of interest, and the entire postal system will be adopted to the use of the department. It will thus be possible to pawn an article in any portion of the kingdom and take it out elsewhere.

RUSSIA PROTECTS THE SABLE

Insignificant Furs to Be Exploited to Take the Place of the Little Animal's Pelt.

Fearing the extinction of the sable, which supplies the world with the most beautiful of furs, Russia has forbidden that any of these little animals should be caught during the next three years. Consequently the fur has run up to an enormously high price, and with the result that many sorts of common and insignificant furs are to be exploited during the winter that lies before us.

The humble rabbit's skin, when manipulated by clever fur dressers, would be unrecognizable. Still less when dyed to such colors as sable brown, tomato, prune and many shades of tan and yellow, the latter in the tint of Kolinsky sable. The higher classes, such as skunk and fox, are seen in their natural color, dyed being reserved for the less important varieties.

Leopard skin is used for muffs as well as for coats, and an extraordinary specimen of the muffs is to be seen at a London theater, the paws and the tail both well in evidence. Panther skin has now been brought into the service of beauty, a costume made of meadow green velvet has the collar and tunic buttoned with frowns down the front, the latter quite full over the very tight lower part of the skirt.

Royal Napkin Rings.

"When Don Manuel, ex-king of Portugal, got married," said a prodding editor, "the city of Lisbon presented to him and his bride, among other things, a pair of jeweled napkin rings."

"Napkin rings?"

"Why, if anybody gave a rich young American couple napkin rings they'd be as insulted as if you gave them celluloid collars or Japanese paper napkins, or second-hand clothing."

"Our American millionaires not only have fresh napkins with every meal—napkin rings, indeed—but they even have fresh tablecloths."

"Why, I know a Fifth avenue millionaire who wears two clean shirts a day—a colored shirt in the morning, a white one in the evening. He also wears a fresh suit of pajamas every night. His bed has fresh sheets on it nightly. Daily his underwear is fresh."

"We lead the world in laundry bills, as in all things."

"And here a royalty using napkin rings! Gee! It makes me laugh."

So sayeth the editor, society editor gave a loud, harsh, scornful guffaw.

We're Coming to It.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, fresh from her long European summer, criticized at the suffrage luncheon in New York American life.

"The custom of people are lacking in politeness," she said, "and the servant question is very difficult here."

"I heard a story yesterday that hardly exaggerates the difficulty of the servant question."

"Why did you leave your last place?" a lady asked an applicant for the post of parlor maid.

"Shure, mum," the applicant replied. "I left because they insisted on me usin' the old-fashioned bplane, with niver a chance at the smart new French monoplane—that's all, go now."

New Laws in Pennsylvania.

The social workers of Pennsylvania have worked for and had passed the following measures: A law placing the responsibility of the maintenance of houses of prostitution upon the actual owners; a law forbidding the marriage of insane, epileptics and feeble-minded persons and requiring that a statement be made by each person applying for a marriage certificate that he or she is not suffering from transmissible diseases, the creation of a village for feeble-minded women, and the organization of a new court in Philadelphia for juvenile and desertion cases.

The Waste of Foodstuffs.

The elimination of food waste, in the opinion of one of the experts of the United States Department of Agriculture, would make the high cost of living problem void of interest. Moreover, it "would supply with plenty hundreds of thousands who are hungry."

The waste of foodstuffs in the country undoubtedly is large. Probably if the distribution were better there would be food enough for everybody, and no one would have to pay exorbitant prices to begin with, there is enormous waste on the farms. Millions of dollars worth of vegetables and fruits are lost every year because of abundant production and inadequate system of marketing. In addition there is enormous loss of these commodities in the cities after they have left the producers' hands because of the perishable nature of the product and its delay in reaching the consumer.

The family canning outfit is less common on the farms than it should be. The world consumes a vast amount of canned goods. Fruits and vegetables that are canned on the farm are, as a rule, superior to the product that is turned out by the canning factory. But good fruit goes to the farms while millions of people in the cities are hungering for it. The grower does not sell it, either because prices are not attractive or because the cost of shipping is high and it is a long way from a reliable market.

If he ships his produce to a city commission merchant the grower is likely to be disappointed, for he does not find the trouble to make further shipments.

Cold storage under proper conditions helps to eliminate waste, but to many consumers have no satisfactory experiences with cold storage products that the method does not command general confidence. The facilitation of distribution, the more economic handling of commodities on the farm and the better regulation of cold storage would operate to the public benefit just as the present lack of system in these matters now operates to "the public disadvantage."

It may not be possible to obviate all waste, but when the country has progressed to a better method of marketing—there will be no waste to waste—and the producer will not tolerate such losses as he now passively endures. The consumer, of course would profit by such an improved state of affairs.—C-J.

The "Gun" in Daily Evidence.

No day lacks its example of the evil consequences of "pistol totting" in Kentucky. In Louisville Saturday night two men engaged in a trivial quarrel over the price of a bucket of lard. This was small basis for a resort to firearms. One of the men had a .38 Smith & Wesson in his pocket and a dispute only ended when he had fired a bullet into the other.

Because of the common practice of carrying pistols many insignificant quarrels crop into homicides, barring the presence of the pistol in the hip pocket such arguments probably would result in nothing more serious than a bloody nose or a black eye. Two incidents would close with a sharp slap or a swift punch, and the participants would be willing the next day, to forget it. With one or both the disputants carrying pistols the results are most likely to be disastrous and deplorable.

The concealed deadly weapon is a constant menace to human life. It causes murder, manslaughter, suicide and malicious and accidental shootings. In the transaction of the ordinary affairs of life no man needs a pistol, but thousands of men feel that it is the proper thing habitually to "tote a gun," oblivious to the danger to themselves and others and a prolific cause of trouble at all times and seasons. The practice should be frowned upon, suppressed, and, if possible, eliminated from the scheme of human conduct.

There is a bill, probably more than one, before the present session of the Legislature to make "pistol totting" a felony and the plan has many earnest supporters. Whether such a law would be effective is problematical, but there is no question that the existing laws have not materially lessened the evil. This may not be much due to any fault of the law as to the lack of the law's application. Laws do not enforce themselves and no law is strong unless it be strong in public approbation. Penalties that are not inflicted have small deterrent influence.

It is worth while to consider what can be done in the way of legislation to reduce the number of "pistol toters," but until Kentuckians in the mass shall have arrived at a different viewpoint as to the usefulness and viciousness of the offense all our laws will fall far short of their authors' intentions.—C-J.

There isn't a finer young fellow or more able newspaper man in the State than Shelton Saufley, of the Stanford Interior Journal. But honest, inquisitive, and just between us girls, did Shelton really, truly expect his bill, reducing the per diem of himself and his fellow-legislators from $10 to $5 a day to be passed?—Todd County Times.

A little attention to your stock and use of a good curvy comb and brush with a few condition powders added for man and beast, all will come out in the spring in better shape.

Local Happenings.

Sabbath was the first bright Sabbath this year.

Moles have not stopped working about Burlington this winter.

The Recorder is carrying advertisements for several public sales.

The force at the local garage had three autos under repairs one day last week.

When the rain came last Friday the roads were in almost mid-summer condition.

Remember the entertainment next Saturday night at Library Hall. Everybody is going.

W. P. Sullivan has been considerably indisposed this winter, although able to be about all the time.

A Grant county man raised over 4,000 pounds of tobacco on one acre of ground. That's some tobacco.

Rev. S. P. Summons will preach at Bullittsville Christian church next Sunday morning. All are invited.

Let me develop and print from your films, prices reasonable. W. H. P. Holloway, photographer, Burlington, Ky.

Sorry to hear of the continued illness of D. B. Wallace, cashier of the Equitable Bank and Trust Company, at Walton.

Dad and Mam ground hog and all the juvenile ground hogs in this part of the county saw their shadows last Monday.

If you are interested in public sales livestock and farm produce you would better read the Recorder closely each week.

The change in the weather the latter part of last week, caused the postponement of several contemplated fishing parties.

Excepting the last forty-eight hours, the weather during the month of January was very fine, but look out for this month.

Old Sol gave the ground hogs in this part of the country a splendid opportunity to gaze upon their shadows last Monday.

Lou Thompson, of Florence, and James Murray, postmaster at Florence, were business callers at this office last Saturday afternoon.

Virgil Gaines got one of his hands caught in a wheel on a cutting box last Saturday, and four of his fingers were badly mangled.

It is said the building of the pike from W. C. Weaver's on Gunpowder to the Florence pike at J. J. Tanner's, has been postponed indefinitely.

Sam Johnson began hauling logs to his mill last week, and will raise steam so soon as he has enough material in the yard to make a good run.

Gunpowder creek could not be forded last Saturday morning, consequently the carrying of Burlington R. D. 2 could not make his entire delivery, that day.

Tyra Bondurant, of Locust Grove neighborhood, was in Monday and planted an advertisement for a public sale February 21st. He will move to Petersburg.

The management of the entertainment to be given Saturday night kindly requests that no peanuts or other missiles be thrown or "cracked" in the hall.

Woodie Sullivan has bought J. F. Lambert's farm out on the Bellevue pike known as the Henderson farm. Mr. Lambert has moved to a farm owned by Mrs. Lulu Walton.

The county clerk has completed the recapitulation sheet of the property in this county for the use of the State Board of Equalization which meets at Frankfort.

It will soon be learned how the citizens of McVillie appreciate and value their homes, and Uncle Sam will not find them willing to dispose of them at a song and let him sing it.

Atty. Sidney Gaines and W. A. Gaines have gone to St. Petersburg, Florida, to bank in the southern sunshine along with several other Boone county people who are there.

Surveys for about 14 miles* of new pike in this county were made last week, indicating that the winter attack of turnip fever is raging with more than the usual violence.

Those who have been plowing say the ground is breaking nicely notwithstanding it has not been frozen very hard this winter. A great many farmers got in several days plowing last week.

Chas. Maurer has gone into the poultry business and has a lot of nice fowls on his farm out on the Bellevue pike, and has put in operation a large incubator to replenish his poultry yard.

There is some difference of opinion as to the condition of the fruit crop. The weather during the month of January was calculated to advance the buds and put them in jeopardy at least.

About an average court day crowd was in town Monday, and everybody remained on the streets enjoying the sunshine, many of them pining for the fact that the ground hog would see his shadow.

County Surveyor J. W. Conley and Master Commissioner Maurer were down in Gunpowder a day or two last week surveying a piece of land Frank Mullins bought in the settlement of the Ellen Snyder estate.

Hume & Fowler sold autos to the following persons in Bellevue last week: Al Rogers, Wm. Rogers and G. S. Walrath. Bellevue is a new territory and they have prospects of selling several more machines in that neighborhood.

NOTICE—An examination beginning at 9:30 a. m., will be held in Burlington, Saturday, February 14, 1914, for a certificate to operate the Rural Route and the eligible list.

OLGA KIRKPATRICK, Postmaster, Burlington, Ky.

Miss Rose Mae Moore, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moore, of Limaburg neighborhood, died last Monday morning after an illness of ten days or two weeks of pneumonia. The bereaved family has the sympathy of a large circle of relatives and acquaintances.

Aurora business men subscribed considerable money to assist in the building of the Petersburg and Bellevue pike. Aurora draws a large amount of trade from the local territory to be accommodated by the proposed pike, and her business men are showing their appreciation of the same in a very substantial manner.

Deputy U. S. Marshall, Emmet Orr, of Covington, was a business caller at this office one day the past week. He placed with the Recorder a publication in regard to a condemnation proceeding wherein the United States is seeking to condemn a considerable portion of the town of McVillie, this county, for a site for the lock and dam to be constructed in the Ohio river at that point.

J. J. Tanner, who resides out on the Florence pike, was in one day the past week, and was somewhat perturbed because of the mild weather so far this winter, and expressed himself as feeling dead certain that it has been borrowed and will have to be paid back with big interest. Mr. Tanner thinks there is a proper time for winter and it ought to come when it is due.

C. H. Youell sold and delivered to John Hogan 9,300 pounds of Stand-up-Burley tobacco at 15 cents a pound that grew on four acres of land. This piece of land has been plowed 14 years out of 20 and the last five years in succession. The last three crops of tobacco made respectively 6,740 pounds, 13,140 and 13,140 at 13c and 9,300 pounds at 15 cents. These three crops brought $3,261.40, and were grown by liberal applications of law-manure and commercial fertilizer and good cultivation and handling.

Now that I have settled in full with the state and county and am through with all business pertaining to the Sheriff's office, which I have held for four years, I want to thank the people of Boone County for the office of High Sheriff which was presented to me by their support.

I also desire to thank them for their promptness in paying their taxes and obeying subpoenas by telephone which has saved me many long rides. It is easy to be a sheriff of a county where the people are willing to help you as they are in this county, and assuring you I appreciate the honor of the office and the treatment received by the people while in office, I remain

Your Friend,

Failed to Show Up.

A couple of strange men spent last Thursday in Burlington taking in the town. It was the general opinion of those who saw them that they were here for no good, and they left the town ripe for a robbery excitement of some kind, consequently when the Kentucky Post arrived last Friday evening and contained an item in which it was said a conversation was overheard in a saloon in Cincinnati in regard to a contemplated robbery of the Richmond, bank and a bank at Walton, this county, a council of war was called and arrangements made to guard the local bank and the telephone exchange, while fire-arms were given an overhauling and put in condition for use. Early in the night suspicious movements on the part of a couple of persons who were not identified on account of the darkness, were noticed, and this added fuel to the fire and some of the citizens became considerably excited, being certain that at least a couple of robbers were in town. The night, was an ideal occasion for a bank robbery, it being dark, windy and the rain coming down in torrents, which facts contributed largely to the unconsciousness of the men. Although all the conditions were just right for a bank robbery, when Saturday morning dawned the safes in the banks had not been moved and the nervous condition of the inhabitants returned to normal and the town was soon again pursuing the even tenor of its way.

Notice to Policyholders.

To the Policy Holders of the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Company: Your board of directors at their annual meeting, October 6, 1913, passed a resolution that hereafter no assessment of less than two per cent shall be made. Their reason for this is that it will save you money, as it costs the same to collect a small amount as it does a larger one. Another matter of great importance to each of you is the action of your board of directors in instructing your executive committee to enforce the penalty attached to section 13, article 5, of the policies which would be in effect for more than 30 days after having received notice of any assessment, should have a loss while he is delinquent, he can not collect any insurance. Your board would regret very much for such a misfortune to overtake any of you and for that reason they give you fair warning on every card that is sent you, and if you have not a card receipted for each assessment it would be wisdom on your part to write to the Secretary and find out if you owe anything. There are more than 150 who do. Are you one of them? By order of Executive Committee. R. B. HUEY, Secretary.

Youth Admits Many Outrages.

New York, Jan. 28.—Alfred Lehman, an undersized youth, scarcely out of his teens, sat in the witness chair Tuesday and confessed to having taken part in sixteen bomb outrages, revealed knowledge of eighty, cleared up the mystery of two murders, and furnished information concerning a number of lesser crimes, including arson and burglary. Lehman was called as a witness in the trial of Angelo Sylvester, accused of one of the bomb outrages. Lehman told the court of the burning of two Brooklyn houses for the insurance and many other lesser crimes. He said the bomb outrages usually brought the man doing the work $50. One robbery in which a Chinese was murdered, he said, netted him $2, while the two men with him, who he said, killed the Chinese, got the same amount. Lehman said he had personally planted seventeen or eighteen bombs causing much damage. "The gang I worked for," he said, "were Black Handers. The boss would write in Italian, demanding money under threats of death. When they did not 'come across' I was sent with a bomb. They usually paid up after the explosion of the bomb. If they did not, we went after 'em again.' Rocco Pucello, another member of the gang, also confessed. He said he participated in the setting off of thirty-five bombs in different parts of the city. "I was paid from $50 to $100 for each bomb that I planted myself," he said, "and I received $25 each time I accompanied other members of the gang who planted bombs." At the conclusion of his cross-examination Lehman was asked by counsel for the defense: "When you placed bombs in crowded tenements did you ever take into consideration the possibility of sacrificing human lives?" "I never did." "Then you have no regard for human life at all?" "It was just the same to me as killing an insect," said the witness.

DAIRY THE DAIRY

PRODUCE FINE MILK FLAVOR

Experiments Conducted at Government Dairy Farm in Maryland.
Favor Feeding Bran and Corn.

It has been asserted by some dairymen that the feeding of crushed oats to cows will improve the flavor of milk. To ascertain the correctness of this theory a series of experiments was made by the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of agriculture at the experimental dairy farm at Beltsville, Md. Six cows were used in the experiment; three were fed a grain ration of corn meal, bran, and cottonseed meal; the other three were fed a grain mixture of five parts crushed oats and one part cottonseed meal. A number of samples of milk from the cows fed these rations were submitted to various persons in the dairy division and they were asked to indicate their preference. In all 50 opinions were passed on various samples. Of these, 16 showed a preference for the milk from cows fed on crushed oats, 25 preferred that from the bran and corn ration, while nine expressed no choice. The results show that in these rations, not only was there no marked difference in favor of the crushed oats as fed to improve flavor, but, if anything, the ration containing bran and corn was more successful in producing a fine-flavored milk.

FALL DROPPED CALVES BEST

Coming at a Time When Little Attention Required Can Be Given Them Progress From Start.

Where cattle are reared under natural conditions, the rule that the young be dropped in the spring will continue, but this practice is not necessarily the most successful in the older sections of the country. Fall dropped calves come at a time when the little attentions they need can easily be given, and they occupy but little space in barn or shed, writes J. R. Jacobson of New York in Hoard's Dairyman. Substituting on the mother's milk or on skim milk with a little grain and hay, when spring comes the youngsters are large enough to make good use of the pasture. The result is progress from the start until fall, when they return to the barn or shed large enough and strong enough in digestion to make good use of the dry provender necessitated by winter conditions.

IMPROVE THE DAIRY CATTLE

Best Plan for Dairymen is to Replace Common Cows With Their Daughters by Pure-Bred Sires.

The best way for the dairymen to improve his herd is to replace his common cows with their daughters by pure-bred sires from advanced registry dams.

The high prices for some of the best dairy animals need not discourage dairymen from improving their herds by the introduction of good blood, for the obstacle can be overcome by neighborhood co-operation in buying new sires.

In all localities where dairymen is a well-established industry there is no reason why the best bred dairy bulls should not be available to the small dairymen. What would be the big price for one man to pay for a registered sire could be made a very small investment by joint purchasing.

Maintaining Fertility.

The man that keeps his share of dairy cows and manages them in the right manner will never find his land losing its fertility. As a means of keeping up the fertility of the soil, the dairy business cannot be beaten. Only a small amount of the elements are taken away from the soil without being returned, and that small amount is very profitable.

Uses for Cement.

Cement is taking the place of other materials for floors and for different forms of farm construction. It has many uses. It is going to be much more popular this year, but it is doubtful if it will ever supplant lumber entirely.

Importance of Regularity.
It is of great importance that strict regularity should be observed, both in feeding and in milking, in order to secure the greatest degree of contentment.

PROGRESS OF SEA ARMAMENT

Launching of Latest British Battleship Brings to Mind Memories of the Past.

With traditional ceremony and amid the general acclaim of the spectators the Queen Elizabeth, first of all the complete oil fuel battleships, was put overboard at Portsmouth dockyard, the great naval station of the British empire. Supplementing as this does the recent launching of the light cruiser Aurora—the first intended as an oil burner in her class—the two cruises mark the advent of oil not only as a fuel, but as the promised protagonists of internal combustion engines as the main producers of speed.

Even in these dull and ditch watery seasons, the pulse must beat faster with the recollections of the progress made in the special case of Queen Elizabeth—and the imagination must respond to the quickened memories of the seavorthies of her great time. Under her blossomed and burgeoned the deeds of the great sailors that roamed the unknown seas, signed the beard of the king of Spain and in the remote and mystical countries of that age laid the foundations of England's world-around empire.

There were Drake, Howard and Hawkins, Raleigh and Humphrey Gilbert, Grenville, who fought the famous fight of the Revenge, and forgotten save to pious sea souls; Willoughby Davis and the captains of the Muscovy company, who carried the queen's flag into polar seas. These, and above all the virgin ruler, are names to conjure with in ancient maritime history—and the bridal of yesterday's ship and tide holds therefore a significance that touches the heart of many sacred traditions and appeals to every lover of sailors and the sea.

KNEW HIM AS THEIR FRIEND

Instinct of Tiger and His Mate Made Them Grateful for Surgical Assistance Rendered.

When one of the tigers in the zoological gardens, Dublin, was threatened with getting in its paw. Rev. Samuel Haughton, M. D., undertook to perform the dangerous experiment of operating on the animal.

The mate of the tiger was first secured in a side den. A net, devised by Professor Haughton, was thrown over the tiger, and he was drawn forward to the door of the cage. Four stout keepers then held the feet of the struggling animal, while Professor Haughton cut away the diseased claw. The suffering beast furiously, but vainly tried to get at him during the operation, but the rage of the tigress looking on through the bars of the side den was much more terrible to behold. She roared, and violently flung herself against the barriers in her mad desire to go to the rescue of her mate.

When the tigress was admitted to the cage, after the wound of her mate had been dressed, she turned up the paw and examined it with touching solicitude, and then licked her mate, as a cat licks her kittens, to soothe him, purring softly the while.

But perhaps the most extraordinary part of the affair was the sequel. A week later Professor Haughton was again at the zoo to see how his patient was getting on. When the animal espied him, he began to purr like a cat, allowed him to examine the paw, and seemed pleased that he should do so. Indeed, for years afterward the tiger and tigress showed themselves most friendly and grateful to Professor Haughton.

Food.

Thomas Mott Osborne, the "voluntary millionaire convict," said of the food in Auburn prison:

"It is fresh and wholesome. Better than that of some cheap restaurants. Better certainly than the Chat Mort provides."

"The restaurant of the Chat Mort is in the Latin quarter. You get a rabbit stew, for three francs, and a table d'hôte dinner provided for 15 cents—vin compris, that is to say, wine included."

"Well, at the Chat Mort one evening, Wychtan complained:

"Waiter, this here billed chicken is no good."

"But the waiter excitedly and volubly replied:

"Oh, impossible, monsieur! The chicken, on the contrary, is very good indeed. On Monday it was roast veal, on Tuesday it was boiled pork, yesterday it was cold chicken, and today it is boiled chicken. It will not be bad till tomorrow, monsieur, and then we waiters will eat it."

Hint for Parcel Post Users.

A correspondent in the Jewelers' Circular complains that many jewelry manufacturers are sending by parcel post what are really sealed packages with an outer wrapping which gives them the appearance of being unsealed. Where there is no occasion for the post office department to open them, these sealed packages go through all right, but if for any reason such packages are opened and the seals discovered, the jewelers receiving them are forced to pay full first-class letter postage. "A few days ago," the correspondent writes, "I had a package sent me in this way. As the sender made a mistake in my name, the post office authorities were not sure to whom they should deliver it, and, hoping to get a clue from the character of the goods, removed the outer wrapper and found the sealed package inside. Instead of nine cents for the five pounds, they made me pay 32 cents a pound, a total of $160." New York Times.

MUCH DAIRYING IN SCOTLAND

Cows Kept Are Practically All High-Grade or Pure Ayrshires—Heifers Are Raised.

In the southern part of Scotland, dairying is almost the sole occupation of the farmers. The cows kept are practically all high-grade or pure bred Ayrshires, and as a class are efficient and economic producers. Heifer calves from the best cows are, always raised, not sold. A good registered Ayrshire cow brings from $125 to $200, and a good grade cow $50 to $100. Cows that are good milkers are kept as long as they are healthy. In many herds in Scotland are cows 20 years old, and still good producers, but the herds which are fed heavily on grain they do not last as long, and the oldest cow is not more than twelve years old. For the American dairymen, the striking features of Scotch dairying are the uniformly good cows kept, the excellent care given them, and the attention paid to feeding them economically on a small amount of grain, never wasting concentrates on cows that are not producing heavily. When we consider the low efficiency of the average cows milked in America compared with the average Ayrshires milked in Scotland, it is easy to see the great possibilities yet untapped by the dairymen of this country.

GLUTEN FEED TO DAIRY COWS

Good Supplementary Food May Be Profitably Given in Place of Bean Meal—Other Good Feeds.

Gluten feed forms a good supplementary food for dairy cows and may be profitably fed to take the place of bean meal in forming the concentrated part of the ration.

Cows eat gluten feed regularly and it may be safely given up to seven pounds a day, though smaller quantities fed as part of a mixture will probably give the better result.

Bean meal and crushed oats have fully maintained their past reputation of being an excellent food for dairy cows, but the mixture is more expensive than an equal weight of gluten feed.

Sugar beet is an excellent food for the dairy cows. There is a little difficulty at first in getting some animals to take to it. It shows a very marked effect in stimulating and maintaining the yield of milk, even when the cows are advanced in lactation.

Cows fed on sugar beets produce a cream more difficult to churn than those fed on an equal weight of turnips and the butter is very pale in color.

Gluten feed is the refuse after the extraction of starch from grain and may be had in two forms, either as gluten meal or as gluten feed, the latter consisting of the hull, the gluten layer and the germ, the hull being absent in the case of gluten meal.

The gluten feed is naturally the lighter fed of the two and may be fed to the extent of seven pounds or eight pounds daily. Its feeding composition approximates fairly closely to beans and peas and it keeps well.

FEW CLEAN MILK ESSENTIALS

Simple Procedures Are All That Is Required to Keep the Dirt Down to Small Proportions.

"All is not gold that glitters." Not all white substances are clean. The cleanest appearing of all foods—virgin white milk—is the dirtiest of all foods. One can eat a good deal of dirt with safety if it is well cooked, but raw dirt is dangerous. One can eat a peck of dirt with safety if it must be cooked first.

Dirt gets into milk from the milkster's hands, from the cow's udder, from the swish of the cow's tail, from the milk pails and milk cans, from the air of the stable, and from any faulty handling after it leaves the farmer.

Simple procedures are all that are necessary to keep the dirt down to small proportions. They are clean hands, clean udder, and clean pails and cans.

Varied Rations for Cows.

Cows should not be kept too long on one particular ration, good though it may be, and the feed should consist of a variety of materials rather than any single one. A sufficient ration must be given for the maintenance of body and the production of milk. It is false economy to allow a cow to produce milk at the expense of her own body.

FOR THE DAIRY

IS THE LEADER-- OTHER FEEDS MUST FOLLOW.

READ WHAT IT IS DOING FOR MR. BEIL:

The Early & Daniel Co., Covington, Ky.

Gentlemen:—Upon your recommendation some weeks ago, I bought a load of Ce-re-a-lia Sweets for the dairy. I started to feed this to my 19 cows and gave it a good thorough test. Since then I have bought several loads of Ce-re-a-lia Sweets and would not be without it. I am getting from 15 to 18 pounds more butter every week since using Ce-re-a-lia Sweets, and my cows are doing better than they ever did on other feeds.

Yours truly, JULIUS BEIL, Ludlow, Ky. F. D. No. 2.

ALL WORTHY A TRIAL

DISHES POPULAR IN MEXICO MAY BE APPRECIATED HERE.

Highly Flavored But Tasty Are All These Recipes—Delicious Chile Sauce—Turkey Dressing Our Southern Neighbors Like.

Chile Sauce.—Take a half peck of ripe tomatoes, three green peppers, three large onions, five cups of brown sugar, one teaspoonful each of ground allspice, cloves and cinnamon. Chop the onions and peppers together, put in a preserving kettle with two and a half cups of vinegar and boil for an hour and a half; salt to taste. Bottle.

Red Chile Sauce (Chile Colorado).—Take six large ripe tomatoes, three tablespoonfuls of brown sugar, one spoon each of ground ginger and cinnamon; half a spoon of ground cloves; one cup of vinegar, half a spoon of ground mustard; one pod of dry red pepper; two large white onions, a bit of clove or garlic. Cook until it thickens. Bottle and it will keep indefinitely.

Chicken With Almond Sauce.—Boil a chicken, either whole or cut in pieces, an onion, a carrot, a bit of garlic, a piece of ham, some fresh sweet marjoram and a half cup of vinegar, the chicken when cooked to be served with the following sauce: Grind four ounces of almonds, heat a little lard with a clove of garlic well mashed, then dissolve a little flour in some of the stock and stir, prevent burning too much. Add a piece of butter and a ladle full of stock. Incorporate the almonds, the ham and parsley, chopped fine; add salt, pepper and a dash of nutmeg. Chop two hard-boiled eggs, dice chopped, put in chicken and boil. This is a dish fit for a king. It is said that it was the one Spanish dish to which the Aztecs took kindly.

Turkey Dressing.—Until within the last few years, after the introduction of the American cooking stove, Mexicans rarely baked fowls, as they prefer their fowls and meats boiled. The following recipe for cooking and dressing turkeys is followed by the housekeepers on all the haciendas (plantations) and not a few city cooks. It is a variation from the baked turkey of the United States. Clean the turkey or fowl, spread with lard and pepper, put on in a large pot, prevent burning too much. Add a piece of butter and a ladle full of stock. Incorporate the almonds, the ham and parsley, chopped fine; add salt, pepper and a dash of nutmeg. Chop two hard-boiled eggs, dice chopped, put in chicken and boil. This is a dish fit for a king. It is said that it was the one Spanish dish to which the Aztecs took kindly.

Date Biscuits.—Mix and sift two cups of pastry flour, four teaspoonfuls baking powder, and one-half teaspoon salt. Work in two tablespoonfuls butter, then add gradually three-fourth cup of milk. Toss onto floured board, roll to one-third inch thickness and shape with small round cutter, first dipped in flour. On half the pieces place a date from which the stones have been removed, brush round edges with melted butter, cover with remaining pieces, press edges firmly together, place in buttered pan and bake in a hot oven from 12 to 15 minutes.

Escalloped Oysters.—This amount is for two. Use one pint of oysters. Roll into fine crumbs a dozen and a half of crackers. Take a quart (enameled or crockery) dish, butter it well, then put in a layer of the cracker crumbs to cover the bottom, then cover with a layer of oysters and bits of butter and a little shake of pepper and salt, and so on alternately, until oysters are used, having last layer of oysters. Then pour over the top the oyster liquor and a cup of milk with an egg beaten up in it. Put in oven and bake about three-quarters of an hour. Delicious.

Parsley Jelly.—This is a very economical jelly and delicious. Take any quantity of parsley, cover with water and boil about half an hour. Then run through the jelly bag, measure and allow one cup of sugar to one cup of juice, add two or three rose geranium leaves, which give a fine flavor. Now boil all together until it becomes as thick as honey.

Jam Roll.—Two eggs, their weight in flour and butter and not quite in powdered sugar, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Rub butter, mix ingredients, lastly eggs. Bake ten minutes, spread on buttered paper, then spread jam and roll.

Maple Candy.—One cup powdered sugar, one-half cup maple sirup, one-fourth cup cream. Boil until a soft ball is formed in cold water. Take from the stove and stir in one-half cup nut meats, stir until creamy, drop by spoonfuls on buttered paper.

About Tea Pots.—To keep tea pots that are seldom used from smelling stinky, wipe them out very dry after using and put a lump of loaf sugar inside, leaving the lid open.

When Beating Eggs.—When beating the whites of eggs always add a pinch of cream of tartar when they are about half beaten. This is excellent, as it keeps the eggs from falling before being used.

NOW THAT AUTUMN IS HERE

Some Good Ways of Taking Advantage of the Season's Fruits and Vegetables.

Instead of the cool greens of summer, so refreshing and grateful during the extreme heat and dryness, in the markets we find the late peach and pear, the pumpkin and sweet potato, the luscious tomato and all the other vegetables and fruits so abundant in autumn.

Baked Beets.—Take well-grown new beets and bake instead of boiling them. Take off the hard outside and you will be agreeably surprised with the sweetness of the beet. Slice into a heated vegetable dish and pour over them two tablespoonfuls of melted butter (not oil), mixed with the juice of half a lemon and half a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper.

Sugar Beet Pudding.—Here is a favorite Carolina dish: Boil the beets until just tender; peel and cut in small slices. Allow a pint of milk to a pint of beets, two or three well-beaten eggs, salt and pepper to taste and a light grating of nutmeg. Put all in an earthen or heavy baking dish that can be sent to the table, and bake until the custard is set in the middle. Serve hot, as a vegetable.

Holland Gabbage.—A Dutch housewife considers this good, substantial dish: Take a small head of white cabbage; cut it in fine shreds; four, tart apples, peeled and sliced; one large tablespoonful of butter or drippings; a tablespoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper, a sprinkling of cheese or nutmeg. Stir over a slow fire for at least three hours. Mix together one tablespoonful of vinegar, a little flour (not more than a level teaspoonful) and a tablespoonful of jelly. Just before taking from the fire add this mixture to the cabbage; let it boil up once or twice, and serve.

MEASURING POTS AND PANS

Knowledge of Just How Much Each Holds Will Be Found to Make for Economy.

It seems that only in catalogues do we know or learn how large our pans are. But the housewife who really measures the quantity held by her pots and pans will be a better cook and more efficient housewife. What do you wish this pot for? Merely to warm a can of tomatoes, or to cook two quarts of spinach? How much should this pot hold to be just the right size for your purpose? Do you know how much, for instance, your yellow mixing bowls hold? Have you ever been deceived, and prepared to use a bowl for a certain purpose and find you had to take a larger one? Are you sure that your frying pan is the best depth for your special purpose? Is it nine, or ten, or eleven inches across? If you know just how big it was, perhaps you wouldn't need two pans, or three or five, if you could estimate just the best depth and diameter for your needs.

Hindu Curried Potatoes.—Cut two large potatoes in cubes about an inch square, place in saucepan with one tablespoon melted butter. Season to taste with salt, cayenne pepper and one teaspoon curry powder. Stir thoroughly, then add one pint hot water. Let cook till potatoes are well done, but not mushy. Leave enough liquid to form a gravy when they are served. If you like a milk sauce an East Indian would use one-eighth cup of milk in a bowl, add one-half cup of cold water and with his fingers he would blend in two tablespoonfuls of flour. Pour this over the potatoes and cook till quantity of liquid is reduced about one-half.

Clean Flatirons.—I always keep my flatirons clean and smooth by a very simple method, writes a contributor to the New York Times. When I finish on washday, before emptying the water out of the tubs, I put the irons in for some minutes. Then take them out and scrub with a soft, dry cloth. I find that done in this way each week keeps the irons in very good order.

Lemon Biscuit.—One cup lard, three cups white sugar, one pint sweet milk, two eggs, pinch of salt, five cents' worth of carbonate of ammonia, five cents' worth of oil of lemon. Dissolve ammonia in milk, mix stiff enough to handle easily, roll one-fourth inch thick. Pick with fork and have oven hot. Get the ammonia and lemon at the drugist's.

Shrimp Wiggle.—Three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour stirred in, 1 1/4 cups of milk; cook until it thickens, add two cans of shrimp and one can of peas; drain the liquid off of each and add them to the mixture, then stir well together; salt to taste; serve on toasted bread. But we have ours with mashed potato.

To Flatten Rug.—Rugs often become turned up at the edges. To improve the appearance, fold an old towel or piece of cloth and ring out of water and lay along edge of rug and then take a flatiron (not hot) and press until cloth is dry, when the edge will be straight and flat as when new.

To Make Carpets Wear Longer.—Go over your carpets once a week with a brush dipped in hot water, which a little turpentine has been added.

Bureau Drawers.—To make bureau drawers slide easily rub the parts that catch with common yellow soap.

DESSERT DISHES OF MERIT

Sure to Be Acceptable Whether the Dinner Be a Formal or Family One.

Green Apple Charlotte.—Pare, core and stew in a very little water six or eight good cooking apples. Press the pulp through a sieve and add enough sugar to make it very sweet. While still hot, stir in an ounce of gelatin soaked in about six tablespoonfuls of cold water. Stir until thoroughly dissolved. Then place in another dish containing cold water and stir until the mixture thickens. Then cut and fold in, a large cup of cream, whipped stiff and dry. Turn into a mold, plain, or lined with stale sponge cake or lady fingers.

Quince Puff.—Pare six good-sized tart apples and a ripe quince. Slice them into a saucepan and cover with half a cup of water. Put the lid on the saucepan and cover with half a cup of water. Put the lid on the saucepan and cook for half an hour. Press through a sieve and return to the fire. Add yolks of three eggs, beaten with half a cup of sugar. Take from the fire and let cool slightly; then fold in the whites of the eggs, and turn into a pretty glass dish and place in refrigerator.

Plum Pudding.—Stew a quart of plums; remove the pits; sweeten to taste and add a little grated orange peel or nutmeg, and pour into an earthen cup; well buttered. Cover with a spoonful of rich biscuit dough made soft enough to drop from a spoon or with the following batter: a cup of sweet cream or rich milk, one egg, a teaspoon of baking powder and enough flour to make a drop batter. Steam or bake for half an hour and turn out on a heated dish with the fruit on top. Serve with hard sauce.

MAKE DISH WASHING EASIER

By Simplifying It This Never Pleasant Household Task May Be Made Lighter.

Simplify your dish washing, thus: With careful handling the dishes may safely be washed in the sink, doing away with the care of a dishpan. To lessen danger of breakage place in the bottom of the sink a wooden protector made of slats. If the sink is not provided with an automatic stopper, a rubber sink stopper can be procured at a small price. A wooden dish rack, the kind that opens like an old-fashioned paperholder, will hold plates and saucers upright. The rack may be lifted out of the sink on a tray, and its contents, that have previously been scalded, allowed to dry there. A three-cornered enamel strainer, on foot, occupies a corner of the sink. Into this, which costs a few cents, plates can be scraped before the dish washing begins. That dish towels may be close at hand, have fastened to the wall close to the sink a wooden arrangement with arms which open out or close in which to hang the towels after they have been washed and boiled.

Sea Foam Rolls.—Scald a pint of sweet milk and add one tablespoon of sugar, one teaspoon salt and butter size of an egg. When lukewarm add one-half yeast cake dissolved in a little warm water and two cups of bread flour. Set to rise three hours, then add flour to knead. Let rise again and then shape into rolls by rolling each one oblong and brush with butter and fold over. Let rise until very light and bake 30 minutes. If wanted at six p. m. mix them about 10:30 a. m.

India Cornst.—Sift together one cup cornmeal, one cup cornstarch, two teaspoonfuls cream tartar, one teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon salt. Beat two eggs very light, add one cup freshly boiled and cooled rice, one-half cup molasses, one tablespoon melted butter and one cup milk. Combine the mixtures. The batter must be very thin and if necessary add more milk. Pour into a deep buttered pan and bake in a quick oven. Serve the moment it is taken from the oven, with sauce or whipped cream.

Stuffed Shoulder Dinner.—Buy a fresh shoulder of pork, have the butcher bone it, stuff it, sew it up tight, roll it in cloth, boil it two hours, take it out of cloth, put it in an iron spider and bake it two hours. Before putting in the oven stick it full of whole cloves all through the rind. It will come out crisp and fine. Have baked sweet potatoes, mashed potatoes, turnip, onions, celery, jelly, bread and butter and mock cherry pie and cheese for dessert.

Tutti Frutti Shortcake.—Bake any ordinary sponge cake mixture in two oblong pans. Spread one layer with a combination of sliced bananas, shredded pineapple and chopped cherries (either fresh or maraschino) sprinkle over this layer pulverized sugar. Put on the second layer of cake. Spread with sweetened whipped cream and cut in squares for serving. This is extremely original and delicious, as one trial will prove.

Sausages With Tomatoes.—Fry sausages a nice brown and arrange in dish in front of fire. Cut the tomatoes into slices with some onions thinly sliced. Fry them, season with pepper and salt. Place them among the sausages and serve hot.

Buttons in Towels.—When making towels that are to hang on nails or hooks, work a buttonhole in each of two opposite corners, then a "hanger" is always ready, whichever end of the towel is taken up.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good. I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 30 years of wonderful success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. We will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

Following an item in "Things Worth Knowing" about the famous St. Petersburg clock, information was received that the clock, which is in Louisville, is a known similar piece of mechanism in the world today. It is at present in the hands of L. Gebhard, one of the oldest clockmakers of the city, at 4th and Green streets, having been constructed by his father.

The clock is ten feet square and three feet deep. By it one may tell the date, day of the week, month and year, the cycle of the sun, the intercalary day of leap year and movable feasts, such as Easter. Ten dials show the time at ten principal cities of the world. The central dial indicates the time showing the variations of the clock from sun time. A twenty-four hour dial gives sidereal or star time.

Other features show the time of sunrise and sunset. A planetarium shows the motion of the principal planets. A globe representing the Earth revolves upon its axis every twenty-four hours. Many other features are also found on this wonderful clock.

Many farmers living near Dawson Springs have announced that instead of putting out a big acreage of tobacco this year they have decided to try their hand at truck raising, believing that in the end they will make more money than they have been making in the past, depending on their tobacco crop.

The fact that there are so many hotels and boarding houses at Dawson makes that city an ideal market for all kinds of vegetables, and in the past it has been necessary to secure much of the number of farmers near Dawson, it is understood, have contracts with the larger hotels of the town to supply them with vegetables during the summer months, the proprietor being glad to enter into such contracts, as they have had much trouble in the past in securing vegetables. It is believed that the experiment will prove profitable to the farmer, and that in the future the tobacco crop in that section will be curtailed in order to make room for truck farming.—Madisonville Hustler.

Whitesburg.—An interesting and remarkable family are the Shells John, William and Mary Shell, others and sister, living on Cut Shin Creek, in Leslie county below here—where they have resided for nearly a century. Uncle John Shell is reputed to be 113 years old and by profession is a miller, operating a water mill on Cut Shin. He is as active as many people at 75. Uncle William, commonly known as "Uncle Billie" is 110. He, too, is enjoying splendid health and is very active for a man of his years. "Aunt Mary Shell," who has never married, is 104, and, like her brothers, is a remarkable personage, well preserved for a woman of her age and has every indication of living many years yet. The three old people live in a radius of about a half a mile of each other. While their age is little known outside of Leslie county, they are without doubt three of the oldest and most remarkable people in the State.

Leslie county people are pretty sure that their ages are correctly given. They think that county from Tennessee nearly a century ago when that county was practically a forest.

"MY BROTHER'S KEEPER"

Was Enjoyed by a Large Crowd Last Saturday Night—Will Be Repeated Next Saturday Night.
A crowded house greeted the local dramatic talent last Saturday night, notwithstanding the very disagreeable weather. Those taking part in the drama had made a diligent effort in their preparation and were thoroughly familiar with the characters they were to represent and as a result they had a delighted audience from the time the curtain went up until the close of the performance. The drama, "My Brother's Keeper," is an interesting play and especially so when the several characters are as well represented as they were last Saturday night. Besides this play they were several other very interesting features staged, none more appreciated than Miss Berry Hall's sweet singing.
The entertainment is being given for the purpose of repairing the local Methodist church building, there being very few members of that congregation at this point. Sixty-five dollars were taken in last Saturday night and about the same amount will be realized when the performance is repeated next Saturday night.
Mr. C. H. Hight is a night and day man and labor to training of those taking part in the play, deserves much credit for the successful man in such "My Brother's Keeper" is being presented. Come and see it again next Saturday night.

Keep Up the Good Work.

It is with considerable interest that I have been reading the different articles referring to our schools, which have been appearing in this paper the last few weeks.
It is difficult to understand why a broad-minded people should be opposed to paying a school tax. It is more in keeping with the duties of his office.
Take into consideration the progress, the limited means at his command, that has been made in the schools of this county in the last few years. When we have a competent man at the head of our schools, we can easily devote every effort to retain him. I take it there are VERY few COMPETENT men in this or any other county, who would accept this position. We can easily devote practically all of their time to the uplift of the schools for $700 per year, barely enough to keep body and soul together.
We cannot expect a great deal of progress from our older folks, and since our future advancement depends almost entirely upon our schools, we cannot afford to neglect our command to keep up the good work that is being done. Verily, "I come not to destroy but to build up."
I, as a taxpayer, cannot thank Boone county very much for what she has done for me in the way of schools, having been obliged to educate my children in other states at a great expense. I take it isn't with a great deal of pride that I can point to my native State for her good schools and good roads.
I hope that a brighter day will dawn in the near future, when I can be proud to say, "I am from Old Kentucky."

St. Valentine's Day.

Next Saturday is St. Valentine's day, the old time of which dates back many centuries. There are several conflicting stories of how it first came to be celebrated. One runs thus: There once lived a Roman emperor, or called Claudius the Cruel. Near him in a Greek temple dwelt a high priest called Valentine. The emperor was so angry with the populace, he broke forth and Claudius called on all the young men to enlist in his armies. They were loath to do, as they were engaged to be married. Claudius became so furious with their refusal that he issued a decree that there should be no more marriages. Then sorrow fell upon this city. Good Valentine was greatly grieved at what had befallen his people, and so one day, observing a disconsolate couple near his house, he came to them secretly, and gladness grew in their hearts. When Claudius discovered that Valentine had defied his decree, he became so angry that he imprisoned him, and the good priest languished in his confinement and finally expired. People grieved greatly and thereafter celebrated the date of his death, February 14.

Warning Against Smallpox.

Bowling Green, Ky., Feb. 9, 1914
To the Health and Fiscal Officials and People of Kentucky:
Disregard of State health warning of this Board in regard to the danger of a wide spread epidemic of smallpox this winter is indicated by its statistics in one third of the counties of the State. The disease, repeatedly stamped out in many counties, has been reintroduced in the eastern section of the State through continued disregard and violation of the law and of the rules of the Board, requiring that no unvaccinated person shall be employed on the point of railroad construction companies and other large employers of unskilled labor. Prompt prosecution by county attorneys will insure enforcement of this rule and will save the counties of the state thousands of dollars.
More than 25,000 cases and 335 deaths have been caused from smallpox in Kentucky since 1899. The care and prevention of this disease has cost our counties and cities $695,000. Loss of business is estimated at $1,500,000. Vaccination, properly done with reliable virus and repeated every seven years, is required by law and no person who has complied with this law has had smallpox in Kentucky. It costs the average man one dollar to be vaccinated and $10 and six to ten weeks isolation to have smallpox. Reliable fresh vaccine points will be furnished by this Board for the use of health authorities for $2.50 per hundred, and are available at any time.
Most of our cases of smallpox are mild but at least it is a loathsome disease. It is especially prevalent and it is unlawful not to be vaccinated. In the presence of its present widespread existence in the State intelligent people should not wait for it to be forced upon them to an evident duty. Law abiding people have already or will now be vaccinated. Others should be required to do so by the proper authorities.
By order of the Board,
John G. South, M. D.
President.
A. T. McCormack, M. D.
Secretary.

Preparing for the Tournament.

Prof. Dix has begun the preliminary work for the educational tournament which will be held here in Burlington the latter part of May. So far it looks like the people of Burlington and vicinity will cooperate with him in the most satisfactory manner in entertaining the visitors.

The land adjoins Mrs. Walton's farm of over 400 acres, and it is said that she got the bargain while it is regarded as a good sale for the Rouse boys. Mrs. Walton will get possession of her purchase in thirty days.

DAIRY FACTS

WAYS OF SEPARATING MILK

Best Method Yet Devised Is Centrifugal Machine and Involves Considerable Outlay of Money.

(By W. L. BRAINERD.)

The three systems of separating milk in most common use are: the shallow pan, deep setting and centrifugal.

The setting of milk in pans or crocks, letting the milk stand from 12 to 24 hours, depending upon the temperature, and then skimming the cream, is known as the shallow-pan system. This is the oldest method of separating cream from milk, and varies greatly in efficiency, depending very largely on how quickly the milk is cooled after coming from the cow and how low a temperature is secured during the creaming process.

The deep-setting system is used almost as much as the shallow-pan. The essentials of this system are cans six to eight inches in diameter and about two feet long, which are placed in cold water. Often a trench is dug in a spring house in which the water stands at the proper height and is continually running through the trench.

This is an effective and economical method, both as to labor and expense of construction. As in the case of the shallow-pan system the real efficiency of this system of separation depends upon the temperature of the milk.

The best method of separating milk yet devised involves a considerable outlay of money and the farmer expects better results from it than any other method, naturally—and he gets them too. Whether a man makes or loses money on his milk is usually determined by his method of separating it. A machine is expensive at the start, but it is worth having.

ROUGHAGE GIVEN DRY COWS

Daily Allowance of Two Pounds of Bran or Oats, or a Mixture With Meal Is Excellent.

(By T. L. HAECKER.)

During the eight or ten weeks that cows go dry, their food should be chiefly roughage. A daily allowance of two pounds of bran or oats, or a mixture of two parts each of bran and oats and one part of linseed meal or corn oil meal, makes a proper feed for a cow near calving. Some roots, cabbage, pumpkins, or squashes are also very good. Highly carbonaceous roughage, such as straw and corn stalks, is not good at this particular time. Such feeds, with cold water, cold drafts, or lying out at night on damp or cold ground, are the chief causes of caked udder or garget.

DAIRY NOTES

Just a little bad cream may spoil a whole batch of butter.

Don't be afraid of overworking your curdcomb and brush this winter.

A promising heifer calf at any kind of reasonable price is safe buying these days.

A comfortable stable reduces the cost of maintenance and increases the flow of milk.

It pays to keep a dairy thermometer wherever cows are milked, whether it is summer or winter.

The dairyman who does not keep an individual record of his cows is not an up-to-date dairyman.

A silo will double the amount of milk produced to the acre and cuts the cost of producing it in two.

Experiments have proven the average milk cow requires about an ounce of salt a day. Heavy milkers should have more.

COST OF WAR DURING 1913

Many Converts Made to Peace Cause by the Peace Struggle in the Balkans.

The Balkan war has made innumerable converts to the peace cause, declares Frederick Lynch in the Yale Review. It has revolved the twentieth century conscience. It has made thousands ask the question that Life asked under its famous picture: "Must It Always Be?" More men than ever have said: "Surely there must be some better way!" Many are saying: "Is what one gets worth the price paid for it?" This change of heart has been noticeable in the daily press.

There has been a distinct progress toward the advocacy of judicial methods during the year. This has not all been due to the exhibition of savage hatred in the Balkans, nor to the inhuman atrocities perpetrated by all concerned, but it was partly come about from the revelation of the futility of it all. Hundreds and thousands of lives have been lost, thousands of homes are fatherless and poverty stricken, the nations are bankrupt and without resources for the future; for the next hundred years taxes will be of abnormal proportions; worst of all there are no young men left to breed a future race. It has all caused many to ask if wars accomplish anything in the long run that could not much better be gained by judicial and peaceable methods. I have a lurking suspicion, from what I heard in Italy last year, that many Italians feel the same way after the war in Tripoli. Everywhere, in England and America, as well as in Germany, many have been asking: "Who starts war scares? Who advocates increase of armaments and big navies?" Yes, "Who originates wars themselves?"

PROBABLY DIDN'T GET JOB

Applicant for Federal Position Made Big Mistake When He Failed to Get Underwood's Name.

Early in Oscar Underwood's service in congress, when Mr. Cleveland was president, Underwood was made referee for federal patronage in his district in Alabama.

One day Underwood was out campaigning some miles from Birmingham, and he stopped at a little village where there was a sawmill that employed a good many hands. He knew the sawmill owner, and was talking to him when a doctor who lived in a village near by, where the postmaster had just died, came along in a buggy.

The doctor stopped at the sawmill. The sawmill boss introduced him to Underwood, but the doctor had other fish to fry, and paid no attention to Underwood, and apparently didn't get his name. He produced a petition and said:

"Now, boys, the postmaster over in our town has just died, and I'm a candidate for the job. I'm getting up a petition to send to Washington, recommending me for the place. I wish you boys would sign it."

Some of the boys did, and finally the doctor handed the petition to Underwood. Underwood looked at it. It was addressed to the Honorable Oscar Underwood, referee for federal patronage at Washington.

"I can't sign this," said Underwood. "don't live in this community."

"Oh, so on and sign it," urged the doctor. "What difference does that make? That young fool Underwood won't know the difference when he gets it—and I want the job."

"The close relation between garment styles and shoe styles is recognized by every manufacturer and distributor of footwear," says a trade authority. "The alt skirt, for example, accentuates the demand for neat footwear."

"The question has of late been asked, 'Why is it that turned shoes do not seem to wear as long today as they did in former seasons?' The answer is, it is the narrow skirt that does it. The well-dressed woman—and this applies to the great majority of American women—is obliged to take twice as many steps as she used to before the introduction of the present style."

Ancient Money.

In biblical days silver and gold coins were struck of such weight that one of them represented the value of a particular animal. Thus the word "katala," used in the Bible, translated "pieces of money," means, literally, a lamb. The Latin pecunia, from which comes our word pecuniary, comes from pecus, a general name for sheep and the smaller animals. In early times coins bore figures of a horse, a bull or a hog, together with the names of the animals pictured. Afterward, as values changed, the figures upon the coins no longer bore representations of their value in cattle, but figures representing a rose, an eagle, etc.

World's Naval Armament.

Only eight years have passed since Britain laid down her first dreadnought, but by the end of this year the approximate number of dreadnoughts in the world, built or building, will be 130. The rate of increase is as follows: One in 1905, nine in 1906, 24 in 1907, 38 in 1908, 52 in 1909, 74 in 1910, 97 in 1911, 126 in 1912 and 160 in 1913.

DAIRY FACTS

FEEDING DAIRY-CALF RIGHT

Youngster Should Be Allowed to Remain With Mother Few Days, Then Placed in Separate Barn.

The calf may be left with the cow for three or four days, or until the milk is fit for use. The calf should then be taken away and placed in a separate stable. If it is possible, as the cow will give less trouble if she cannot see her calf.

By missing one feed the calf will usually be hungry enough to start to drink readily and will usually give little trouble when it finds the bucket contains milk. Four pounds of milk per feed three times a day for the first ten days will give the calf a good start, when a small amount of skim milk may be substituted for a part of the whole milk, the amount of the skim milk being increased, so that when the calf is a month old it is getting skim milk entirely. When the calf is two weeks old the feeds may be changed to two per day, with the amount of milk increased as the calf shows ability to handle it. After three weeks the calf will begin to eat a little grain. An excellent grain mixture for calves is made of corn meal, oats and wheat bran in equal parts, with a little linseed meal added.

To grow calves well they should have just what they will clean up readily at each feed. Plenty of green grass is good for them, but in very hot or very cold weather a fine quality of clover hay will produce excellent results.

Calves should have milk until they are five or six months old for best results. If they are forced to subsist on coarse feeds and grain too young they will be stunted, as their digestive system is not developed enough to handle such food exclusively at an early age.

Cotton-seed meal should never be fed to calves under twelve months of age. It always proves detrimental to development of the young calf. This being true, it is better to feed such feeds as oats, bran and corn, which are known to be satisfactory. To secure good size the animal should continue to grow steadily until mature. If allowed to stop growing, through neglect in feeding or other causes, they become more or less stunted.

BREEDING CRATE IS SAFEST

Wooden Device Is Best Where Heavy Bull Is Used—Illustration Here Shows Construction.

When a heavy bull is used on a small cow or heifer, it is safest to use a breeding crate. This is more satisfactory even with a mature cow. A good breeding crate may be made in the manner shown in the cut. It is made entirely of 2x4 and 2x12 pieces. The bottom pieces are nine feet long. The width between the plank is two feet. The height at the front is 20 to 24 inches, and at the center post, three to three and one-half feet. The length from rear to center post is four and one-half feet.

ACTIVE AGENTS OF DISEASE

Cows Having Tuberculosis of Udder Give Off Tubercle Bacilli In Milk—Why Hogs Are Condemned.

(By H. PRESTON HOBKINS, Assistant Veterinarian, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.)

Milk may convey the active agents of some of our transmissible diseases. Cows having tuberculosis of the udder give off tubercle bacilli in the milk. This milk may be sent to a creamery and there be mixed with the milk coming from a large number of herds, which may be free from tuberculosis. All the milk is then contaminated. Hogs are frequently fed on skim milk from creameries, and this may be the reason why so many hogs are condemned by the meat inspectors every year for tuberculosis. During the year 1912 the bureau of animal industry condemned 42,267 hogs and parts of 24,581 other hogs as tuberculous.

Treat Cows Gently.

To milk a cow requires time and patience. The milk should be drawn slowly and steadily. Some cows have very tender teats, and if you want a well-disposed cow, be gentle in your treatment towards her. A good cow is naturally impatient. With constant irritation, any cow will fall in quantity of milk.

Find Profitable Cow.

To determine whether a cow is profitable or not one must know the amount of milk and butter fat she produces. This information is given through the best associations better than any other way.

When's a Book Not a Book?

In an effort to enlighten postmasters on the conundrum, When is a book not a book, Washington officials have sent out a statement in which they explain the book pamphlet and parcel post ruling which goes into effect on March 16th.

Books on that date will be included as parcel post matter and will take parcel post rates. Nothing, however, was said in the original ruling about pamphlets, which have always taken the same rate as books. With books going at one rate and pamphlets at another, postmasters were worrying over the prospect of deciding what was a book and what was a pamphlet. The term "books" according to the official statement, "will be construed as covering printed books of all kinds, including catalogues, check and receipt books, mainly in print and music books."

Zone weights as well as zone rates as covering printed books mentioned in printed books weighing in excess of eight ounces. The present third class rate of one cent for two ounces applies to books weighing less than eight ounces.

Howard Smith, 20 son of A. W. Smith, of Walton, took chloroform of mercury, with suicidal intent, at a Cincinnati hotel last Sunday afternoon. Domestic trouble is assigned as his reason for taking the poison.

Don't forget the entertainment at Library Hall Saturday night. "My Brother's Keeper" will be repeated followed by "Dr. McBeastem." It is considered one of the best dramas the club has ever presented.

A summer time thunder storm visited this country shortly after dark last Friday, but Saturday morning found this part of the country in the embrace of a groundhog zephyr that was decidedly uncomfortable.

Examination Postponed.

Petersburg, Ky., Feb. 6th, 1914.
Mr. W. L. Riddell, Burlington, Ky.
Dear Sir:—Please do the kindness to insert the enclosed notice in the first issue of the Boone County Recorder (Feb. 12th) and oblige. Thank! If any charge, kindly notify me soon as convenient.

Respectfully,
MISS L. ALDEN, Postmaster.

The notice accompanying the above is as follows:
NOTICE.
Rural carrier examinations announced to be held at Burlington and Grant, Ky., for Boone county, on Feb. 14, 1914, has been postponed to be held on Feb. 23, 1914.

UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, WASHINGTON, D. C. February 7, 1914.

Hon. A. B. Rouse, House of Representatives.
Sir:—Referring to your call at this office in regard to the rural carrier examination scheduled to be held for Boone county, Ky., the Commission has the honor to inform you that it appearing that several of the applicants in the county desire to be examined for fourth-class postmaster, which examination will be held on Feb. 14, the rural carrier examination has been postponed to February 23. By direction of the Commission.
Very Respectfully,
J. A. McLENNY, President.

Dear Mr. Riddell:—I noticed in this week's Recorder that Rural Examinations would be held on the 14th. I called up the Commission and asked them to write me a letter as per my request of over two weeks ago. Hope you are well.
Sincerely,
A. B. ROUSE

On the 16th of January I received orders from the Commission at Washington to hold examination for rural carriers for Grant and eligible list of Boone to be held on the 14th of February, and I wrote to the commission at Washington, also to 6th District Civil Service Commission at Cincinnati, asking them to either postpone the examination or to send someone to the commission as I would like to take the examination for postmaster on that date and I have not received any official notice of the change of date.

OLGA KIRKPATRICK Postmaster.
From the above notices it appears that there has been peculiar official proceedings on the part of the civil service commission and some of the postal officials in regard to the civil service examination for rural carrier and the eligible list of Boone to be held in Burlington by the Burlington postmaster on the 14th inst. The postmaster at Burlington was given an official notice that day, and she at once notified the proper authorities that she desired to take the civil service examination for postmaster on the 14th inst. The examination was held in Covington February 14th, and requested that the examination at Burlington be postponed. Her communications in regard to the matter were treated with contempt in so far as an answer thereto was concerned, although notices of the postponement were given to the public through notices thereof furnished the Recorder by Miss Lou Alden, postmaster at Petersburg, and Congressman A. B. Rouse. To the public the treatment of the postmaster at Burlington is a rank discourtesy that can not be justified under any consideration. The authorities knew the postponement at Burlington was called but seem to have forgotten all about her when the examination was held. It is generally believed, it was done to keep her from taking the examination next Saturday the scheme has been a success.

Next Saturday night, February 14, Burlington Dramatic Club will repeat "My Brother's Keeper," at Library Hall, followed by "Dr. McBeastem" as an after piece. Everything will be in readiness for another evening of pleasure. Reserved seats are now on sale at E. E. Kelly's store. Better call up and secure a seat before they are all gone. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Performance begins at 8 o'clock. Reserved seats 35 cents. General admission 25 cents. Children 15 cents.

Tobe McKim, who had lived until next May, would have been 32 years old, has been missing several days. Now, Tobe was only a cat, but his owner and companion for a score of years, Chas. McKim, is very anxious to know of the whereabouts of the remains, he being satisfied Tobe is dead, that he may recover them and give them decent interment.

Arch Acra, who resides down on Middle creek, was a caller at this office, one day the past week. He is an enthusiastic good roads man and is very anxious to see when not dreaming of the army of groundhogs that bough in his land. He says in the last two years 137 of the kind creatures have been captured on his farm.

In this issue appears the order of the County Court directing that be taken on the proposition to establish a graded common school at Verona. Verona people have been very much interested in educational affairs for many years and that the proposition will carry by a considerable majority there seems to be no doubt.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

Do your churning today.

Diversification is excellent.

Alfalfa does best on manured soil.

British India alone has 34,000,000 head of goats.

The proper way to sow alfalfa is with some form of drill.

Be sure that the male at the head of the flock is pure bred.

Don't try to winter more birds than you have room for, or time to care for.

The man who has already used the silo will tell you whether it pays or not.

Crowded houses are sure to become damp, and hens will not lay when crowded.

Don't expect a good cow to develop from a stunted calf. They don't grow that way.

Feed plenty of charcoal, as it is one of the best things for keeping the poultry healthy.

A scrub hen is not worth much, but she is as good as any for the man who will not give his flock good care.

It is claimed that early-sown fall wheat is benefited when pastured with sheep to keep down the rank growth.

One of the successful ways to grub out white grubs in old sod ground is to enlist a drove of active pigs in the work.

When removing a calf from its dam, do so while the cow is away from her, and she will not associate you with the loss of her calf.

Adding the silo to the farm simply means applying one of the first principles of modern manufacturing industry to the oldest of all industries.

Don't sacrifice your heifer calves to the real fender. Cows are going to be in demand and you may not only have none to sell, but will be compelled to buy.

The boy who has an interest in the farm is usually pretty quick to see the possibilities of the farm and he is not in so much of a hurry about getting away.

Celery banked with earth late in the fall seems more palatable than when boards are used. Do not bank when the foliage is at all moist as this will aid decay.

Newly purchased hogs should be carefully examined for vermin, and should not be turned out with the herd until they are known to be free from these pests.

When you test your cows for quantity, you must also test for quality in order to determine definite results. A cow that gives a greater per cent. of water than others.

The first thing to do after drawing the buttermilk from the churn is to pour a pailful of cold water on the butter and give the churn three or four quick revolutions.

Are you getting the most out of your dairy herd? If not, is it the fault of the breed, the individuals or the owner? It is up to you to work out this problem yourself.

Shredded fodder is much more convenient to feed than the shock fodder. The time and labor saved in feeding shredded fodder about compensates for the time and labor taken in shredding.

Pigs may be taken from their mother as soon as they can eat. By selling the pig young the sow may be relieved of the necessity of nourishing her pigs and soon prepared for the second litter.

Green ground bones are rich in alkaline, phosphate of lime and phosphoric acid, which go to make up the shell. It will pay any poultryman to buy a bonemill to grind bones for his fowls.

Too much emphasis cannot be put upon regularity in the dairy work. Regular hours greatly interfere with milk production, and a long delay in milking must be painful. For best results there should be regular feeding.

Good seed corn is a profitable investment. It is not if you don't select it, and you can select, store, and plant it. At one bushel, how much can you save on next year's crop? The answer is: as much as you can.

Buy a well-made silo.

Pure air prevents disease.

Burn all trash in the garden.

Cowpox are used for cover crops.

Don't let the churning go until tomorrow.

Don't keep your horses in poorly ventilated stables.

The Asiatic or meat breeds are, Brahmas, Cochins, and Langshans.

One thing should not be forgot. Send surplus cockerels and old hens to pot.

Vancouver, British Columbia, is to have a $100,000 factory for preserving milk.

Improper ventilation makes more hen houses cold and damp than rain and zero weather.

Give close attention to the little things and the larger matters will take care of themselves.

The number of cows in the dairy does not mean success always, but it's the kind of cows that counts.

Hand separator cream produces better butter than that separated any other way, say those who know.

Physicians say that a laboring man can do as much work on a diet of eggs as he can if fed on pork or beef.

Parsnips have the finest flavor if allowed to stay in the ground rather late. A frost or two makes them sweeter.

Farming is becoming a more systematized business. This is one thing that has removed the drudgery from the work.

The manure on the farm is the most valuable by-product, but it doesn't do any good as long as it is left in the barn yard.

No hen is going to lay winter eggs if her system is run down, her molt not over, and she is made to scratch her own living.

It is better to raise your own calves, for then you know what you have. To buy up heifer calves promiscuously is an uncertain business.

The good road brings the market nearer your farm and adds materially to the value of the place whether you want to sell or live there.

A palisade fence post is certainly an addition to the road side, but a painted post hidden by nice thrifty weeds is not exactly a good combination.

The housewife who makes good butter, so good that it has a distinction of its own, can always find a ready market and eager customers.

This is a good time to buy that pure bred male, or that breeding pen of fowls. Breeders will sell a little cheaper now than they will be a little later.

Every farmer owes it to himself and his posterity to do a limited amount of experimenting in crop production, stock breeding and the maintenance of soil fertility.

Most of the vilest dirt in milk is stable manure. However disgusting that may be, the real harm is done by the growing bacteria washed from the stable manure.

Keep a good, deep, dry bed under the horse while he is in the stable, day or night, on Sundays especially. The more he lies down the longer his legs and feet will last.

Cows must be fed regularly in order for them to do their best work. We have found regular meals to be a necessity for our own welfare, and the same applies to animals.

Remember that the cow is not exactly like a machine or a mill. You can't put in certain food and get milk of desired quality. The cow makes it in her own individual way.

If you have saved a fine crop of hay and have no room for it in the barn better invest in some canvas sack covers. They will pay for themselves in one or two seasons when hay is high.

Do not ask the cow to make milk and keep herself warm with the same feed. In the early spring the cow should be protected from the storms and then let her use the feed for milk-making alone.

There are not so many purebred bulls among the farmers as there have been in the past. Let us hope there will be more interest in improving the herd. A good bull is the first consideration.

There is nothing to be gained in the long run by breeding a heifer before she is two years old. To offset any profit in an early sale of the heifer, you have stunted growth and the risk of a shortened milk flow for all time.

The experiment stations have been kept busy this fall answering calls for help from the farmers of the grasshopper. A poisoned bran was used in most instances, one treatment costing on an average of $1 per acre, labor not included.

Fertilize Your Tobacco Beds.

It is a cinch that the farmers of Owen county failed in a tobacco crop last year on account of a shortage of plants. The farmers in many instances, half burnt their beds, dug them up and sowed and left them without even ditching them. The heavy rains came and washed them off, this ruined the prospect for early plants. Neglect has done much to make the farmers of Kentucky poor and poor many a prospect for a good tobacco crop.

A good rich piece of sod land not too coarse, laying fair to the sun with the soil scalped up and the ground dug up and then well burned, makes a good prospect for plants. A thirty piece of ground should be avoided. The plants may be rushed and kept green by a weak solution of nitrate of soda put on at intervals of ten days. Plant beds should be well canvassed and weeded often and may be watered once if sown late. It does not pay to sow all the beds at once or in the same place, nor out of the same soil. The ground is at all spongy, tramp it before plants come up. Begin sowing as soon as any of the plants will grow. A long flat piece of timber across the bed to drive on. You cannot take too much care of the beds.

Fertilizers and poultry manures are beneficial; the latter may be the cause of weeds. Every farmer should sow more space in plant beds than he expects to need and do it at the right time. Close, moist land will insure the best results and always watch your beds closely to see how plants are doing.—Owen Co. Democrat.

Rule For Youthful Hog Raisers.

Since the Department of Agriculture is endeavoring to interest the younger generation, particularly the boys, in the breeding of hogs, the hog specialists have felt that these youths should learn the ten commandments of successful hog-raising in order that success may be attained in that phase of livestock raising. In the formation of pig clubs it is the object of the Department to encourage the young men to raise at least enough pork for home consumption, and if possible, a surplus for the market.

1. Do not market in many places. The hog raiser should sell his pork and sausage and can be produced so as to sell much cheaper than beef. A shortage of beef means an increase demand for pork, and it seems reasonable that there should be a ready demand for all the available supply. This means money in the pocket of the hog raiser. Here are the Ten Commandments of Hog Raising which the Department advises the youthful hog grower to bear in mind.

1. The feeding and care are as important as the breeding in producing a good hog. Plenty of feed and good care may make a good hog out of a runt, but lack of it will always make a runt out of a good hog.

2. To make pork cheaply a permanent pasture and forage crops must be used.

3. Young pigs must have a dry bed and plenty of sunshine.

4. Begin feeding the pig as soon as he will eat, and keep him growing until he is mature.

5. Always keep plenty of clean, fresh water where the hogs may drink at any time.

6. Quarantine all newly purchased animals for three weeks.

7. Never keep a female for a brood sow, no matter how well bred she may be, if she will not produce more than four strong pigs at a litter.

8. The more milk a sow will give the faster her pigs will grow.

9. Lice prevent a hog from doing well.

10. Always keep a mixture of charcoal, wood ashes, lime, sulphur, salt and copperas before the hogs.

The present Kentucky Legislature is showing itself up to be about the worst of all the poor ones that have been inflicted upon the State in years past. Pledged to a program of economy and retrenchment the members of the Legislature went to Frankfort with the full confidence of their constituents that they would accomplish something for the general good of the State. Indeed they have spent their time in an almost continuous wrangle, at the bottom of which is the fight of some gentlemen who want to go to the United States Senate.

A few good bills have been introduced that bid fair to become laws, but the disgraceful scenes emanating from a few scheming politicians will more than counterbalance the good that will be brought about by the legislation that will be passed. These alleged lawmakers will shut up shop and go home.—Oldham Era.

The Constitution prohibits the employment of more than twenty-four helpers for the General Assembly for the reason at the very most, twenty-four are all that are necessary. When the present Legislature convened there were 63 applicants for the above twenty-four positions. From the number of forty-four were chosen and then a blanket resolution was adopted giving the thirty-nine defeated candidates positions. In other words, almost three times as many helpers were employed as the Constitution permits, yet the number of Senators and Representatives is the same as when the Constitution was first written. To the fair and impartial mind there can be not any other solution than that the whole proposition is made of politics, pure and simple, all at the expense of the overburdened taxpayers.—Danville Advocate.

KNOCKING SOME.

If the present Legislature will pass an act giving the people the right to amend the present Constitution so as to prevent another meeting of the Legislature for at least ten years, it will carry out the spirit of the amendment, a 90 per cent. vote.—Richmond Madisonian.

We have been running the State's matters in a slipshod way. What ought to be done is to put them all on a business basis, just like a big private concern would do. The improvement would be noted at once and the saving would be marvelous.—Bowling Green Messenger.

This Legislature is making a great blunder about probing into rotten holes and standing for economy, and yet there is not a man jack of them but knows the claim of need for extra help was all buncombe.—Clinton Gazette.

Investigations are certainly expensive. After a city or county, or State gets through paying the salaries of its public officials, then the taxpayers are called upon for a large sum to pay for knowing whether the business by these was properly conducted. These are sad commentaries on the business capacity of our public men.—Mayfield Messenger.

The potency of political pull and the power of machine politics was never better illustrated than in the Price embargo in the Kentucky Legislature. Price requested that his proba resolution was not intended as a reflection upon any member of the Legislature, but he was squelched just the same—presumably for the act of offending "powers higher up."—Hartford Herald.

During the legislative investigation of the Colored Normal School, G. P. Russell, the principal, said the dormitories of the institution "would support themselves if they didn't have to feed so many janitors and other employees. This would likely prove true of other State institutions if a few of the many employees were cut off from the support of the public crib.—Danville Messenger.

"It's a shame to resort to such legislation," declared the president of Schools later Monday when talking about the recent bill in the House to abolish the farm at the State Normal School, Richmond. This farm is the best asset of the school and costs the State nothing to maintain, besides it teaches farming to those who need it—and equips the boys and girls of Kentucky for the best occupation known. More attention should be given to farming in the State Normal Schools.—Winchester Democrat.

The Paducah News Democrat calls attention to the fact that it cost the taxpayers $1,000 for the House to "boast" Representative Price. Just think of it too! The charges made against the House were not made by Price. He merely called attention to what had been charged in the newspapers and said he thought it called for an investigation. Not one of the newspapers printing the charges was "boasted" by Mr. Price who handled the hot end of the poker.—Owensboro Inquirer.

When a legislative committee probes the book trust lobbyists, the Normal School principals, the State College management or the superintendent of eleemosynary institutions, it is done with open doors and under the glaring spotlight of publicity; but when the inquiry is turned to its own membership, in the use of railroad passes, the doors are locked, a few members at a time are sent for, the reporters cannot get a word as to who confessed or who declared themselves innocent.—Owensboro Messenger.

The Legislature asked State Auditor Henry Bosworth to supply the body with a list of all State employees, together with their salaries. Auditor Bosworth responded that it would be impossible to make out the list by the fifteenth of March, when the Legislature adjourns. The Advocate has known for some time that there is an enormous number of employees, but had no idea that the list is so long that the army of employees in the Auditor's office could not make out the list in a month and a half. No wonder taxes are high and the State is in debt.—Danville Advocate.

Many of the recommendations made by Senator Hall's committee we believe, will redound to the good of the State financially and yet not in the least impair the usefulness of its institutions, but rather add to their usefulness. While this is true in the main, we do believe their recommendations as to the Eastern Normal, if carried out, will be a serious error, a result that Senator Hall and his associates do not want.

W. O. Eastern Kentucky, who daily comes in contact with the advantages to a large number of our boys and girls, in but a few years to become the man and woman of the State, and others of our State, can see the benefits already manifesting themselves in many ways; notably, in the better grade of teachers in our country schools, and the high character of our teachers as reflecting itself in their pupils.

As to the sale at this time of Eastern Normal farm, we believe it would be a mistake.—Richmond Clinax.

The better you are, the better you are, and as the money you will get from your flock next year.

PET TORE OFF HIS CLOTHES

Sea-Lion the Cause of Considerable Embarrassment to Owner and Trainer of Animals.

A sea-lion looks much like a seal, but it is larger, has a longer neck, and holds its head very upright. One of the largest sea-lions ever kept in captivity was once owned by Mr. Carl Hagenbeck, who buys and sells wild animals. It was a good-tempered and amiable that Mr. Hagenbeck's father took a great liking to it, fed it himself every day, and made a great pet of it. At last it became so tame that it followed him about the grounds like a dog, stopped when he stopped, and then flopped on again after him in its clumsy way, giving peculiar little cries from time to time, as if to ask him to stop, or not to walk so fast.

One afternoon, when a good many people were looking at the sea-lion, Mr. Hagenbeck took some pieces of fish in a basket, and went into the inclosure to feed his pet. He threw one piece of fish at a time, and the sea-lion caught them in his mouth. Each time he caught a piece of fish he would gulp it down hurriedly, and then give one of his peculiar cries, as if begging for more. When he had eaten more than half the basketful, Mr. Hagenbeck thought he had enough for a meal, and taking up the basket, turned to go out.

But the sea-lion did not agree with him. Quick as a flash, he rushed up to Mr. Hagenbeck, caught hold of his coat with his sharp teeth, and with one wrench, not only tore it off his back, but took a large piece of the shirt with it. He then caught hold of the basket in the most greedy manner, and began to gobble up the rest of the fish as quick as he could.

He was very good-tempered, and he and his son, who had called out the basket was quite empty; then he went over to his master, as if to ask if that were all. But poor Mr. Hagenbeck was standing with his back to the wall, for it had been stripped bare of clothing, and before so many people he felt ashamed. He called out to his son to bring him an overcoat, and when that came, he put it on, still standing with his back to the wall, while the sea-lion hovered about him, evidently puzzled to know what was the matter.—Youth's Companion.

SURGICAL WORK OF THE PAST

Researches Have Shown That Art Was Known Many Thousands of Centuries Ago.

Dr. F. M. Sandwith, lecturing at Kensington (London) Town hall, said the first surgeon of whom he could find any record lived in the fifth Egyptian dynasty, and must have been court doctor to the Pharaoh Sahura, some 4,000 years before Christ.

The first surgical implements of which we know anything were splints found in the Nubian desert. In one place a graveyard was found, and here were remains of bodies with fractured limbs that had been set with bark splints. One was a right thigh bone that had been broken and was still held in position by a workman-like splint and bandages. All the knots were true reef knots, and the wrapping showed how the strips of palm fiber cloth were set just as a good surgeon would set them today, so as to use the full strength of the fabric. In other cases bodies were found with compound fractures, where the broken ends of the bone had broken through the skin. Death seems to have come to them very quickly after an accident of this kind, for no trace of healing of the bones is to be found.

Salt Germs. Salt, of all things, we deem germ-proof; but, as a matter of fact, salt is one of the most germ-ridden foods we eat.

The speaker, a physiologist, sighed and resumed: "You know gray salt, the 'gross salt' that gourmands eat with boiled beef? Well, that salt is made gray by the addition of mud, plain mud. Hence it always contains from 6,000 to 75,000 bacterial colonies per gram.

"Refined salt, white salt, is almost as bad. It lies, you know, in the refinery under a blanket of clay, and its refining consists of a sea-water bath, after which it is dried and heated to the point of crystallization. All this fails, of course, to remove from it its 2,000 or 3,000 bacterial colonies per gram that it imbibed from its clay blanket.

"The pure-food people should look to our salt. The white, clean stuff is alive with germs. Yet it would be easy to refine it so as to make it germ-free."

Her Anniversary Gift.

"When I make gifts to people," said the girl, "I always try to find something appropriate, or something for which I've heard them express a liking. But not long ago my little system went wrong. The parents of a dear friend were about to start for California on the anniversary of their wedding. Remembering their fondness for Stevenson, I bought a copy of 'Treasures with a Donkey' and had it sent out to the girl's mother. It wasn't until they were well on their journey that I realized what I had done.

"Fortunately they both have a sense of humor and I had a breezy little note of acknowledgment from the father, in which he said he was glad to know that I was sustaining my reputation for appropriate gifts. I never expect to hear the last of that one."

MAKING HARBOR OF REFUGE

Congress Plans to Rob Cape Hatteras, to a Large Extent, of Its Perils.

"Gale off Hatteras" is an entry made by the captains of coastwise sailing ships on almost every voyage. For years Hatteras has been a place of terror, if not to the mariner, certainly to the passenger under his charge. The old storm cape, however, is soon to lose a part of its fear. Man cannot stop the storms, but he is going to provide for vessels to escape their fury.

Sea captains notoriously are reluctant when passengers ask them questions. No old sailor ever has been willing to admit to any of his passengers that Hatteras is any worse than a hundred other places on the coast, and yet he knows that it is about as bad a sea spot as can be found anywhere in the whole broad expanse of ocean. So, while the questioners are told that off Hatteras the water will be as calm as anywhere else, captain and crew always make things snug for a gale or worse when approaching the sea off the headland.

Congress has appropriated $1,400,000 for preliminary work on a Hatteras sea wall, which is to be a mile and a half long, 20 feet wide at the top, and 45 feet high.

It will be the guarding wall of a harbor of refuge, into the lee of which vessels can run for shelter when the storms rage. The wall will rob the Hatteras coast of some of its terrors, and with them will pass some of the "interesting excitement" always felt by seagoers when they approach the water zone which always has been one of tumult.

Little by little man is trying to make waves of those who go down to the sea in ships. He never entirely can conquer the ocean, and he knows it. It is perhaps the one thing in nature which is absolutely untamable. The shipwrecks off Cape Hatteras have numbered thousands. The sea wall will provide means to save lives and property, but the winds off the old storm cape still will rage and on occasion work their will.

LAST FLOWER OF AUTUMN

Like Nothing Else That Blossoms It Will Make Its Appeal to the Traveler.

The sky kissed the earth in consolation; for its flowers were faded, their reds, yellows, purples and pinks overriden by the grim drab of brown. The sweet, soothing plaint of the wind was long since spent; its will now was determined and it played roughly among things dead. The crust of the earth, no longer mellow, was dry and finely crumbled to dust. It covered the coat of the stranger who traveled the highway, causing him to blink his eyes.

For these and for other reasons perhaps the sky kissed the earth in consolation.

As the traveler lifted his eyes his footsteps halted. Beside him the tangled grass of the bank was pale, even colorless, yet stirring through it was the magic of a slight tatter and a glint of color more blue than that of the bluebird's wing. It was the spot where grew the blue gentian.

No other flower bore it company. Alone it had crossed the borderland of frost, and for the traveler it changed the sad look of his surroundings into those regal and appealingly sweet. He sat down to rest and his heart beat with joy, his pulses quickened and his brain grew clear through the nearness of the flower that had held the blue of the sky when the earth was kissed in consolation.—The Craftsman.

The Reason.

William J. Burns, at a banquet in New York, told a number of detective stories.

"And then there was Lecoq," said Mr. Burns. "Lecoq, late one night, was pursuing his homeward way when, from a dark, mysterious-looking house set in a weed-grown garden, he heard loud shouts and roars of 'Murder! Murder! Murder! Help! You're killing me! Murder!'"

"It was the work of an instant for Lecoq to vault the crumbling fence, tear through the weedy garden and thunder at the door of the mysterious house.

"A young woman appeared. 'What was wanted?' she asked politely.

"I heard dreadful cries and yells," panted Lecoq. "Tell me what is wrong."

"The young girl blushed and answered with an embarrassed air: 'Well, sir, if you must know, ma's putting a patch on ma's trousers and he's got 'em on.'"

"Pyrrhos."

Jane Addams while walking in South Halsted street the other day, was approached by an excited woman, evidently a Greek. The woman, unable to talk English, was gesticulating frantically and pointing to a house in Ewing street.

"Pyrrhos!" she exclaimed. "Pyrrhos!" "Yes?" said Miss Addams gently.

"Pyrrhos!" repeated the woman, tugging at the other's sleeve.

Finally a great light broke upon Miss Addams. "Pyrrhos" is the Greek word meaning "fire," and the woman was simply trying to tell her that her house was on fire.

An alarm was sent in. The blaze proved to be only a small one and the fire department experienced no difficulty in putting the "pyrrhos" out.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

HELPFUL HINTS.

A small rubber mat in the kitchen where one stands is a great rest to the feet. A few folds of carpet will answer as well if the rubber mat is not a possession.

To make sauces, fillings or other dressings which require flour or cornstarch, mix the dry ingredients together well before adding the liquid, and a smooth sauce will always result. Flour or cornstarch will be smothered if added to melted fat and well mixed before adding the liquid.

To clean and toughen a broom, dip it in hot salt water a few times, shake out and hang up. Letting a broom stand on the straws will ruin its shape.

To keep sparrows from roosting or nesting, stuff the places with rags dipped in kerosene. In a day or two they will give up the places.

A small bottle of chloroform in a fur chest is a fine germ killer. An ordinary cork will allow evaporation, or a few punctures may be made in it.

Put a pad of oil cloth or any cloth over the corners of the table before placing a new cloth on, and the corners will not wear. The best cover for a kitchen table is zinc, and when one has once had it done it will last for years. Just simply wiping it after every day's use will keep it clean.

When making a present to a friend, if the box is an attractive one which holds it, the gift is more keenly appreciated. Cover soiled boxes with pretty wall paper and use the one which harmonizes with the gift to be enclosed.

How many housekeepers know the value of the little scrub brush which may be bought for two cents? It may be used to scrub the potatoes, clean the grater, in fact it is indispensable for this, for cleaning greasy pans, and the drip pan of the gas stove. In fact, there is no limit to its usefulness.

If the closet has a cassimere which rubs off, tack cheese cloth all around. It will save the clothing and may be kept fresh and clean.

When traveling with a child, and the napkin is not pinned, tie a knot in a corner and slip it in the neck of the child's dress. This device will keep it from slipping.

Lace curtains may be mended very neatly by putting a piece of net dipped in starch and applying them to the torn or worn places. After it is dry, trim the edges carefully.

A piece of gum camphor in the silver chest will keep it from tarnishing.

A FOLLOWS consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds, shrouded by little statements and philosophies and divines.

With consistency a great soul has simply nothing to do. Speak what you think today in words as hard as cannon balls, and tomorrow speak what tomorrow thinks in hard words again: though it contradict everything you said today.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

The following are recipes which may not all be new, but are all good and worthy of a place in your cookery library:

Currant Bun.—Take four pounds of bread dough, one pound of currants, one-half pound of sultana raisins, one-half pound of seeded raisins, one pound of sugar, one pound of butter, one-quarter of a pound of blanched and chopped almonds, one-quarter of a pound of chopped citron, one tablespoonful of ginger, the same of cinnamon, one-half tablespoonful of allspice and one grated nutmeg. Mix the butter and the dough well together, then take one pound of the dough, roll it out to size for the top. To the remainder add the spices and fruit, lay it in a buttered pan and put the rolled piece on for a cover, wetting the top of the dough before placing it. When browned a little, brush over with a beaten egg.

Daisy Cake.—Mix together a cup of butter, a cup each of brown sugar and white, and a half cup of sorghum. Add half a cupful of grated chocolate to a half cup of boiling water; mix with one teaspoonful of soda, four eggs, one cup of sweet milk, four cups of flour, one pound of raisins, one teaspoon of cream of tartar, one teaspoon each of cinnamon, cloves and allspice. Then add the whites of the eggs and a half cup of nutmeats. Bake in a loaf and ice with brown sugar and water cooked to the soft ball stage and poured over eggs white. Beat well and spread over the cake.

Roast Shoulder of Mutton.—Make the following stuffing: A cupful of bread crumbs, half a cup of suet, a tablespoonful of parsley and mixed herbs, the grated rind of a lemon and the juice, one-half a teaspoon of salt, a few dashes of pepper and the yolk of an egg. Wipe the mutton with a damp cloth, take out the bones, spread the stuffing and sew up, leaving the string loose at both ends, to draw out easily. Place on a rack with boiling water underneath, and cook 2½ minutes for each pound. The bones are put into the water in the pan the broth will be well flavored and that liquor can be used for the gravy.

A delicious quick dessert is made of buttered bread in slices laid in a baking dish and any desired canned fruit poured over. Bake until well heated.

Some people still persist in throwing banana peels on the sidewalks endangering the life and limbs of pedestrians. It is a very careless habit and it is just as easy to throw the peeling on the streets as to throw them on the pavement. Recently one of our citizens sustained a severe sprain on his back by slipping on a banana peel.

Mr. C. Greene and wife, of Verona, were the guests of his sister, Mrs. C. Green, cashier of the Equitable Bank and Trust Company, Sunday. Mr. Greene has been in the city for the past year and is well liked by all who know him.

The Civil Service examination for fourth class postmasters from this section takes place at Covington, Saturday, Feb. 11th. There will be a small army of contestants from Walton alone to take the examination. While the race for the Walton office is rather spirited, the feeling prevails and all are "up in the air" as to who will be the successful one. The German says all think they have "prospects" of appointment.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Cook and daughter, Miss May, moved last week from Walton. New York. Mr. Cook, who has been in the employ of the L. and N. Railroad in bridge construction has been promoted to the position of bridge inspector of the L. and N. bridge spanning the Ohio river between Newport and Cincinnati, taking the position made vacant by the death of the former inspector Dick Staten. Mr. Cook and family made many friends here while residents of Walton who regret to see them leave but were glad to hear of Mr. Cook's promotion.

Died—Will Fling, age 60, at his home in White Tower, Kenton county, Wednesday, Feb. 10, after a short illness from pneumonia. Mr. Fling was a former resident of Verona about four years ago. The remains were brought there Friday and interred in the New Bethel cemetery. He leaves a wife and one son. We mourn the loss of a kind husband and father. He was engaged in the merchandise business at White Tower previous to his death. He was a man well liked with many friends.

A new business enterprise of some magnitude was organized at Walton last Friday—The Walton Lumber Company; capital stock $10,000. All the stock has been subscribed for but $1,000, and that is spoken for by several parties. There was no trouble to dispose of the stock as the stockholders are composed of some of Walton's best business men. They propose to keep a full line of building material of all kinds, also lime, cement, brick, etc. A building will be erected soon on the site, opposite the L. and N. Railroad depot. The building will be equipped with the latest machinery to make a great deal of their product. There is every indication that the new enterprise will be a success as the stockholders are all business men and if they go after it, the following is the roster of the concern elected on the 10th of February: President, J. C. Bedinger; Directors—Eli Rice, H. C. Diers, Wm. Brittenhelm, E. L. Ratcliff, Dawson Chambers, R. L. Ratcliff will occupy the position as general manager as he is thoroughly conversant with the lumber and building trade. The company held another meeting on Wednesday night to perfect its organization.

We chronicle with deep regret the death of R. A. (Dick) Staten, at his home in Newport, Ky., of cancer of the stomach, after a long suffering from that dreadful disease. He had been operated on with the hope of effecting a cure, but the disease advanced to that stage and was of such a malignant character that surgical operation was of no avail. He was in his sixty-fourth year at the time of his death and leaves a wife and two daughters to mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate father and a devoted and continuous friend. Mr. Staten was inspector of the L. and N. Railroad bridge between Cincinnati and Newport. He had been in the employ of this railroad almost continuously since it was built, having been carpenter and bridge inspector with this company since 1871. He and his family lived in a comfortable home of many years ago and his kind and jovial disposition endeared himself to a great many in Walton who sincerely mourn his death as he was liked by all who knew him for his genial disposition and kindly nature. He was a valued member of the Walton Knights of this lodge No. 106 and Walton lodge of Off-Follows No. 133. It was his request before death that his funeral be conducted by these orders and a number of both the lodges attended his funeral and rendered their beautiful funeral services at the grave side. The funeral took place Monday Feb. 8th. Interment in Evergreen cemetery near Newport.

Frankfort, February 9.—The proposed legislative investigation of the penitentiaries in Kentucky has been called off. The prison labor contractors at the Kentucky Reformatory today decided not to make a formal complaint. They were advised by the attorney general that the Legislature was without authority to grant the relief sought.

Judge Flem D. Sampson, of Barbourville, was severely criticized in the report of the impeachment committee of the House. Hog Feeding.

The life of the hog that makes money for his owner is to be one continual round of pleasure. With him there should be but two issues: viz: eating and sleeping. It is very well while a hog is growing to let him work for his own living, as it were, by risting in the pasture, doing a certain amount of rooting for bait, but as the finishing season comes on everything should be done to contribute to laziness and inactivity. The fattening hog always relies on a change of bedding. What man is there who has not felt more than paid for the labor involved in cleaning out a hog pen, and bedding down the same simply by the smiling countenance of his hogs when they were admitted to the newly cleaned quarters. If animals under any circumstances can possibly experience a feeling of gratitude, and express it outwardly, we believe that it is done under these conditions. A bush of well-hogs can have an enormous lot of fun working over a clean bed, and we believe that it contributes immensely to the thrift and it aids much in fattening.

Their good time can be added to still more by introducing some variety into the ration. Straight corn will not make as cheap gains as corn supplemented with a little oil meal or tankage. These supplementary foods are exceedingly palatable and they are very rich in flesh forming qualities. They will answer every purpose when fed, and if shelled corn is used instead of ear corn, simply place the supplementary food in the troughs. A feed of soaked oats or ground barley occasionally will be relished and it tends to whet the appetite and keep the hogs on full feed without running the risk of making them stale.

In matters of this kind one can be guided a little by his own appetite. None of us would care to be compelled to live on the same thing meal after meal; and we have noticed that successful swine men act as if the hog were built a little on the same plan. It is simply another way of giving the porker a good time. Variety in the ration means that the surprise will keep a bunch of hogs ever eager for the next meal, and while they are in this condition, it may be trusted upon that they are making the best use of the food in their grain.—The Homestead.

MRS. W. W. LAKE

Tells Others How to Get Strong and Well.

Mrs. W. W. Lake of Aberdeen, Miss., says: "The gripe had left me in a weak, run-down condition from which I suffered for some time. I tried different remedies but nothing seemed to do me any good until I took Vinol, from which I received great benefit. My cough is almost entirely gone and I am strong and well again, and I am glad to recommend Vinol to others who suffer as I did."

Mrs. Lake's recovery was due to the combined action of the medicinal elements extracted from cods' livers—combined with the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron, which are contained in Vinol, and her cough disappeared as a natural result.

We guarantee that Vinol will do all we claim and will pay back your money if Vinol does not satisfy you. P. S. Stop scratching, our Sarsaparilla stops itching. We guarantee it.

Graves to Be Marked.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Graves of Confederate soldiers in all parts of the United States are to be marked by the Federal Government under the terms of a bill which has passed the Senate and which is now awaiting report from the House Committee on Military Affairs.
For this purpose $50,000 is appropriated, the unexpended balance of an appropriation for marking graves which was voted first in 1896 and has since been extended from time to time.

The bill, which has passed the Senate, contains the following provisions:
"That hereafter the provisions of said act shall include and apply to the graves of Confederate soldiers and sailors lying in all national cemeteries and cemeteries established by the Federal Government or localities throughout the country."
The last part of this provision is construed to mean that the graves, whether in private cemeteries or elsewhere, will be marked at the expense of the Federal Government.

The act also provides that the compensation of the commission in charge of the work of marking graves shall be fixed by the Secretary of War. Senator Du Pont, of Delaware, who reported the bill from the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, and who urged its passage, said that it was intended that the appropriation should be continued in force until the balance shall have been expended.
Because of the new labor undertaken, in consequence of the bill from the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, and who urged its passage, said that it was intended that the appropriation should be continued in force until the balance shall have been expended.

CARD OF THANKS.

The members of the Methodist church of Burlington wish, thru the Recorder to express their high appreciation of the many kind services shown them in the endeavor to mark the graves of Confederate soldiers in the new building. The young folks of the town and vicinity gave of their time and talents heartily and in an unusual pleasing manner each one acquiring himself in a very creditable manner. The musicians, too, were a very great acquisition to the entertainment. The solos, quartettes and instrumental music were greatly enjoyed by the audience. The audiences were beyond the expectations of the management both evenings being so inclement. However, the proceeds were very gratifying indeed. Then, too, several very generous private donations have been given to the cause. We endeavor to give a good show and can only hope that the public are as well pleased as we are.

FLOOD WARNING

Sounded by President of National Drainage Congress Smacks of Yellow Journalism.

Under great scare headlines Monday's and Tuesday's Cincinnati Enquirer promulgated the semi-idiotic babblings of Edmund T. Perkins, president of the National Drainage congress.
Valued because funds have not been forthcoming properly to present the needs for adequate flood protection along the Ohio Valley, Perkins gave to the press predictions of a catastrophe of last year's disaster. Seventy cities, says he, along the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, show a deficiency in the average precipitation of 15 inches of rainfall. Because of this shortage to date Perkins argues that there must yet be an abnormal rainfall in this territory during this spring to equalize conditions and has sent notice to Ernest P. Bicknell, national director of the Red Cross society, "to be prepared to cope again with flood havoc such as that of last year."

Such utterances are vicious little less than criminal, tending to excite a panic among the public mind and disturb business relations.
Granting that there is a deficit of one and one-half or even two inches as given at certain points it does not follow that the same must be made up within the ensuing few weeks. It is just as probable that the deficit may be hog saw his shadow on February 2d there will be six weeks of winter weather as that because of this small deficiency in the rainfall there will be no March floods.

The writer recalls that during the winter of 1899 there was not sufficient snowfall in the Ohio valley to overflow the "bottoms" above the city, and we didn't have a flood, either.
Wednesday's metropolitan dailies note that Perkins has written a series of articles in the flood districts, asking financial aid for the National Drainage congress to prepare for floods likely to devastate the country in the winter of last year. To the writer this looks like a mild form of blackmail. "Shell out or we'll soak you again," seems to be the inference from his communications.

Weather Forecaster Davenport of Cincinnati takes issue with Perkins. Mr. Davenport says that the fact that the precipitation in the flood districts this winter is more unfavorable than favorable to a recurrence of such floods. "It is only when the soil is thoroughly saturated that surface water will flow into the rivers and streams and bring about flood conditions," he said.—Lawrenceburg Register.

Buffalo Preservation.

One of the hardest things to understand is the frantic interest many individuals and not a few newspapers take in the "preservation of the American buffalo."
There has been for some years a well-organized and well-financed organization known as "The American Bison Society," which exists for no other purpose than to keep the buffalo alive. This organization reports that there are now 3,453 buffalo in the United States, an increase of 19 per cent. during the past year. It is said that there is reason to hope that this number will continue to increase in moderate proportions, although there is, of course, no reason to hope that the buffalo will ever again become numerous.

The Western newspapers seem to take but little interest in these proceedings, but in various portions of the country there are frequent references to the terrible calamity that will come upon the country if all the surviving buffalo should die.
None of this is reasonable. It is true that when the revered "Pilgrim Fathers" to use the words of the Boston Transcript—landed in the New England country, the buffalo in this country was very large. Not only the then deserted plains of the West were filled with these animals, but a large portion of what is now occupied by the Middle States also.

The American buffalo went the same way as the forest, and with better reason. As a meat producer the buffalo does not compare with the steer. The hide of the animal was valuable, but repeated efforts showed that the animal could not be raised in domesticated, and that it did not pay to try to raise them. As the Western plains were cleared for cultivation, the buffalo faded away, and the loss was not serious.

None should object if the American Bison Society desires to continue to spend its money upon a few scattered herds of buffalo. Nothing very valuable is secured by keeping a few survivors alive, but some other people spend money with even more results. Anyway, we have more sympathy with the American society than with those who persist in shedding briny tears over the hard luck of the American Indian.—Ex

The sleigh out of which Virgil Gaines has been getting so much pleasure the past week, was sold last night to the late William Walton, when he sold out to go to Missouri. It is about the best sleigh on the road in this locality.

The Shackelford Bill.

The Shackelford bill which appropriates $25,000,000 in aid of good roads has passed the House at Washington by a large majority.

The bill is not ominous so far as the amount it carries is concerned, but rather because it is the forerunner of other appropriations. Twenty-five million dollars is not so much, as Federal appropriations go. Scattered among the various States it will be more drop in a bucket so far as road improvement is concerned. This is a big country, but it is well viewed with alarm any proposition which tends to establish a good roads "pork barrel."

Some of the newspaper comments on the bill voice this fear. The New York World speaks of it as "a measure to debauch congressional politics, to demoralize the spirit of self help and to promote grafting in public work." The Philadelphia Press thinks the appropriation "will do no good, but may be a positive disadvantage if it causes any relaxation of State and local effort to improve the highways." The Buffalo Express calls it a "grab and the New York Press characterizes it as "pork packing." The Kansas City Star thinks it will set back the cause of real good roads building by years and years, and that the appropriation would be "a politicians' slush fund with more dirt in it than any dirt road in the country ever held." The St. Louis Post-Dispatch says it puts the States in the poverty stricken and undemocratic attitude of begging the Federal Government to do the work which they ought to do themselves.

The Brooklyn Eagle expresses the opinion that the states should "make ample provision for their own roads out of their own treasuries." The Providence Journal says the bill suggests "a bid for backwoods votes" and "is not to be regarded without alarm." The Worcester Post expresses great anxiety over the fact that "the money the measure calls for is not in sight."

The Philadelphia Record thinks that the Government is going to spend the money it ought to be spent by the War Department in order that the country may get the maximum of reconstruction with the minimum of political manipulation. A similar view is taken by the Philadelphia Inquirer, which says, "if the work is to be undertaken at all it should be done scientifically and along a well-merited plan." The Atlanta Constitution says that so far as Georgia is concerned the benefits are "open to doubt." The Baltimore-American thinks the proposal is "of tremendous significance."

The St. Louis Republic declares the gravest question involved is "the choice between two methods of taxation for good roads—the direct, which we see and feel, and which corrects its own tendencies to become too heavy, or the indirect, which we neither see nor feel, but whose burden is no whit lighter for this fact."
The Shackelford bill evidently is not so strong with the press of the country as it is with the members of the lower house of Congress.—Courier-Journal.

The New Currency System.

Washington, February 15.—Skepticism as to the success of the new currency system recently created by Congress under the spur of President Wilson has about reached the vanishing point. Critics of the law which is designed to loosen New York City's control of American credits and distribute national power, as it ceases to be concentrated in the metropolis no longer occupy the firing line. Pessimism is yielding to optimism. The confidence displayed by such men as the President, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and other men conspicuous in supplanting an obsolete banking and currency system with one more attuned to modern exigencies and needs seems soon to be justified.

More than 90 per cent of the national banks of the country have filed formal applications for membership in the Federal reserve system, and on the list are the greatest banks of New York City, which were most reluctant to reconcile themselves to a relinquishment of a part of the tremendous power they have exercised hitherto. With the vast majority of them in a strong or position with respect to reserves than at any time during the past year, the success of the new system which will be inaugurated in the spring is assured. The alacrity manifested by the banks in complying with the practically complete absence of actual or threatened surrender of national charters, and the hurriedness of inquiries from state banks regarding the requirements of entrance, mark a signal triumph for the system before even the Federal reserve cities are named, or the reserve districts outlined.

Hubert and Carl Rouse struck a bad day for their sale, but they had done everything they could to make the crowd comfortable. A great many people passed through Burlington enroute to the sale.

DAIRY

DAIRYING ON BUSINESS BASIS

Separate Account Should Be Kept With Each Cow to Ascertain Her Exact Cost and Profit.

(By G. L. MARTIN.)

In order to put dairymen upon a business basis every farmer needs to use the milk scales, the tester and the record book. The successful business man has a ledger to guide him in his transactions. Every dairymen needs to enter a separate account with each of his cows so that he may have an indicator to tell him at the end of the year just how much feed each cow has consumed, the amount of milk produced and the percentage it tests.

Too many farmers of the country are keeping the scrub cow, feeding and milking her twice each day, 14 times each week, 60 times each month and 720 times each year merely for the pleasure of her company, when a portion of this time might well be expended in estimating the feed, weighing and testing the milk and crediting the same to each cow.

Many good dairymen squander 30 minutes each day gambling with the scrub cow when three minutes' time with the scales, tester and record book would put the head upon a paying basis and money in their pockets.

The keeping of records is a business transaction and means the essential difference between knowing and guessing, pleasure and drudgery, profit and loss, success and failure.

SOUR MILK BY ELECTRICITY

Inspirits and Invigorates Bacteria as Alcohol, Cocain or Strong Tea Affects Man—Work Quickly.

To many persons the curdling of milk in a thunder shower is a mysterious and unintelligible phenomenon. Yet the entire process is really simple and natural. Milk like most other substances contains millions of bacteria. The milk bacteria that in a day or two under natural conditions would cause the fluid to sour are peculiarly susceptible to electricity.

Electricity inspirits and invigorates them affecting them as alcohol, cocaine or strong tea affects men. Under a current's influence they go to work with amazing energy and instead of taking a couple of days to sour the milk they accomplish the task completely in half an hour.

It is not the thunder in the storm that sours the milk it is the electricity in the air that does it. With an electric battery it is easy on the same principle to sour the freshest milk.

MAKING BOTTLES OF PAPER

Receptacles Made of Waxed Cardboard Are Advocated as Most Sanitary for Delivering Milk.

Milk bottles, made out of waxed cardboard, are being advocated as the most sanitary receptacles for the delivery of milk. Such bottles are only used once, and then should be thrown away by the housewife, says the Popular Mechanic. The bottles come from the manufacturer nested as shown in one of the drawings, and wrapped in dust-proof paper. The milk dealer breaks the wrapping, sets out the paper bottles, fills them, and snaps the cardboard caps in place. There is no expense due to breakage, or of collecting again, and no washing labor.

Dairymen Holds the Key.
Improvement in the quality of dairy products must begin with the producer, so the dairymen holds the key to the situation. Every effort of the consumer, the distributor or the manufacturer, will be of little ultimate benefit. While payment on the quality basis is established, a premium of three to five cents per pound of butter fat is given for cream of highest grade. Such cream can be produced best by paying close attention to cleanliness and immediate and thorough cooling.

Jersey and Guernsey Cows.
Jersey and Guernsey cows produce less milk solids other than fat, thus enabling them to turn larger proportions of their food and energy into the production of the desired product, than cows of breeds which yield a larger quantity of milk deficient in butter fat.

Sunshine Is Necessary.
Plenty of sunshine is necessary in the dairy barn. Remember that windows are no more expensive than lumber and they are worth a lot more when the health of the animals is taken into consideration.

TEACH THE CHILD SUCCESS

Experienced School Teacher Makes a Suggestion to the Mothers of Her Pupils.

Every mother knows how easy it is for a child to become discouraged during the first weeks of school.

"I wish," said a most successful teacher to a mother one "first" day, "that I had all the mothers here instead of the children this morning. Yes, I mean these forty mothers. I would like to tell them just one thing—the difference between success and failure."

"In the school room as well as elsewhere the difference is just a difference of attitude."

"No general ever won a victory who did not go on the battlefield determined to win."

"In the home is where we form our habits," she continued, "and the habit of success is not a difficult one to form. The most important thing for the mother to do is to believe in her child, see that his tasks are such that he can do, and then openly recognize his success."

"No child who has had such home training ever makes many failures in his life. To teach this idea of success necessitates continuous individual work in many cases, and a thorough comradeship with the child."

"At the end of the month," she said, smiling hopefully over the roomful of workers, "I will know them all, but until then—yes, I wish I had the mothers here this morning."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

AMUSEMENT FOR THE TOTS

Game That Will Keep Them Interested During the Long Evenings of the Winter.

Now that the evenings are drawing in, the children will want some new game to play after supper is over. They will all enjoy the "Cut-Out Family Game," which is played as follows:

Get a big pile of illustrated journals, catalogues and picture papers, and give each child a blunt-pointed pair of scissors, a large sheet of newspaper or brown paper, and a pot of paste or a package of paper.

Then read or tell them some simple little tale of every-day life—not a fairy story, but an ordinary, every-day tale of boys and girls and their fathers and mothers. As you go along, stop from time to time, and let the children hunt through the illustrated books for pictures to suit the occasion.

Perhaps you will begin in this way: "Once upon a time there was a little girl called Susie. She was seven years old and she had long, curly hair. Now, look through your books and find a picture of Susie."

Then the children will spend five happy minutes in finding Susie, cutting her out, and fastening her at the top of the blank sheet. As the tale continues the sheet will become full of portraits of the different people whom Susie met, the pet animals she had, and so on.

It will take an hour or more to fill a sheet, and the children will be quietly and happily occupied all the time.

Club Swinger's Collapse.
Tom Burrows, the champion club swinger, just failed Saturday night at Earl's court to complete 100 hours of continuous club swinging.

He began his task at 7:10 Tuesday evening. Saturday morning he developed sprain of the right ankle. He was compelled to throw the weight of his body on his left leg, and it was the additional pain and fatigue consequent on this that led to his collapse at 8:45.

During the evening it was clear that he was near the limit of his powers of endurance. Two army doctors who were in attendance decided to allow him to fall asleep in the ordinary course of nature, rather than risk a mental shock by stopping him forcibly. Thus he was allowed to totter along until he lurched against a table. His wife caught him in her arms, and Burrows fell asleep, continuing in a deep slumber, despite the cheers of the crowd, while he was carried to a taxicab and driven home. He had swung his clubs for 87 hours and 35 minutes.—London Daily News.

Some Accomplish.
Charles Hough, a young man of youthful appearance, slight in build compared with the woman, and gray as to hair, was at the piano. He understands perfectly how best to accompany the prima donna. He knows that volume is required, what shading is desirable, how much of it, and he follows every motion of the singer to detect her next requirement in the matter of piano support. He not only knows these things, but he does them. This is why he is such an excellent accompanist. He was evening clothes. The piano was finished in black, one of the low concert type of instrument, with a little outward turn, on the top of which the singer rested an arm occasionally.—Exchange.

Cruel Tale.
A dreadful story is in circulation about Harding Davis. Mr. Davis, as everybody knows, is a wit. He was, therefore, terribly annoyed the other day to hear that a brother author had spoken unfavorably of his witticisms. Coming upon his brother author he said: "My boy, I hear that in a house where other people were kind enough to consider me witty, you declared that I was not so. Is this true?" "No, not a word of truth in it," the other answered cheerfully. "I was never in a house in my life where anybody considered you witty!"

DAIRY

QUALITY OF DAIRY PRODUCTS

Sanitary Barns, Clean Cows, Milkers and Utensils Are Among Some of the Most Important Essentials.

(By J. M. DAVIS.)

Quality is the keynote of a permanent success. Though the individual dairymen may doubt this, its truth is established when the dairy business, present and future, is considered. Failure to realize what constitutes success, refusal to meet the obligation which every dairymen owes to the dairy industry, and competition are at least three conditions which have brought upon dairymen the great problem of how quality can be raised, for the place has been reached where improved conditions must prevail.

Every person who handles milk or cream knows that they are perishable products, which require special care. Failure to observe the necessary precautions in handling these products must therefore be considered as a disregard of the principles underlying quality. Were dairymen to apply themselves closely in two particulars, over ninety per cent of the quality troubles would disappear, and this raised standard would be accompanied by a corresponding gain in net profits. Cleanliness and low temperatures are two features the abuse of which leads to low grade dairy products. A large percentage of the bad flavors in milk, cream and butter are the result of dirt, manure, hair and flies getting into milk during the milking process, and this becomes the more serious for the reason that 75 per cent of these contaminating materials go into solution and can be removed in no way, but remain to cause the development of unfavorable fermentations which produce bad flavors in the market production.

MILKING COWS BY MACHINES

New York Station Announces Result of Experiment Extending Over Period of Four Years.

The problem of milking by means of machines is still a long way from being solved, but we are much nearer the goal than five years ago, or even a year ago. More people are thinking about mechanical devices for lightening the work of tired hands and aching fingers than ever before.

The New York experiment station has announced the result of a milking machine experiment which covered a period of over four years. The experiments show that, including the time required to get the machines ready and to wash them after milking, cows can be milked by machine in 3.56 minutes per cow, as against seven minutes for hand milking. A higher class of help is, however, necessary to milk machinery successfully.

DAIRY NOTES

To conduct a dairy farm at a profit we must feed good cows.

The old-fashioned tin strainer has been relegated to the scrap heap.

Aim to have the best of dairy products, and market them where quality counts.

The man with enough feed and cows coming fresh this fall has no kick coming.

If the cream is still warm after separating don't put the lid on the can down tight.

Strong brine thickened with soft soap makes a good mixture to rid cows and calves of lice.

The farmer who allows his cows to huddle for themselves on the parched pastures is making a mistake.

The sunshine is a good helper in washing milk things; but it does not pay to throw the whole job on the sun.

Hard and swollen udders may be greatly relieved by patient rubbing. If any liquid is used, let it be warm water.

The preservation of butter depends more upon the thorough removal of the buttermilk than upon the presence of salt.

A government expert says increase in production of potatoes may be increased by getting seed carefully bred up.

Take your County

Some forty years ago today or thereabouts the writer and John Koeler were in the business of living together and becoming near as possible one individual. It is a hard thing to do, and rarely happens, but in this particular case it did occur. Owing to the natural law of growth and development our business prospered so we have rarely become as one. We have cultivated the habit of loving one another and loving ourselves as we would our neighbors until we have literally fulfilled the scriptural injunction, from our view point, "love thy neighbor as thyself." We have tasted the sweets of life from the same drinking-cup, walked under the shadows of sorrow arm in arm, run the gauntlet of danger with hobgoblins on one side and Jack-o'-Lanterns on the other. We have become so closely interwoven that it is hard for our intimate friends to tell us apart. Our hopes, aspirations and expectations have focused on the same center until our eyes see alike, our ears hear alike, our senses of smell and taste are alike and our hearts beat as one. How lovely it is that two individuals by the subtle influence of congenial thought, harmonious action and peaceful, every day living together, may upset the rules of arithmetic to become as one.

The writer now returns to the text to find John enjoying a good supper at the Adams home where we left him two weeks ago. Of course he had not been eating all that time, and if his story is true he ate with an appetite that needed no coaching, for he tells us the food tasted better and more like mother's than any he had eaten for a long time. Supper over, dishes washed, milk done, wood brought in for morning, all gathered around the great fire place in the setting room. Readers of the Recorder who are familiar with Scott's beautiful and interesting story of "Ivanhoe," will recall his pen pictures of saxon fillets with their great fire places piled high with blazing logs that threw forth to every nook and corner of those large rooms light and heat sufficient to make the Saxon his guests warm while at the same time they brought out in bold relief their splendid forms and kindly faces. Gathered in the sitting room were Mr. and Mrs. Adams with their children—there was enough of them and they were young and healthy enough to delight the most radical "anti race suicide" advocate in the State. Along with Uncle John McAttee, James McAttee Charles Chambers and Theodore Chambers. John held the position of extreme danger, being in the rear but was there all the same. The blazing logs in the great fire place burned brightly, throwing off and upward great clusters of sparks while warmth and comfort filled the room. In all the world there is no place so delightful to sit by or so pleasing to see as the grand old open fire with its hissing, spitting and sparkling blaze, with its unusual roar and never ending need of more wood.

The kindly faces of Mr. and Mrs. Adams were an inspiration to the guests and every one discovered to be pleasant and agreeable. Uncle John McAttee was in a reminiscent mood and entertained with stories of the Mexican War. He told of trying to carry a cent of captured goods the distance of 170 miles on his back. For days he lugged the load toward the coast, intending to bring the goods home, but after wearing his back bare of skin and his patience to the quick, he abandoned the task but never heard the last of it while the war lasted. When asked how much the goods were worth Uncle John smiled and said they were worth close to $5,000—think of it. To illustrate the force of imagination over one's actions he told of a soldier comrade who came down to a wharboast that their steamboat was lying along side of and believing the distance from floor of wharboast to deck of steam boat was five or six feet, lay down and rolled himself off feet foremost to find the distance only 15 inches. He told of the Mexicans as soldiers and citizens, as soldiers they knew no discipline, no law or order if it was possible to avoid it, fighting all the time but using his own time to do it in and his own methods for doing it. As a citizen he was short on intelligence and slow to patriotism, 75 per cent. of them either slaves to their own vicious habits and passions or else slaves to some other Mexican laziness, he declared was a cardinal virtue and as a social proposition they exceeded all limits being boastful and loud toned, dispute the word of Moses and the prophets, spend days and weeks in a fight without fulfilling any of the obligations of a guest, &c. In conclusion Uncle John smiled and said one redeeming feature of the Mexicans was their easy entertainment, they would fill them up on red hot soup, while hot tamales, cigarettes and cheap literature then wake 'em up in time for the bull fight and all was serene as a Mexican told in August. Students of Mexican history today know that Uncle John was stating facts as to the Mexican for after sixty years they are practically the same.

Through the efforts of State Treasurer Tom Rhea and the generosity of John C. C. Mayo, of Paintsville, the Confederate soldiers of Kentucky entitled to a pension payment at this time will receive their pension in money, nearly $100,000 in cash, instead of being compelled to accept an interest-bearing state warrant. The majority of the Confederates would have been forced to sacrifice the warrants to a claim shaver. Mr. Mayo has consented to take the warrants without even a discount.

The Negro and the farm should be as inseparable as Daniel Webster said that Union should be, because the blessed rain from the heavens descends upon the just and the unjust and the black and the white, with the same kind of power.

In this country there are classes and the masses and the caste, and the negro happens to be the caste, so he has to look to mother earth and her related occupations for his livelihood. He should not be discouraged because it was the white farmer that blazed the path of civilization and made the wilderness bloom as a rose. The white husbandman drove back the fierce Indians and felled the forest and built the great cities and gave prestige to this great country.

The Negro should be taught that the soil has made all nations great, and if a nation has not this backing it soon decays. He should be taught that in this beautiful southland is his natural home and that in her confines he has an opportunity to make himself an useful husbandman. He should be taught that there is as much dignity in soil tillage as there is in any other kind of work. The colored man should be taught that there is as much educational value in examining a corn stalk root as there is in examining a Latin verb root, and more money in it. He should not be taught to discuss the war debt but to pay the grocery debt.

There are two places that the colored man should adroitly keep out of—the State prison and Congress. The colored woman's mission is to prepare the product and any by-product to the market, she can be eaten. She should be taught that by good cooking the health and happiness of others depends. Upon good cooking depends good digestion and good nature of persons.

I would certainly hate to be associated with persons whose stomachs are so weak that they cannot digest and badly cooked food. The nearest way into a man's graces is through his stomach, so we see that cooking is one of the best services that a man can give to his fellow man. Let us take our place in the line of march and keep it and honor it, then there will come the new heaven and the new earth.

The figure "New Heaven" means better condition and more harmony between the races. This, a necessity, must come through the little red school. This is the only fountain from which the Negro can drink the living waters of knowledge, and it is the only feed it with that kind of an education that he can harmonize into a brick wall or put in a hog in such manner as to make fat and grease, and that will round it up so as to make it tempting to a buyer's eye.

I hold if a Negro will tie his knowledge in a ear of corn so it will hogs fatten and so that corn bread will be sweeter and learn more of it, he will receive more homage than all scholars and more respect than all the politicians dating the existence from flood going straight through the christian era. I would not have the white people to send a cent to foreign missions but I would have them to help the poor Negro at their very door to help him in his efforts to get a concrete education, for too much abstract education, generally hinders an inferior race. Finally, let us as separate race, be united for the betterment of the State as the fingers are united to the hand, but in all things purely social let us be separated as the fingers are separated on the hand.

TUTT, Principal of the Burlington colored school.

Increase in Population.

The population in the last twenty-five years in the United States has gone from fifty million people to one hundred million or double. With the increase on population there has been an increase in the demand for farm products. At the present rate of increase in the population, what does it mean? Only this: That there must be a change in the system of farming. The time was once when a piece of land could be cleared and cultivated as long as it would grow crops, and then it was cleared a new field. That day has past. The farmer must now become a land-builder. The time was once when it was said that an education was not needed to farm, now it has become a known fact that a man must have an education to become a successful farmer, breed of stock, raiser, State university and the statistics of the government has shown this to be true.

Boys have formed corn clubs and doubled the production of corn; girls have formed canning clubs and the public has been surprised at what can be done with a home canning outfit. The system has changed and the world is on the move the man who keeps up with the procession must not be a dead one. He must read papers, upon his profession and test out his line of business, securing the best methods and results. Germany, Ireland and Holland have shown the way in farming. The people of the United States must follow else the high cost of living will go higher. Let there be a change of system.—Ex.

Writing in Leitch's Weekly about the cost of road construction, Harry Wilkin Perry lays down the proposition that every road built wholly or in part with funds supplied by the State or Federal Government should have a length of life equal to the life of the bonds issued to raise the money to pay for it.

Incidentally Mr. Perry does not believe in building macadam roads which, he says, are no longer suited to the traffic of the modern age. He pronounces in favor of concrete as the best and cheapest foundation material, and says, in fact, that no other material is needed to make a good road. He gives some instances of the lasting qualities of concrete. In Beaufontaine, Ohio, 2,500 feet of concrete streets put down more than twenty-one years ago shows not to exceed one-half to three-quarters of an inch wear of the surface where the horses travel, and have cost less than $50 for repairs in that time. Four years ago five miles of road was built at Saugerties, N. Y., half of concrete and half of macadam. At the end of two years the macadamized portion had to be completely repaired. The concrete section has been in perfect condition throughout.

The concrete roads in Wayne county, Michigan, of which much has been written, cost a little more than $150,000 a mile, this including grading, drainage and culverts. These roads lead out of Detroit and bear the heaviest traffic in the State. The cost of main tenance of the sixty-odd miles built the first four years did not exceed $1,000 for the entire period, of which less than $300 was for repairs to the concrete, whereas the average cost of maintaining and repairing the macadam and other roads in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey and New York State for the eight years from 1905 to 1912, inclusive, are calculated to have averaged $608 per mile per year.

California is building cement concrete roads at $7,326 a mile, while New York is paying $11,000 a mile for macadam roads. In Wisconsin concrete roads are being built at less cost than macadam roads can be built, the bids actually running from $1,000 to $300 less per mile, and the cost of the concrete averaging $7,260 a mile, including culverts and everything but bridges. Cuyahoga county, Ohio, has 400 miles of brick roads. They cost $16,000 a mile, but some of them are twenty years old and they have cost practically nothing for maintenance.

Mr. Perry thinks the question of the cost of repairs is more important than that of the initial cost of construction. His advice is that "water type of road construction is decided upon, the one feature that should be considered of paramount importance is permanency." This advice is sound and certainly every one will agree with him that a road built by a bond issue ought to last until the debt is paid. It ought, in fact, to last longer, but even concrete roads require repairs after a period of years, and in most instances repairs on all roads are too long delayed.

For the average county roads which cost from $11,000 to $15,000 a mile are out of the question. There are counties in Kentucky where the cost of macadam roads can be built as low as $2,000 or $3,000 a mile, owing to abundance and convenience of material, but some of those counties are not building any roads.—C-J Automobile Dope.

Hurrah! Automobile insurance rates have been reduced. Keep the motor warm in winter and there will be less trouble in starting the car. The Boston fire department has ordered 15 autos, including touring cars and roadsters. The Detroit and fire department operate 150 motor vehicles, according to a recent count.

An ordinary carbon-burning foot warmer placed under the hood will keep the engine warm for hours. A blanket over the hood will help. The eastern conference of insurance companies at their last meeting, passed a resolution to cut the insurance rate on automobiles 15 per cent.

The length of the Lincoln highway, to be built from New York to San Francisco, is 3,383 miles. The halfway point will be near Cozook, Nebraska. Broken piston rings will attract attention by decreased compression and by an excessive amount of oil in the combustion chamber and on the spark plugs. When you can't get gasoline use sulphuric ether and kerosene. One pound of the sulphuric ether to five gallons of kerosene will make a mixture that will cause the engine to run. The ether ought not to cost more than 50 cents retail.

George B. Marx of Aurora, Ill., ran a car for 5,500 miles and only gave the car one overhauling. He didn't have to monkey with the motor at all. That surely is an example of where a purchaser got his money's worth.

Catching Fish.

W. L. Stephens, of Richmond, neighboring and Mr. R. H. Ryle, who resides down on Gunpowder creek, were callers at this office one day last week when the sun was shining bright and warm, which brought to Mr. Ryle's mind the fact that when the weather would permit, many fine fish are being caught by the anglers in his neighborhood.

High Price For Furs.

A young man in Michigan shot a black fox and has bought a farm of forty acres with the proceeds of the sale of fur. A black fox pelt commands from $800 to $1,000 in the market. Doubtless black red ones or gray ones, but at $800 a head they are worth a little more than even "The Queen of Kansas" as Foster Dwight Coburn called her in his famous poem. Conservation of fur-bearing animals is late in beginning, but is now being undertaken in many places as a private enterprise. One result may be a lessening of the now moderate price of furs. A woman nowadays pays $100 for a set of furs made of dyed muskrat pelts and called "Hudson seal." Mink and skunk hides are selling to fur dealers at prices five times as large as they brought a few years ago. Seal skin is out of the market practically. Even coon and possum come high. The "varmint" which have been ruthlessly hunted to their holes for a century are beginning to be appreciated as having economic value. In Michigan beavers are being propagated, and beaver meat, probably because it is rare, is being sold at the enormous figure of $1 a pound when the hunters and trappers are allowed to take a limited number of animals under license. Formerly beaver carcasses were left for the other "varmints" to pick to pieces.

Revenue For the State.

The lower branch of the Kentucky Legislature began yesterday the consideration of the bill making certain changes in the system of taxation of Kentucky and seeking to provide sufficient revenue for the State. The bill was explained to the House by Representative Elwood Hamilton, of Frankfort, one of the ablest and most active men in the Legislature. As presented the revenue bill is tentative. Mr. Hamilton making it clear that the committee in charge of the measure will welcome any criticism and suggestion, and is not blindly committed to any of the new features as proposed.

This is a matter that it pays to go slow with, but unfortunately it none too much time remains for consideration. The life of the Legislature is now half over. A vast accumulation of bills fill the calendar of the session. Some of these bills are bad, but some are wise, and necessary, as, for instance, the bill putting into effect the change of the county government in Louisville. These can be disposed of quickly; others, such as the various plans for workmen's compensation, call for exhaustive analysis before any final action is taken.

As things stand, it is almost inevitable that either the revenue and taxation bill will not be given the attention it deserves, or that the other side of the coin, legislation will be hurried through or neglected. Anything—even an extra session to consider revenue and taxation matters alone—is better than a mad rush to the end of the session, for in such a rush laws invariably get through that have not been properly considered, and, in many instances would not have been adopted had the Legislature had the time to consider what it was doing.

As for the revenue and taxation bill, as proposed by Mr. Hamilton the best, and in fact the only thing, the State can do is to wait until the various sections of the long and complicated measure are explained by the discussion that may soon be expected to begin on the floor of the House. The bill has been conscientiously drawn to meet a very difficult situation. The State needs more money, both to pay its debts and to provide for the future. But we cannot afford to cripple development at a critical time by piling up taxes simply to get revenue. The bill must be carefully discussed, and urgent as is the need for haste, it is better to wait until it is fully understood. Louisville Post.

Testing Skimmilk.

Skimmilk should be tested occasionally for butter fat to make sure that the milk and cream are completely separated. A different type of test bottle is required for testing skimmilk since the fat contained in the skimmilk is usually not sufficient in amount to fill one division on the whole milk bottle. Skimmilk bottles are arranged with double necks. The milk, acid and water are added through the larger tube, the smaller tube being intended for the fat column.

The same quantity of skimmilk is taken for testing as of whole milk, but slightly more acid is required. The amount of acid should be about twenty cubic centimeters. In adding the acid to the skimmilk it is best to add the acid in two or three different quantities, each quantity being mixed separately with the milk. After the milk and acid are mixed the skimmilk bottle should be placed in the centrifuge and whirled at full speed for seven or eight minutes. Hot water is then added and again whirled at full speed for three or four minutes. The sample should be read before being allowed to cool. Each division of the scale on the skimmilk bottle usually represents five hundredths of one per cent. These large divisions are again divided into five smaller divisions, representing one hundredth of one per cent. Skimmilk testing five hundredths per cent fat would contain five-tenths pound, or one-half pound, of butter fat per thousand pounds.—From Bulletin of Ohio Experiment Station.

The Contract Man.

The world at large is the lover of a contract man. A man who knows what he wants and is a man of his word. Many a man fails to succeed because he has the reputation of not making good. He fails to fulfill every jot and tittle of his obligation. You dodge the fellow who is irresponsible, no matter how many good contracts are to be had the fellow who is not a contract man fails to get them and who is to blame? He has earned and made his own reputation, has brought all upon himself and his family. The community soon learns to know a man in this case the old saying is true that "You might as well kill a dog as to give him a bad name." A man may fail to fill a contract in many ways he may agree to trade farms conditionally and violate some or all of the stipulations, he may agree to cultivate so much land in crops and only half do it. He may hire out for so much money, soldier on the job drawing his pay for incompetent work and default his employer. Any of these things will soon give a man a reputation that will ruin him and make it almost impossible to succeed. No man can not afford to be a contract man, filling at all times every part of his contract. You are not fooling anyone, the world knows what you are; it has you labeled and you cannot run away from it. Better build a reputation for eternity. A man known as a contract man has much the advantage of the fellow who is known not to be one.

LEARN SECRETS OF NATURE

Form of Enjoyment That Has Not Been Appreciated as It Ought to Be.

To a recent newspaper symposium on the importance of the study of natural history Ernest Harold Baynes of Meriden makes an interesting and valuable contribution.

His experience as a traveler and lecturer convinces him that very few people, comparatively speaking, enjoy nature as they might and as they would like to do, the bar in their way being their ignorance of our common birds, our common quadrupeds, our wild flowers, trees and shrubs.

As he points out: "Most forms of amusement cost money, but to the man, woman or child who has been given a real interest in minerals, wild flowers, insects, reptiles, birds or mammals, a five-cent fare to the country is the price of admission to the great wonder hall whose roof is the blue sky and whose caretakers are rain and the wind and the sun and light. And by their association with the dwellers of the forest and the moor they not only derive personal happiness but become better citizens. In the first place they will become more healthy, physically, because they will practice walking, the sweetest and most useful form of exercise known to man, under conditions of air and light most conducive to health and body; mentally, because association with nature means association with the sweeter things of life: those things of all others most conducive to health and purity of mind."—Concord Evening Monitor.

SOMETHING WRONG WITH 'EM

Alfalfa Sage is Lost in Wonderment at the Antics of Those Yaw Boys.

"My profoundest sympathy goes out to the Yaw boys in their terrible affliction," vouchsafed the Alfalfa Sage. "They came of a large and gumptionless family, every member of which is noted for his persistence in hunting trouble and his uniform success in finding it. They invariably stand in the path of on-rushing motor cars when looking aloft to see if the geese are flying southward. They delight in arising in the wee sma' hours to drink cough medicine out of a bottle of poison so thoroughly mixed with honey and a bloodhound are necessary to find it. As soon as the hearing of one of them becomes impaired he will go miles out of his way in order to promenade on the railroad track three minutes before the fast mail is due. A few days ago I read with pity of one of the Yaw boys who came clear to Kansas City from Nebraska for the sole purpose of giving a young man of engaging manners change for a $40 bill. Of course this particular Yaw knew that there never was a $40 bill, but still he cheerfully faced the change and then gazed in amazement at the engaging young man who grabbed it and fled as the crowd flies. What is the matter with those Yaw boys, anyhow? Have they no brains at all, or are what few they possess hopelessly petrified?"—Kansas City Star.

Playing Safe.

A prominent Baltimore politician is being chaffed by his friends over an incident of the recent primaries in that city. A certain voter, who happens to be a rabid anti-organization man, had been out of town for some time just preceding the election, and accordingly was not quite sure which candidates had been put up by the organization and which were against it. As he approached the polls in this doubtful state of mind, he encountered the aforementioned politician.

"Now, you're going to be a good fellow, ain't you," was the politician's greeting to the voter, whom he did not know, "and vote for every one on this sample ballot? They are all good organization men." "Sure," was the voter's prompt reply as he took the proffered paper and entered the booth. "The rest was easy," he says, in relating the occurrence. "I just voted for every one who wasn't on the ballot. Riggins gave me."—New York Evening Post.

Dislike Foreign Phrases. While the use of forcible words is steadily increasing among Germans, the government of Saxony has taken measures to stamp out, as far as possible, all words of alien origin. In an education bill passed by the Saxon Landtag last year it was enacted that purely German substitutes are to be used in schools for the "Fremdenwort" (foreign words) which have hitherto been officially recognized. Instead of "geographie" the children are to learn "Erdrkunde" (literally, earth knowledge), while "Kurschreibung" (art of short writing) is to be replaced by "Kurzschreibung" (teaching of space) are to figure in the curriculum in place of "stenographie" and "geometrie." Henceforth a delinquent official will no longer undergo "suspension," but "vorläufige Amtsenthebung."

Never Say Tip.

A member of the Anti-Tipping society dined in a popular restaurant the other evening, and when he paid his check there was 95 cents change coming to him. The waiter, thinking to make it easy for the customer to extract a tip of any size desired, brought back three quarters, a dime and two nickels.

The anti-tipper counted it over carefully, then took another nickel out of his pocket and added it to the change in the tray, saying: "Here, take this chicken-feed to the cashier and get me a dollar bill for it."

SURELY FOR HIMSELF ALONE

Could Be Little Doubt as to Where the Sweet Little's Love Was Centered.

The pork-packer's daughter was won. Amid the sumptuous trappings of wealth and luxury she plighted her troth with the author who had crossed the seas to engage her heart.

"Are you sure, my darling," he murmured, as they stood together beneath the gorgeous chandelier, "that you love me for myself alone?" "Charles James Edward," she answered, "I am sure."

"Then listen." With courtly grace he led her to a seat. "My beloved," he said, tenderly, "I have purposely refrained from telling you about my family, in order that you might be governed in forming your estimate of me by considerations of personal worth."

"Charles James Edward!" A world of love and trust spake she in those simple words. "Of course, sweet girl, you know I am of noble lineage?"

A warm glance and a gentle pressure of the hand formed her reply. "And you are aware that my people are among the proudest of the proud. But are you prepared to know—"

He bent low and whispered—"that the blood of a king courses in my veins!"

"Yes!" She smiled engagingly. "I am not surprised. I am informed that there is some dreadful scandal about every one of these aristocratic families. And did it get into the courts, dearest?"

Yes, it was for himself alone that she loved him.—Flick.

FAMOUS WALNUTS ARE GOING

Woodmen Cutting Illinois Tract of 400
Acres That Has Never Before Been Touched.

Woodmen entered the Makemson tract of timber four miles east of Danville, October 1, and began cutting the world's largest forest of virgin walnut timber. For the first time in the memory of the oldest inhabitant woodmen were allowed to enter the 400-acre tract, which was closed to the inspection of all save the close friends of Hiram Makemson during his life.

The forest land came into the possession of the Makemson family by means of a government land patent. By both Hiram and his son it was well stocked with game. The tract was well timbered, but not even stock was permitted in the wooded park until after the death of its jealous guardian, some months ago. In settling up the estate a sale was ordered by the court. An Indiana firm of lumber buyers purchased the tract, paying $95,000 for the timber just as it stands. The ash timber brought $20,000 more, while the hickory, elm, and oak and smaller timber brought the total price for the standing timber close to $150,000.—Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph.

Martha's Vineyard in 1602. Here is what Bartholomew Gosnold wrote of his voyage to Martha's Vineyard in 1602, the Christian Science Monitor remarks:

"We stood awhile like men ravished at the beauty and delicacy of this sweet soil; for beside divers clear lakes of fresh water (whereof we saw no end), meadows very large and full of green grass and such an incredible number of vines that we could not do for treading on them. This is the soil of the grapes, for it is replenished with faire fields and in them fragrant flowers; also meadows and hedged with stately groves." Martha's Vineyard is still covered with the wild grapevines, which gave it its name, and the farms have often been high standing for productivity. Indeed, one of these farms once boasted the largest corn crop ever produced on an acre. The yield was 125 bushels of shelled corn.

Stonewall Jackson.

Stonewall Jackson was in his thirty-third year when he was stricken down in the midst of his brilliant work at Chancellorsville. He was born January 21, 1824, and received (from his own lines—by accident) the wound that killed him on May 2, 1863. He died May 10. He was defeated but once, at Kernstown, when he was greatly outnumbered. He was a member of the Presbyterian church, and was noted for his rigidity of religious belief and practice; but when it came to winning battles he was a progressive of the progressives. He is buried at Lexington, Va.

Cost of Longevity Rising.

The rise in the price of sauerkraut is especially to be regretted because Professor Metchnikoff has been recommending it warmly as an antidote for old age. Now that garlic is being brought to us by Rumanian hygienists as a rival remedy, that, too, may be expected to soar beyond the reach of an ordinary purse. Luckily, the light diet, so highly commended as a recipe for longevity is within the reach of all.—Springfield Republican.

Homes, Sweet Homes.

A well known player was talking about a brilliant but unsuccessful disciple of Blackstone.

"His habits are to blame for his failure," said he. "One of his remarks illustrates his case well. He said to me in the Union club:—"

"There's no place like home—especially at 2 or 3 a. m., when you've exhausted the pleasures of all the other places, and you're tired, and everything shut up anyway."

"Konx Ompax."

Thomas Jefferson Hogg, the humorist, once proved beyond a doubt that an old fragment of classic jargon still preserved a certain magical power to soften the savage breast.

One day, as he walked near Covent Garden, an Irish laborer fancied Hogg had pushed him, and turned upon the young Oxonian, who was alone, with every abuse. A number of bystanders quickly gathered to see what promised to be a row.

Hogg turned upon the Irishman. "I have put my hand into the hamper," he began, with calm severity; "I have eaten out of the drum; I have drunk, and was well pleased; I have said Konx ompax, and it is finished!"

"Have you, sir?" said the Irishman, thoroughly mystified and appeased. A woman in the crowd said, "Now, Pat, what have you had?" Others called out, "What is it? Paddy has had!" Hogg turned solemnly away, and left the bewildered Irishman to get out of his scrape as best he could.—Youth's Companion.

Changing Customs.

A writer of the Washington Post tells of an old lady who remembered dining at the White House with Mr. and Mrs. John Quincy Adams. Mr. Adams ate with his fork, and Mrs. Adams apologized for it, saying that he had acquired the habit during his journey in France. Mrs. Adams and the other guests used their knives. All this is a comment on changing manners. But it should be noted that Mr. Adams ate with a four-tined silver fork, while the other guests had only two-tined forks.

Common law. Without the development of the four-tined fork, the habit of eating with one's knife would not have been so rapidly discarded. As between a four-tined fork and a knife, the fork is to be chosen for convenience's sake, but as between a two-tined fork and a knife on many occasions the latter would be actually the more serviceable.

Danish Court Likes Tango.

The court marshal of King Christian of Denmark telegraphed to the Thalia theater the other day for tango music, as the dance was to be introduced immediately at the Copenhagen court.

A reply was sent that no tango music has been published yet, and that the only way it could be obtained was to pay a high price for a manuscript copy.

Promptly came back the order: "Money no object; state price. Mail immediately."

The manager of the Thalia theater sent manuscript music and charged $400 for it.

Could See Some Good.

"A clergyman," says DeWitt Hopper, "visited a tippler in his flock and cautioned him against drinking too much. The man answered that the doctor had prescribed liquor for him. 'Well,' inquired the minister, 'has it done you any good?' 'At first it had,' answered the bibber, 'for when I got that keg a week ago I could hardly lift it, and now I can carry it all about the room.'"

GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

A most delicious conserve, confection or dessert, whichever occasion demands, is prepared by stuffing a half pound of pulled figs with salted almonds. Put two tablespoonsfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of lemon juice and half a cup of orange juice over the fire; when the figs are tender, turn andasting often.

Hot Rice Pudding.—Wash a half cupful of rice in cold water and put it in a double boiler with hot milk. Cook quickly until tender, then add two tablespoonsfuls of sugar, two tablespoonsful of butter and a half teaspoonful of salt. Beat one egg until light and add it to the rice, cooking for one minute. Pour into the dish in which the pudding is sent to the table. Mix two tablespoonsfuls of sugar with two tablespoonsfuls of butter and a third of a teaspoonful of cinnamon; sprinkle over the top of the pudding. This will make a brown sauce over the top. Serve hot.

Split Pea Soup.—Pick over a cupful of dried split peas, wash them and cook in plenty of cold water over night. In the morning pour off the water and put the peas into a kettle with two quarts of cold water, a two-inch cube of salt pork and one onion sliced. Cook slowly until the peas have become very soft, stirring frequently from the bottom to prevent burning. It will probably require four or five hours to cook them properly. When they are soft, rub them through a sieve, return to the kettle and reheat. Cream together two tablespoonsfuls each of butter and flour, thin it with a little of the boiling soup, add two cupsful of milk and stir into the soup. Season with salt and pepper and serve very hot.

French Beans.—Fresh string-beans are preferred for this dish, though the canned variety will answer. If fresh beans are used cook them tender, drain them and put back into the saucepan with bits of finely chopped onion, parsley, celery and a little meat stock. Boil up well, then add the yolks of two eggs well beaten with the juice of a lemon, and serve hot.

A little pot of stock should never be wanting in the housekeeper's store, as there are so many dishes which are greatly improved by a cupful of well flavored stock. This stock need not be made of especially prepared bones or meat; it may be a mixture of chicken bones, a beefsteak bone or a ham bone, a bit of meat, onion, carrot and the broth strained and kept in a cold place.

John C. Miller, assistant cashier of the Equitable Bank and Trust Company, was confined to his home several days this week with a bilious attack.

Mrs. J. B. Johnson returned last week from a visit to her brother, Hayden Callahan, at Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, and her sister, Mrs. B. W. VanWinkle, of Covington.

Sam C. Hicks has bought and sold about 175,000 pounds of tobacco on the Lexington loose leaf market this winter. He says he has had a pretty rough trip.

Miss Montie Arnold, of Williams-town, spent the week here visiting her cousin, J. M. Arnold and family. Miss Arnold is bookkeeper in the Bank of Williamstown.

Trains on the L. & N. and C. & O. Railroads were from one to three hours late last Friday and Saturday on account of the heavy snowstorm which occurred Friday.

W. A. Stewart, of Eagle Hill, Owen county, spent part of last week here and in Kenton county, looking at some farms with a view to purchasing, having sold his farm in Owen county.

Chas. H. Young, of near Folsom, was the guest of friends here a part of last week. He is suffering from an internal trouble that may necessitate a surgical operation and a two months' stay in the hospital.

Will Wilson and Ed Moore, of Beaverfield, were visitors here a part of last week. Mr. Wilson has bought about 35 acres of land from Dick Baker for $2,500, which will give him a farm of about 220 acres in one body.

Walton Masonic Lodge had work in the Entered Apprentice Degree at a called meeting Tuesday night, when Edgar Powers was initiated into the mysteries of Masonry. The Lodge will have other work in the near future.

The sale of the personal property at the farm of J. H. Jackson, last Tuesday was well attended, but everything sold at moderate prices. Mr. Jackson and his family will move to Los Angeles, California, next month, having sold his farm.

A. J. Williams, the popular agent of the L. & N. Railroad at Elliott Station spent a day here last week with friends. He is contemplating resigning his position with the railroad after 44 years of loyal service to the company, and he feels that it would be well to have a rest from the arduous duties.

G. B. Powers sold for J. H. Jackson, of Bracht Station, Kenton county, his farm of 163 acres to James Sellers of New Richmond, Ohio, for $10,000. Mr. Sellers has a family of 12 children and two daughters-in-law, and all will live together as the building has 14 rooms. Mr. Powers also sold to B. F. Stansifer, of Bracht Station, the farm of W. M. Holter, of Walton, consisting of about 43 acres of unimproved land. Price, $2,000.

Dr. G. C. Rankins spent last Friday in Cincinnati, taking with him his patient, Wm. Campbell of Richmond, section foreman on the Cincinnati Southern Railway at that point, who was struck by a train on January 24th while in discharge of his duties. His injuries were almost fatal at the time, receiving numerous contusions about the face and body and the dislocation of his left kidney. Dr. Rankins had a number of X-ray photos taken of Mr. Campbell which disclosed the dislocation of the kidney from three to five inches below its normal position. No surgical operation was performed and in the opinion of the doctors one may not be necessary. Mr. Campbell is slowly improving.

COD LIVER OIL AND IRON

Two Most World-Famed Tonics Combined in Vinol.

Cod Liver oil and Iron have proved to be the two most successful tonics for the blood and the medicinal curative elements of cod liver oil as a strength and tissue builder for body and nerves, and for the successful treatment of throat and lung troubles.

Two eminent French chemists discovered a method of separating the curative medicinal elements of the cod's livers from the oil or grease which is thrown away, but to these medicinal elements tonic iron is now added, thus combining in Vinol the two most world famed tonics.

As a body-builder and strength creator for weak, run-down people, for feeble old people, delicate children, to restore strength after sickness, and for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis or pulmonary troubles we ask you to try Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

P. S. For pimples and blotches try our Sazo Salve. We guarantee it.

OYSTER SEASON HERE SHIRT REQUIRES CARE

SOME METHODS OF PREPARING THIS GENERAL FAVORITE.

Better Than Serving Raw, Stewed or Fried—Kabobs May Be Recommended—Scrambled With Oysters—Excellent Pan Roast.

By LIDA AMES WILLIS.
No true oyster lover fails in appreciation of the merits of the raw oyster, served without the accompaniment of coarse vinegar and peppery sauces. If one must resort to such condiments to enable one to eat the delicate monster uncooked, then one's palate lacks discrimination and delicacy. Here are four of the best recipes known:

Kabobs.—Remove the gills and muscular part from large oysters. Dip each in melted butter, then in seasoned dry bread crumbs. String six oysters, alternating with them strips of sliced bacon cut same size, on a small silver or aluminum skewer. Lay these in a frying basket and immerse in deep, hot fat, frying a nice brown. Serve with little lemon and tender, crisp celery.

Scrambled Eggs, With Oysters.—Put a piece of butter in your omelet pan, and when melted, add as many eggs as required and a tablespoonful of cream to each egg; scramble, and before the eggs are cooked add the oysters, well drained and small sized; a seasoning of salt and pepper and a little minced parsley, or instead of the parsley add a little celery salt until the edges of the oysters curl, then remove at once from the fire and turn onto a heated platter.

Southern Pan Roast.—The largest and finest oysters should be used for this purpose. Drain them well and heat in a deep frying pan with a generous lump of butter melted. Cover the pan and shake constantly over a hot fire. Have ready a dish well buttered and garnished with parsley and lemon. When the oysters are brown, turn out on the dish, add salt and dust of pepper and pour over the oysters a little melted hot butter, mixed with a teaspoonful of minced parsley.

Oyster Salad.—Cook the oysters in their own liquor until they are plump and gills ruffle. Drain and season with salt and pepper and set in ice chest to cool. For 100 large oysters take two heads of lettuce, chill and arrange the leaves in your salad bowl and turn the oysters into the center of the lettuce heads, having cut out the coarse stems. Mince a few olives or capers and sprinkle over the oysters and serve mayonnaise dressing with the salad. If you have some good home-made celery vinegar, use it in making the mayonnaise for your oyster salad.

Larded Gail's Liver.

Wash a fresh calf's liver and soak it for an hour in cold water; wipe dry and with a sharp knife make incisions clear through the liver an inch apart. Into these put strips of fat salt pork long enough to project on both sides. Into the bottom of the pot put a spoonful of minced onion, some chopped parsley, pepper to taste and a half cupful of strained tomato juice. On this lay the liver, sprinkle with salt and as much onion on top as there is below. Cover lightly and set on a part of the range where it will not reach the boiling point for an hour. Gradually increase the heat, but never let it be strong, for two hours more, when uncover the pot for the first time to see if it tender. Take out the liver and keep hot while you strain the gravy. Thicken with a tablespoonful of browned flour wet in cold water. Pour over the liver. Carve it horizontally.

How to Cook Endives.

The following is an excellent French way of cooking the endives: Boil the leaves in lots of salt and water; when tender, pour the whole thing into a large sieve, and, as soon as the hot water has drained away, put the sieve under a tap and let cold water run on it for a few minutes. After the cold water, put the endives on a chopping board or rub it through a fine sieve; in both cases return it to the fire after putting it into a china saucpan, with a pat of butter and one teaspoonful of fine flour. Melt and mix the butter and flour, stir in the vegetable, and let it simmer 15 minutes. Add a little cream or milk quite at the last moment, to make it look soft and pretty.

Washing Flannels.

To keep flannels from shrinking wash them in the following way: Shred a piece of the best white soap, boil it in a quart of water, have ready a tubful of warm water, pour in the boiled soap and make a good lather. Then place the flannels to be washed into this, wash them thoroughly in it, but do not rub soap on them. Rinse in warm water, wring out and dry as quickly as possible in the open air out in the sun. When this is finished, iron when sufficiently dry with a warm iron.

English Hot Pot.

On a cold night nothing is finer for supper. One pound pork chops, four or five onions, eight or nine potatoes, salt and pepper. Slice potatoes. First a layer of potatoes, then a layer of onions, then a layer of pork, cut up, and so on until all the things are used. Have the top layer of potatoes. Salt and pepper and fill with hot water. Bake in a moderate oven two or three hours. Cover with plates until the last half hour. This is delicious. Enough for three or four people.

WILL REPAY ATTENTION GIVEN TO IT IN THE LAUNDRY.

Really No Secret, and a Very Little Amount of Work Gives Satisfactory Results—Cold Water Starch is Always Best.

After washing pass the shirt through thin hot water starch before it is hung up to dry. This you will find will give just the right amount of stiffness to the body part of the shirt.

Then hang it out in the open air, and when quite dry starch the cuffs in cold water starch in exactly the same way as you do a gentleman's shirt; then if there is an attached collar starch this, and also the box plait which goes down the front.

Remember to always wet the part just beyond where the starch will go; this will prevent the starch spreading. When this is done sprinkle the remaining dry parts with cold water, roll it up tightly in a clean cloth, and lay aside for a short time until you are ready to iron it.

Take the shirt out of the cloth and place it with the neck part towards the edge of the table. Iron the collar first until it is perfectly dry, then iron the yoke on both sides.

Next do the cuffs, and then run the iron inside the sleeve a little way so as to dry the gathers and the thicker parts. Now open the sleeve out as flat as possible and iron it front and back.

If you possess a sleeve board this will lighten your labors considerably, as it is almost impossible for the sleeve to be properly ironed if it lies flat on the table.

When ironing the sleeve without a board slip the hand inside once or twice to prevent the starch sticking. Pay special attention to the top part of the sleeve.

Iron the bodice part of the shirt last of all. Finally, polish the collar and cuffs.

First pin the two fronts together, top and bottom, and lay the fullness into plaits. Next lay the sleeves down the side of the back and turn them upwards again, do this with cuffs also at the neck. Pin them into position and turn over the sides, also pinning them together.

Fold the end upwards, making it a convenient size. On no account press these folds with an iron; they should all be done as lightly as possible to avoid undue creasing.

Cold water starch is made in the following way: Mix the starch to a smooth cream with cold water, then add borax dissolved in boiling water in the proportion of a dessertspoonful to a teaspoonful of starch.

Fried Chocolate Nut Cakes.

Beat to a cream one cupful of sugar (3 cents) and two tablespoonfuls of butter (7 cents), then add in the order mentioned half a grated nutmeg (1 cent), two heaping tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate (5 cents), two well beaten eggs (8 cents), one cupful of sweet milk (2 cents), a pinch of salt, three-quarters of a cupful of chopped walnut meats (8 cents), two teaspoonfuls of baking powder (1 cent), and enough sifted flour to form a soft dough (about 4 cents). Roll out, cut with a ring cutter, and fry to a golden brown in deep hot fat. Drain for a few moments on brown paper and when cool roll in powdered sugar.

Helpful Hints.

When the cover of your teakettle or other kettle loses their knobs, as they are apt to do, just put a screw through from the inside and thread a cork in it. The cork is a non-conductor of heat, and will not get hot. A few minutes time will give you a cover as "good as new."

Cake and Custard.

Make a plain boiled custard with one pint of milk, yolks of five eggs, one-third cup of sugar, tablespoon of salt, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat the eggs and sugar, add the hot milk and cook till creamy; put in the salt and vanilla and cool. Then cut stale cake into strips, or split lady-fingers in halves, and spread with jam. Put them on the sides and bottom of a flat glass dish and gently pour the custard over.

Cranberry Slump.

Make a biscuit dough with one pint of milk, one tablespoonful of butter, one-half cup of sugar, one egg, one spoonful of baking powder and mix to mix. In a pudding dish put one quart of washed cranberries, add one cupful of sugar and one-half of a cupful of water and cover with the crust. Cover and cook slowly in a moderate oven for one hour. Dust with sugar and serve with cream or a sweet sauce.

Paradise Pudding.

Three pared apples chopped fine, a half cupful of currants, a half cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of bread crumbs, three eggs, grated rind and juice of half a lemon; mix, put in a well floured pudding bag and boil one hour and a half. Serve with liquid sauce.

Substitute for Lard.

When baking griddle cakes, instead of greasing the griddle rub it with a small bar of salt. The cakes are just as brown and the kitchen not filled with the odor of burning lard.

NOTES from MEADOWBROOK FARM

Sweet clover aids the soil.

The cow is not a machine.

Milk is a food, not a beverage.

Manure is a valuable by-product.

It is poor economy to stint on the cows' feed.

Clean up the garden. Remove or burn all trash.

Alfalfa contains more protein per ton than clover or corn.

There is more profit in a grunting pig than in a squealing one.

When common scours appear immediately reduce the feed one-half.

Newfoundland has for several years steadily increased its agricultural production.

Switzerland is first and Belgium second in the interest taken in the raising of bees.

To insure vigorous lambs careful attention must be given the ewes while they are carrying the lambs.

A well bred steer calf, made into beef as quickly as possible yields a fair profit on high priced land.

Inbreeding of bees is as impractical as inbreeding of animals, but the difficulty is in controlling the drones.

Farming is simply a business proposition. To be successful the farmer must run his farm on a business basis.

The raising of a couple of good horse or mule colts on the farm each year does not call for an increased investment.

Those who are feeding huddle corn to their cattle must make arrangements to have hogs follow them or the waste will be too great.

The farmer who marketed his corn in the hog yard and who is now marketing the hogs, can look any man in the face and tell him to go to any old place.

A standard division of the work on any farm should be the growth of every crop which can help towards the sustenance of the stock or the family.

Keep the manure cleaned up well around the barn yard and carried to the fields, putting it on poor spots. You will note a big difference in crops another year.

It is better to sow alfalfa late rather than early in the spring. On well-prepared land not more than six pounds of good seed properly sown will be called for per acre.

Dairying is a good division of agriculture to provide a regular income on the farm and to convert coarse feeds into salable products where profits may be made.

Autumn is the ideal season for horticulture, and as the farmer often has no time to prune, spray and mulch the trees in the spring, he is now due to get busy in the orchard.

It pays to buy a well-made silo. A poor one is expensive at any price. Cement for this purpose is worthy of consideration. One cannot afford to make a mistake in silo building.

A cream separator will not do its best work unless it runs smoothly and does not vibrate. That's where a solid, concrete foundation comes in. It also means longer life for the machine.

Winter feed must generate heat, and the colder the climate the more attention must be paid to this detail. Corn, barley, peas, buckwheat, oil meal, potatoes and rye all come in the list of heat-producers.

If plenty of bran is fed, the pigs will seldom become constipated. Much phosphorus is needed to grow a good frame, and bran supplies considerable of this, and the addition of bonemeal or ground phosphate rock will be beneficial.

A windmill with five widely separated vanes has been adopted for irrigation purposes in Italy's new possession in Africa as the only kind that will withstand high winds and at the same time work in light breezes.

The pure-bred bull has done a great deal to improve the quality of the middle west. All states, or at least the principal ones, are reporting an increased dairy production and the results may be traced to better cows, not more of them.

Feed the cows regularly.

Comfortable hens pay well.

Keep the manure cleaned up.

Good cows are always valuable.

There should be more pure-bred bulls.

Use the best breeding stock that you can afford.

Don't feed grain to warm horses. Give them hay first.

Feathers add materially to the profits of poultry raising.

Mistakes teach practical lessons, that is when they are taken notice of.

Ground oats make an excellent grain feed for the fall calf just learning to eat.

The wise feeder sees to it that Mr. Hog is dead at the earliest profitable moment.

A clean pig sty, with a clean trough, is a delight to the pigs, and those looking on.

Potash is soluble and manures that are exposed to rains lose this element very quickly.

The most expensive policy is to try to save feed by giving the cows less than they can use.

Whole corn is good feed for setting hens. Water, grit and dust baths should also be provided.

There are nearly 6,000,000 acres of waste land in this country which are capable of being cultivated.

A helper's first lactation period should be made as long as possible so as to develop persistency in milking.

Be very slow in feeding new grain. New grain is a very poor horse feed until after it has gone through the sweat.

The dairy farm managed along business lines has four sources of income—butter fat, skim-milk, calves and manure.

The best price continues to be offered for the finest quality of white goose feathers, which are used in mattress and pillow work.

Roosting stock on the trees may be the easiest method of caring for hens, but it is not the most profitable by any means.

There is no business in existence that will guarantee success to a man who knows nothing about it, and whose capital is limited.

Remember that lime never takes the place of manure or fertilizer, but it makes the fertilizer more effective, acting better on the growing crops.

A sow should farrow two litters of pigs a year and raise seven or eight at each litter. If she does not she should be sold and one bought that will.

In the south cowpens are most used for cover crops, while in the north winter vetch takes its place. Sweet clover is gaining in popularity for this purpose.

If possible, put your cow barn on the south slope of a hill, where the stalls can be banked against north winds and get all the benefit of the southern sun.

No man should forget that the dairy barn is the place where human food that is most susceptible to outside influences is produced. Have the barn in good condition.

Carrots and parsnips keep best if stored in dry sand, in a cool cellar. If sand is not to be had they should be left in pits out of doors until freezing weather begins.

In planning for early pigs next spring your plans should include a good clover field to turn them on as soon as big enough to eat grass. In such a combination there is a profit.

There is no use trying to work miracles with cows. A cow is a machine, in one sense, for turning feed into milk. Like all machines, it must be provided with the right sort of raw material.

There is a fascination about breeding thoroughbred fowls that gives one satisfaction. When we see the results of our trouble we do not regret the care and attention which good poultry raising demands.

Where the shocks have twisted partly down or not at all stand perfectly straight, the fodder is spilling. It is becoming of less value each day, and should be stacked at once to prevent further damage.

Some of the farm buildings will need protection around the foundation; in other words they should be banked up either with building paper or with good coarse straw and manure. This is important where there is an opportunity for drafts around the foundation of the building.

A little grooming or brushing will have a great influence on the appearance of the cow. A few minutes spent in this way will pay large dividends in better looks and also in a greater price of farm stock and better returns.

FARM STOCK

SHEEP BEFORE SLAUGHTERING

Animals Should Be Given All Water They Want to Drink—Prevent Over-Heating and Excitement.

(By T. G. PATTERSON, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.)

Whenever possible it is advisable to take the sheep off feed for from twelve to twenty-four hours before slaughtering, with the exception of lambs, which will fret too much if taken from the dams and will consequently be in a feverish condition when slaughtered. As with all stock, however, sheep should be given all the water they want to drink. Always handle the sheep quietly so that they do not become excited and over heated before killing. Special care should be taken to see that sheep are not handled by the wool. Pulling the fleece by grabbing a sheep on the back or on the side will leave discolored, bruised spots on the carcass. Kicking or pounding the animal has the same effect. Always catch a sheep by the neck, rear flank or hind leg and hold it by placing one hand in the groove of the lower jaw and the other on the dock, besides causing bruises and discoloration of the carcass, handling by the wool is painful to the sheep. The fleeces of sheep selected for slaughter should be dry, as it is hard to obtain a clean, untainted carcass if the fleece is wet. After such careful preparation for slaughter the animal bleeds more thoroughly, the carcass cools off more rapidly, the entrails are easier to handle, the danger of cutting is lessened, the carcass makes a better appearance and the flesh has a better color.

METHODS OF SALTING STOCK

Practice of Placing Salt on Ground Is Antiquated—Little Box Fastened to Tree Is Best.

The practice of salting stock periodically on the ground is antiquated. It takes too much time if done often enough, it wastes salt and the way it is done, usually, the stock do not get enough salt.

I have a salt box somewhat like the inclosed sketch. I used to fasten it to trees, but have abandoned this practice, because the salt gets out in time usually kills the tree. Now I set a post and nail the box to this, or can sometimes set them in the rock piles of which I have several on the place, says a writer in the Southern Agriculturist. Sometimes I fasten the box to a post in the fence.

I visit the box often enough to never let it run empty while stock is in the field.

CARE OF HORSES AND MULES

Feed Mares Generously and Don't Overtax Them—Active Whiplash and Abuse Are Injurious.

Go easy with the work mares when they are suckling a young colt, hence doing double duty. This is exhaustive and depleting. Feed the mares generously and don't overtax them.

See that the hired man attends to his team properly. Remember your work horses are doing all in their power to help fill the barns with grain and forage and incidentally to make the year a profitable one to you.

A too-active whiplash, loud and abusive language, jerking the reins, pulling harness, irregular feeding and watering, filthy stables, galled backs or shoulders, over-loading and over-driving soon reduce the $300 horse or mule to a $75 one.

Always let the mare cool off before she suckles her colt—otherwise a possible attack of indigestion for the youngster.

Draft Horse for Farms.
The draft horse does the work on the farm the most satisfactorily and with less expense and worry; sells higher and more rapidly; costs less to get him ready for market; and it costs less time and labor to train him.

Get Rid of Rats.

There are few farmers who have not had experience with rats about their place and who have not experienced loss of grain and young poultry from them. Rats do a great deal of damage, but the greatest is not, as a rule, fully realized because they work unseen, stealing their feed at night a little at a time. On a large farm where many chickens are kept a few chicks taken each night are sometimes not missed. This is true in the corn bin, but when the loss due to rats is added up it is found in most cases, to be many dollars. "The number of rats that may live on an ordinary farm is astounding," writes one man. He says that on one 2,000 acre tract where the rats were systematically destroyed by traps, poisons and termites, 32,000 were counted and that did not include the 5,000 that were killed a short time before by the threshers at threshing time.

When we think of the great number of rats hidden under our barns and that each one of them is living on the grain that we have harvested we should not hesitate to make an active campaign to rid the premises of them. This question was considered so important that the last gathering of our State legislature, the law was passed making it a violation to permit rats to harbor on the farms and in the buildings of this State. We are glad there is such a law. It will mean a saving of thousands of dollars worth of grain and young poultry in the State. It should not be considered for us to have a law compelling us to kill all rats for we should consider it of great importance to rid the premises of them even if such a law never existed.

The indirect loss due to rats is often, and sometimes a great deal more, important than the direct loss for they are known to carry certain disease. In our fight against hog cholera it would be well to see if there are any rats about. If there are the hog houses, corn cribs and in fact all the out buildings about the place should be made as near rat-proof as possible. Where cement foundations are used this should be done not only because they are rat-proof, but because it makes a splendid lasting building material. Even though the buildings are rat-proof the use of some good poison to kill rats is advisable.

An Uphill Job.

The United States and the state of Kentucky are spending a big sum of money to teach the farmers how to farm, but in a great many instances it is uphill work. The farmers, as a class, are independent and object to having some college bred man come up in the latest fashion, teach them new ways about farming. There are so many who cultivate the soil who think all that is required to farm is to plow and hoe as their grandfathers did before them. The best way is to take the boys and thru them, reach their fathers. The farmer who is willing to learn new ideas is the man who owns the finest farm in his neighborhood and is the leading man in his community.

The poor, down-trodden farmer is the man you see going along the streets with a mongrel dog under one arm and an old shot-gun under the other, and his wife and son with clay pipes in their mouths trailing along in the rear. He lives at the head of the hollow. His corn is only husked out as old Brindle leans up against the fence and bellows for her feed, or the old gray mare with her head out between the poles, in her log stable nicks instead of growing vegetables. His fence is down, his garden is full of weeds, his land is full of gullies and the only grass on the place is eaten up by the old gander with one wing, his hogs need weatherboarding to hide their ribs, and the old domestic rooster has rheumatism from standing on one leg in the snow. Everybody cheats him, and his neighbor farmer meets him on the pike and under the tree in his automobile, and the only chance the poor, down-trodden, honest farmer has, is when the woods are full of candidates in a Democratic primary.—Ex.

The Hoopnet Bill.

On the lawn in front of the State Capitol, a high hoopnet has been stretched on poles, to show the destructive effects of this form of fish catching. The net consists of two great wings extending for a hundred feet or more from the center. In the center there is a door leading to a series of traps, distended by hoops, which the fish enter as they swim with the current of the river, and are held there until taken by the fisherman. The net exhibited was confiscated by the State game warden and is displayed on the Capitol grounds as a horrible example to the legislators who are being urged to legalize this form of fishing. One thousand three hundred and fifty pounds of fish were in the net when it was found by the warden. Representative Davis and other advocates of a hoopnet bill, allege that the use of these nets in permit in Ohio has led to the destruction of the fish on the Kentucky markets are obligated to pay exorbitant prices for fish which are sold by fishers from across the river. The game warden is opposing the hoop-net bills as being too destructive of the fish, hundreds being killed and injured when the nets become too full.—Ex.

FORERUNNER OF A STORM

Sighing Wall Came Down Canon Before the Wind Set Out on Mission of Destruction.

When supper was over Zehlie called us out and asked us if we could hear anything. We could hear the most peculiar, long-drawn, sighing wall that steadily grew louder and nearer. It was really frightened, but he said it was the forerunner of the windstorm that would soon strike us. He said it was wind coming down Crag canyon and in just a few minutes it struck us like a cold wave and rustled, sighing, on down the canyon. We could hear it after it had passed us, and it was perfectly still around the cabin. Soon we heard the deep roaring of the coming storm and Zehlie called the hounds in and secured the door. The sparks began to fly up the chimney. Jerrie lay on a bearskin before the fire, and Mrs. O'Shaughnessy and I sat on the old blue "settle" at one side. Gavotte lay on the other side of the fire on the floor, his hands under his head. Zehlie got out his beloved old fiddle, tuned up and began playing. Outside the storm was raging, growing worse all the time. Zehlie played and played. The worse the tumult, the harder the storm, the harder he played. I remember I was holding my breath, expecting the house to be blown away every moment, and Zehlie was playing what he called "Bonaparte's Retreat." It all seemed to flash before me—I could see those poor, suffering soldiers staggering along in the snow, sacrifices to one man's unholy ambition. I verily believe we were all bewitched. I shouldn't have been surprised to have seen witches and gnomes come tumbling down the chimney or flying in at the door, riding on the crest of the storm. I glanced at Mrs. O'Shaughnessy. She sat with her chin in her hand, gazing with unseeing eyes into the fire. Zehlie seemed possessed, he couldn't tire.—The Atlantic.

WITH YEARS COME WISDOM

One Is Less Prone to Believe Deceivable Gospel When Age Has Slipped the Hair.

"Don't believe everything you hear" Did you ever reflect how much more that saying appeals to you as you get on in years and accumulate experience? When you were young you might mention the name of a friend.

"That fellow" a companion would exclaim, "why he's a jackass and a crook combined. Don't trust him." Very likely he would go on to give you in detail an instance of some crooked deal in which your friend was involved.

He would be so obviously sincere about it that he would make an impression on you, remarks the Kansas City Star. Shocked, you would begin to revise your estimate of your friend and regard him with suspicion. Later you might happen to stumble on to the fact that the detailed story so discreditable to him was false. Eventually you would be assured that the prejudices of your companion who gave you the warning had run away with him and that your friend was all right.

As a person grows older he learns that most persons are constitutionally inaccurate, that they will relate the wildest rumors as if they were real facts, and that it is the commonest thing in the world for a person to relate as if true a discreditable incident that he actually knows nothing about. Prejudice, or even the love of a well embroidered story, will run away with the average man or woman.

Seeing the Time.

Ex-Senator Depew, amid his memories of Thanksgiving, said at Briarcliff Manor:

"I remember a Thanksgiving orator in my boyhood in Peekskill who worked the reminiscence stop too persistently.

"I've seen the time, dear friends," the orator said, "when you couldn't go into your pumpkin field without danger of leaving your scalp behind. I've seen the time when tea was $5 a pound. I've seen the time when you had to carry your gun to church for fear of redskins. I've seen the time when—"

"At this point a voice from the gallery shouted:

"And I've seen the time when I've looked at the clock."

One Hundred Years Ago.

Louise Victorine Ackerman, a French poet and author who is but little known to the reading public of today, although she enjoyed considerable fame during her lifetime, was born in Paris 100 years ago today. Her maiden name was Choquet. Her husband, a German, had been a Protestant theologian, but had left the Christian faith. He died in early life. Mme. Ackerman produced her most notable literary work after she had reached her sixtieth year. In addition to several volumes of poems and essays she was the author of some autobiographical sketches that were widely read. Her death occurred in Paris in 1890.

Helping the Deaf.

To remove from their pupils as much as possible of the load of their helplessness and of their sense of helplessness is the aim and task of the trade schools for the deaf. Thought is given first to the boys and girls as individuals who are bravely facing problems of life which in their difficulty and complexity are hardly comprehensible to the majority of men and women, however sympathetic their attitude may be. The economic service to the community through enabling the deaf to earn a living is a highly important though a secondary consideration.

BOONE CO. RECORDER

W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

From this distance it begins to look like the State of Ohio is going to have a hot old time, politically, this fall.

The Grant county murder trial that will come here in April on a change of venue will be a drawing card in the way of attendance.

The session of the General Assembly is drawing to a close and very little has been accomplished, most of the important bills still pending.

Some of the Covington merchants are organizing for a war on the flies when "fly time" comes. Won't you be glad when hostilities begin?

The past several weeks have been a dull season for all classes of merchants except those who handle feed for livestock, a class of goods now handled by nearly all the country stores.

Having had so much winter this month farmers are confident that when the weather settles again that they will be given an opportunity to begin their spring work in earnest.

Georgetown has had numerous local option elections in the last few years, but has never been able to get one thru that would stand the court attacks made by the "wets."

A convict in the penitentiary at Frankfort, whose friends have brought suit to secure a parole for him, has notified the attorneys to dismiss the suit as he does not desire parole. Some people are satisfied anywhere.

Southern California has suffered considerably because of recent floods. Eight inches of rain fell in that section of the State a few days ago in thirty-two hours, the like of which heretofore has been unheard of there.

The new United States Marshal, R. C. Ford, has appointed a long list of deputies and says there are more appointments to follow. That office appears to require an army of deputies large enough to dethrone Huerta.

At a recent meeting of Republicans held in Frankfort it was resolved that United States Senator W. O. Bradley ought to make the race for the Republican nomination for that office. What the Senator thinks along that line has not been made public.

The Congressional lightning rods are being adjusted throughout Kentucky and the indications are in some of the districts the primaries will be warm contests which will be under way in the two or three months as the nominations will be made at the state wide primary election to be held on the first Saturday in next August.

In reading the proceedings of the General Assembly at Frankfort it appears that there are only about four or five members in each house that are working members, or members who are making the noise. But it some times happens that the fellow who is making the least fuss is really doing the most work, and this may be the case at Frankfort this winter.

A bogus check shaver has been getting in his work in several communities in Kentucky recently. It is strange that people will cash checks for entire strangers. It is not often that the man whose check is worth the amount for which it is written gets out of money when among strangers, and when a stranger proposes shoving a check of one of your acquaintances you should investigate before putting up the cash.

Scattered over the United States and Canada, in Government reservations, national and zoological parks, etc., are nearly 3,000 pure-blooded bison. The American Bison Society and others interested in preventing the extinction of these animals have been active in trying to foster their propagation and conservation and are meeting with success, despite both the ravages of disease and the influence of generally unfavorable conditions.

The friends of Congressman Stanley, who is a candidate for United States Senator, say his race for the nomination by the Democratic party is as good as won, while the friends of ex-Gov. Beckham are claiming as to his race it is all over but the shouting, but there is that foxy politician, Governor James B. McCreary, whose strength is liable to fool somebody at the primary, consequently it is safe to say that the contest is not sufficiently developed to predict the winning candidate with any degree of certainty. The campaign has not warmed up yet anything like what it will be before it is over and it can be truthfully said there are hot times ahead in the Democratic party in Kentucky.

Some of the newspaper correspondents would have their readers believe that President Wilson and Congress have disagreed on several important matters of legislation and that a war between them is inevitable. It is claimed that the President has declared in favor of a measure in opposition to the declaration thereon of the Democratic national platform while he has declared all along that he would adhere to the declarations of the platform under any and all circumstances.

It took an Oklahoma jury just ten minutes to return a verdict declaring that Senator Gore was not guilty of the assault with which Mrs. Bond charged him. The Senator is totally blind and the charges against him looked very much like a frame-up from the first and when the proof was all in the jury was thoroughly satisfied that it was. The jury which tried the Senator had on it several Republicans, who were recognized the suit as a political scheme for taking Gore's scalp.

Some of the friends of Frank C. Greene, who as the member of the House of Representatives in the General Assembly, from Carroll and Gallatin counties, are so well pleased with the ability he has shown at Frankfort this winter that they are insisting on him becoming a candidate for Congress in this district, and it is believed that he will consent to about got his own consent to enter the contest. Just now the indications are there will be several candidates, and the more candidates there are the easier it will be for the incumbent to succeed himself.

According to the accusations brought against the present legislature by many of the state papers, it is the most worthless aggregation of lawmakers that ever assembled in Frankfort. The editor of the Recorder has been on the tripod for nigh onto thirty-nine years, and he is free to say that the same song concerning the Kentucky Legislature's inefficiency, has been sung biennially all that time, and he does not believe that as to intelligence the present General Assembly is below the average and is much better than some of the past. It has long been the habit of the Kentucky press to kick the Legislature round in the most careless manner. The General Assembly is public property of which some of the State press make a liberal use.

It begins to look very much like conditions are bound to arise that will compel this country to take a hand in the Mexican trouble, which will be a very expensive experience to the United States in both lives and money, and there is no telling when nor where the contest will end as there are two or three powers that would be pleased at an excuse to engage in a war with the United States, and they will be quick to take advantage of any offense real or imaginary that may result from intervening in Mexico. Uncle Sam can cope with any power on earth but if two or three of them were to combine against him he would give his hands full. The best thing that can be done is induce all foreigners to leave Mexico, after which let other governments furnish the Mexicans' arms and ammunition to conduct a war of extermination.

Wants Some More "Probing." Frankfort, Feb. 19.—As a sequel to the speech made on the floor of the senate yesterday by Senator Hite Huffaker, of Louisville, in support of his motion to make his bill relating to the payment of school teachers a special order of business, Senator Robt. Antle, of Russell, in the Senate today introduced a resolution calling for a "probe" in the affairs of the State Department of Education. The resolution recites that serious aspersions against past and present County School Superintendents, County Judges and County Clerks were made on the floor of the Senate and that it is due those innocent that all the facts be made known.

The inhabitants of the poultry yards have had to stay close to their roosts the past week.

A school in Trimble county was dismissed on account of one of the pupils contracting smallpox. Smallpox has appeared in many localities in this State this winter.

Miss Olga Kirkpatrick has been postmaster at Burlington for nearly seventeen years, and last Monday afternoon was the first time the mail was not delivered on or near schedule time, it being a total miss on that occasion. Boss couldn't cut the mustard.

ON CHANGE OF VENUE

Kells Murder Trial From Grant Will be Tried at the April Term of the Boone Circuit Court.

The trial of Gus Stephens and Mrs. Grace Kells, accused jointly of murdering and aiding and abetting the murder of Joseph Kells, in Williamstown, a few months since will come to this county as a change of venue and will be called for trial at the next term of the Boone circuit court. James Kells was found dead on the street in Williamstown, one night with a bullet hole through his head. Suspicion pointed to Gus Stephens as the murderer and he was arrested and on his examination trial he was held without bail and sent to Covington for safe keeping. At the last term of the Grant county circuit court Stephens was indicted for murder and Mrs. Grace Kells, who was Joseph Kells' wife was indicted as an accomplice.

The accused at once asked for a change of venue on the ground that they could not receive a fair trial in Grant county on account of the hostile feeling towards them. Having heard all the evidence pro and con on the motion for a change of venue Judge Cammack transferred the trial to this county.

If Mrs. Kells is tried here she will be the first white female ever tried in this county for murder. In slave times a negro woman was tried in Burlington for the murder of her child and was hung.

The Commonwealth is represented by Hons. John J. Howe and W. W. Dierison while the defense is represented by Atty. John B. O'Neal.

The officers in Boone are sorry the trial was sent to Boone.

An Expert Tangoist.

The Recorder's estimable friend, Ransom Ryle, of the Locust Grove neighborhood, was in Burlington one day the past week, demonstrating to the boys the new Tango dance, at which he is an expert of the first water. He was a hard worker and would give the boys the next time he came to town he would give them a few steps in the "Tango Stunts." "Bunny Hug" and "Turkey Trot." The pencil drawing made by our artist represents him in one of his "Tango Stunts." He promised the boys the next time he came to town he would give them a few steps in the "Tango Stunts." "Bunny Hug" and "Turkey Trot."

Get Your Pencils.

A foxy merchant employed two clerks—one named Jim and the other Fitzmaurice. He made a bargain with them saying he would start them in at $500 a year, which time they would get a yearly raise of $100 each or a semi-annual raise of $50. Jim, who had stood pretty well in arithmetic in school, scratched his head a minute and said he would take the semi-annual raise for his Fitzmaurice, who had never thought much of arithmetic and who had signed his studies, was struck by the $100 a year raise and decided to take that. The question is, which one has the advantage, if either? It is a hard question, and yet people are fooled on just such easy propositions every day. It looks as if Jim would get more money, but he would have to work for it, for he is evidently the smarter of the two.

Don't Swipe The Recorder.

It has been reported to this office that there are several persons who are in the habit of taking a neighbor's Recorder out of his box, and sometimes fail to return it. For the information of those who are accused as above the Recorder desires to state that it is a grave offense against the postal laws to interfere with the contents of a mail box other than their own, and should they be reported to the proper authorities the trouble and expense to which they would be put would exceed a hundred times the yearly subscription price of the Recorder. If you want to read the paper subscribe for it and do not depend on slipping it out of your neighbor's mail box to be replaced before the box comes across with the subscription price and you will enjoy the paper.

It is understood that the late grant jury prepared indictments against over 300 farmers who have put their fences on the county road right-of-way. Engineer Chatam had investigated and reported the special indictment blanks had been printed. All that was needed was the concurrence of nine of the grand jury, but only eight would stand pat, so no indictments were returned. Some body evidently got a violent attack of "cold feet."—Harrodsburg Leader.

Robt. Gaines, who resides with his father out on the Florence pike, came to Burlington in his buggy Monday, and while in town the snow drifted to such a depth in the road at the Odd-Fellows cemetery that on his return trip he got hung up in the drift and had to abandon his vehicle.

Georgetown, Feb. 21.—In a decision rendered today Judge Stout set aside the local option election of last September when the county voted dry. The decision was rendered on account of its having been shown that in the city school precinct there was not the required 25 per cent. of voters who signed the petition for the election.

Georgetown, therefore, will remain wet until a new election is called, and this probably will take place after the law now before the Legislature amending the county unit law is passed.

PRACTICAL DAIRY BARN PLAN

General Instructions Given for Constructing Building to Accommodate Herd of Fifteen Cows.

The Rural New Yorker in response to a query for a plan for a barn to accommodate 15 cows makes the following reply:

The accompanying floor plan of a barn 34x50 feet, and 20 feet high from sill to plate, with gambrel roof, would suit the writer if he wished one to house 15 cows and have sufficient extra space for needed box stalls and granary. This barn should have a door in each end beneath the gable for storing hay and can easily be fitted with carrier and track running the full length of the loft. A nine-foot passage-way extends through the barn for convenience in removing manure; ample width for feed alleys is provided, and the stable may be shut off from the rest of the barn for greater warmth in the winter. The stable should be tightly closed overhead, and to avoid dust in the stable the fodder may be thrown down in the space between granary and box stalls. The silo may be placed on either end. Windows enough to flood the stable with light should be provided, and these should be about five feet from the floor, of single sash hinged at the bottom to swing inward a few inches for ventilation, the side opening thus made being closed by a V-shaped "bopper side."

The following standard dimensions are given to aid in planning a stable interior: Stable should be from eight to nine feet high, passageway between gutters from eight to nine feet in width, gutters about sixteen inches wide and eight inches deep in front, six inches deep on side toward driveway, cow platforms from four to five feet in depth, according to size of cows, which should line up with their hind feet close to gutter, lateral space for each cow from three to four feet, bunks 18 inches wide at top, and feed alleys about five feet in width. Box stalls for cows should be about 8x10 feet, and about four square feet of window sash should be provided for each 1,000 pounds live weight of stock to be sheltered. The King system of ventilation is the best for a stable and when the latter is well built, is easily installed. Floors should be of concrete, with standing plate forms of wood, if desired. Walls may be built of any material desired, so that they are tight. Double walls with air space between are not needed, unless in the extreme northern part of this country.

DAIRY NOTES

Tickle the cow's palate and increase her production.

The good dairy farmer is the man who appreciates good roads.

Every dairyman ought to have a good soldering kit and know how to use it.

There is something wrong with the dairy cow offered for sale cheap these days.

The best dairy cows will give the best returns if handled quietly and treated gently.

The scales will tell both with milk and butter whether a cow is kept at a profit or not.

We must not be slow to recognize the fact that the best herds are not gotten together by purchase.

Pure air keeps the stables free from disease germs and other bacteria that always eat up the profits.

The capacity of the farm may be increased by bulking up the silage so as to make each acre yield more.

The dairy farmer should know what his milk costs him. This is just as important as knowing what it brings.

HORRORS OF THE "SOLITARY"

Barbarous Treatment of Men Who Mostly Are Only Unfortunate Is Censured.

Imagine yourself not speaking to a soul for weeks at a time, shut in a dark cell, your food thrust to you through a grating, and your only exercise obtained through parading round and round a little ten-by-ten-foot yard with walls that reach seemingly to the sky; and then ask yourself, is this the way to get into the better nature of a man, to teach him to be a better, whiter little good there is in him?

Think of the old "solitary"—solitary confinement—of the Eastern State Penitentiary, Philadelphia, and many other prisons. I have met men who have openly told me that if they could go so long without seeing a human face—and would die smiling, H. B. Warner writes in the National Magazine. The "so and so" referred to was invariably a prison official. The men had committed crime, if you will, anything that had offended against the laws, and they had been so brutally treated that they had lost all hope of prison no longer men but beasts—worse, far worse, than when they went in.

So many people excuse themselves by saying, "Why should we bother about prison reform? The man has offended; he has been proven guilty; he must be punished." But let them pause for a moment and consider how many men—and women, too, for that matter—have been mentally and physically ruined by that one word punished. Is it not possible to correct rather than to punish?

The majority of those who go to jail are not necessarily criminals in the true sense. They are the unfortunate of the world. Show them the error of their ways, correct them, help them to help themselves.

JOSEPH'S WELL STILL THERE

Historic Spot of the Bible May Easily Be Located, Even at the Present Day.

Louis Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren," with its scenic splendor, including a representation of Joseph's well, reminds one that the remains of the original well are to be found at a spot situated directly on the canal route from Shechem to Memphis, about two miles southeast of Cairo. The well itself is in the courtyard of some barracks belonging to the army of occupation.

Near by is "the citadel," the second largest mosque in Egypt. The well bears signs of having been bricked up. Yet it is easy to see that Joseph's discomfiture could not have been so great as one might imagine. For this well, like all the wells of Egypt, is of a circumference much larger than those of today and Joseph would have been able to exercise his limbs with ease by walking around it. Moreover when the Nile is low these wells are quite dry.—London Correspondence to the New York Sun.

Blame Put on County.

The case of McGee vs. Jones county before the supreme court of Alabama presented a unique question that has arisen once before in New York state. The plaintiff, while driving a blind horse onto a bridge suddenly lost consciousness, and the horse walked off the approach of the bridge, which was left unprotected because of the negligence of the county to provide guards. The court held that the accident was due not to the blindness of the horse or the plaintiff's loss of consciousness, but to the county's negligence, and said:

While the highway is primarily for the use of vehicles under control, yet the defendant must be held to anticipate that horses may get beyond control of their drivers because of fright, accident or mischance, and the plaintiff was no more at fault, nor he and his horse any less entitled to protection, because he lost control through a fault that had nothing to do with the accident, than the accident occurred owing to some accident to his vehicle or the frightening of the animal.

Helped by Lightning Stroke.

Some have had physical reasons to rejoice that they had struck by lightning. De Quatrefages mentions the case of a telegraph employee at Strasburg, who was struck senseless and remained paralyzed until the next day, but thereafter enjoyed better health than ever before. In Marklin, a M. H. B. was deprived of his life by lightning of the use of his limbs for three hours, but, having previously been a man of weak health, was much stronger from that time on. Several authors refer to cases in which rheumatism was cured by lightning. And in this respect, it seems to be as men. Arago saw a popular one of an avenue of 1,500 near Tours, which, having been struck, developed such vigor that its trunk soon far surpassed in dimensions those of all its neighbors.

Cautious Young Woman.

Elizabeth had been strictly trained in the proprieties of receiving gifts of money. Uncle John arrived, a privileged character, and after the custom of uncles, produced a quarter-dollar. Likewise he offered to go to the candyman's shop across the way on a squandering expedition.

There Elizabeth chose a box of candy at ten cents. The shopkeeper took the quarter, and produced in exchange the box and fifteen cents. Elizabeth was polite but firm as she refused the change.

"Thank you," she said, "but we are not allowed to take money from everybody."—New York Evening Post.

IMPORTANCE OF CLEANLINESS

To Prevent Disease Cows Should Be Carefully Brushed and Cleaned at Least Twice Every Week.

In the prevention of disease too much stress cannot be placed upon the importance of cleanliness. For this reason the cows should be brushed and cleaned at least twice a week, particularly on those parts that are beyond the reach of the tongue. Whatever benefit may come from the cow licking herself when she is clean, there is more or less danger from that source when the cows are kept inside, and have no way of cleaning their bodies except with their tongues when turned out for water and exercise.

At certain times during the year and at certain stages of condition and health the hair comes off in great abundance. At such times, when the animals lick themselves, much of the hair gets into their stomachs and there is danger of its forming a hard mass that will severely injure them. This danger is minimized by brushing the cows carefully. It should be done daily while the cows are shedding their coats, for at this time there is more or less irritation of the skin that prompts the animals to lick their bodies more persistently than at other times. By brushing them in a careful manner this irritation is lessened and the falling hair is removed beyond the reach of their tongues.

CONTROL RICHNESS IN CREAM

Separator Is Most Important Factor, but When Adjusted Properly There Will Be Variations.

The most important factor controlling the richness in cream is the cream screw in the separator, but even when that is adjusted properly there will be some variations in the percentage of fat in the cream. Ordinarily in winter and when cows are more nearly dry they are likely to give richer milk than when fresh and on June pasture. Accordingly, cream for the winter will at times show a variation of about seven per cent. over that produced during the summer months.

Not running a separator at uniform speed will also affect the cream, because the slower the separator bowl rotates it will affect the cream.

If too much skim milk or water is used in flushing out the bowl after each time the separator is used the cream will be thinner. Use no more than just necessary to free the bowl from cream.

Sometimes the skim milk or the cream becomes clogged, interfering with the free passage of either cream or the skim milk through their respective openings. These outlets should be examined frequently.

MILK STOOL IS CONVENIENT

Device Used on California Dairy Farm Straps Around Body and Is Ready for Instant Use.

A one-legged milk stool that is always in position for instant use is one of the conveniences employed on a California dairy farm, says the Popular Mechanics. This stool is provided with straps that fasten around the waist of the milker and hold the stool in the proper place. It requires no adjustment or attention of any kind, and is always ready as the milker moves from one cow to another.

Cow's Capacity.

Every cow has a limit to the amount of butter fat she is capable of giving. It is true that often cows are poorly cared for and so poorly fed they fall below normal in percentage of butter fat. In such cases proper feeding, better care, and more comfortable quarters, with plenty of sunshine, good ventilation and warmth, will bring the cow up to normal.

Certified Milk.

About 125 dairies are engaged in producing certified milk and the daily production is nearly 25,000 gallons, an increase of 200 per cent. in five years. While this seems a remarkable increase, it should be remembered that only about one-half of one per cent. of the total milk supply of the country is certified.

AND THE BOSS THOUGHT HARD

Boy Lived Up to His Treatment, Consequently the Profits Were Not Large.

Beatrice Forbes Roberts in Hale, one of the leaders in the new school for Suffrage Workers, said in New York the other day:

"A woman has been complaining that her husband treats her like a child. She isn't capable of voting, he says, but she's capable of running his big town house for him, with its 18 servants, both elegantly and economically. I told her she ought to act like the errand boy."

"An errand boy delivered packages in a huge hand cart. Between the shafts, bending to his load, he tramped the streets among the vans and drays from early morning till long after closing time."

"At the end of two years of this, he asked for a raise. But his employer refused to raise him. So, looking about a bit he finally secured a better job."

"His last day with the old firm, he was sent out with a load of valuable china. He returned in an hour or so, and the china, instead of having been delivered, lay in the bottom of the cart, smashed into thousands of pieces."

"What does this mean?" the proprietor roared.

"The boy, as he stepped out of the shafts, answered calmly: 'It means, boss, that you've worked me like a horse and treated me like a horse for two years now. So this morning I shed at a place of paper, ran away and had a smash-up.'"

"So saying, the boy turned and set off blithely whistling for his 'new and better job.'"

FROCK COAT OF THE PAST

Seems to Have Been Relegated to Oblivion After Its Long Period of Popularity.

The long coat with the tails enjoyed a long period of popularity. It marked for years the man who was doing the correct thing from the point of view of dress, whether he were at a wedding or a funeral, an afternoon reception or a college commencement. The change in men's fashions that drove the frock coat out of its exclusive place was particularly discouraging to owners of this enduring garment. Frock coats have been known to pass from one generation to another.

There has now been erected by far-seeing tailors such a compromise that the frock is not after all destined to disappear from the wardrobe of the well-dressed man. It will, however, be regarded only as the appropriate coat of well-dressed men of a certain class. The stock broker or the real estate magnate, if they would follow fashion, must be seen in the coat described abroad as the morning coat and here as the cutaway. It is to a much more serious class of men the frock coat is dedicated.

Statesmen, bankers, lawyers and ministers, in the words of the discriminating sartorial journal which has suggested to us the dignified use of the frock coat, are the men who in the future find it the last word in style. Thus is the frock not only preserved to manhood but it is destined to a more distinguished and glorified fate.

Yielded Great Influence.

Winchester, Feb. 19.—David Nelson, for fifteen years a helpless invalid, but nevertheless one of the most successful politicians and business men in his section of the State, died today in East Bernstadt, Laurel county. He was bed-ridden, but the man Dave Nelson favored for any office was generally elected. He was shot by his brother, John Nelson, and the bullet lodged near his spine, paralyzing him below the waist. He accepted his fate optimistically and yielded a wide influence for good. John Nelson, the brother, died of a broken heart from remorse for his act.

SPEED, THE AMERICAN SLOGAN

Foreigner Criticizes the Desire for Haste Characteristic of the United States.

One day in New York I was complimenting an example of American architecture to an American architect of great talent. "Yes, yes," he answered with a touch of satire, "my fellow countrymen would willingly spend a hundred millions of dollars to build a church as beautiful as St. Mark's in Venice, but they would command me, as a condition of the work, to finish it within eighteen months." That is a significant phrase. How is it possible to beautify a world which is incessantly in transformation, wherein nothing is stable, and which wishes to multiply everything it possesses—buildings, as it would furniture? To create beautiful palaces, to construct beautiful furniture, to attain the distant ideal of perfection, time is essential—time and wise deliberation, reasonable limitation of the multiplicity of human demands, and a certain stability in taste. No one could have built St. Mark's or Notre Dame in 18 months, and France could not have created her famous decorative styles of the eighteenth century if public taste had been so fickle as ours, and if everybody at that time had wished to change his furniture every ten years—Guglielmo Ferrero, in the Atlantic.

LITERATURE NEW OR OLD?

Matter of Reading Has Long Been a Point of Dispute Between Authorities.

An author was asked how his newest book was selling. "I am afraid it isn't a very good book," he replied dubiously. "It is selling pretty well." Emerson is credited with the advice not to read a book until it is ten years old. Whether the dictum is held to faster that sage or slender him, it is a safe rule for fiction. What reader who chews a mental cud has not felt, a sinking of the heart on overhearing some misguided soul profess to be "keeping up with the current fiction"? But the rule is not so safe in other kinds of reading. The clergyman who reads only theology ten years old is known by his sermons; the scholar who reads only criticism ten years old is back with the dust; the journalist or politician who read only history ten years old would soon be promoted to the job of sweeping out the office. Some men, however, in respect unless they are at least 20 years ahead of their time; these are they who think new books faster than authors can write them. Some men find it all they can do to keep up with the procession; these are they who read the significant books as fast as they appear. Some have no faith in a book unless it is old.

The Pope Remembered.

In that distant time when he was only a humble priest at Tombolo, Pius X., then Giuseppe Sarto, dispensed in charity all the meager emoluments of his office. It once happened that when his purse was empty he borrowed from his vicar some sums to meet a pressing need. Then Giuseppe Sarto, called suddenly to another charge, forgot to pay to his vicar three lire that he owed to him. Time passed, Giuseppe Sarto was named pope. He had forgotten his debt. Recently an old priest came to kneel at the feet of the holy father. It was the old vicar of Tombolo. The pope recognized his voice, and at the same moment he remembered the three lire so charmingly lent him. The pope then caused to be given to the old man from his private purse 500 lire, and named him for an important curacy. Only sovereign pontiffs can pay such interest—Le Cri de Paris.

Due Warning.

As illustrating the remarkable results sometimes obtained by the mode of expression so much in vogue by a certain class of darkies in the south, Senator John Sharp Williams tells of a handbill, announcing that a "colored picnic" would be held in a grove near Mobile.

After the preliminary statement as to the delights in store for the subscribers to this entertainment, the bill concluded with this notice:

"Proper behavior will be strictly and reservedly enjoined upon all present, and nothing will be left undone which will tend to mar the pleasure of the gathering."

Soon Turn to Dust.

What becomes of the millions of millions of pins that are turned out annually by the factories? They "get lost." Yes, but if they merely "got lost" our floors and streets would be littered by them. They not only "get lost," but they vanish by rusting away to dust.

Dr. Xavier, a Paris scientist, has been keeping tabs on individual specimens. He finds that an ordinary hairpin took only 154 days to blow away in dust. A steel pen nib lasted but under 15 months. A common pin took 18 months, while a polished steel needle took 2½ years to disappear.

Inter Pools.

The old man with the rosy nose had become cheerfully communicative. "My father," said he, "was an innkeeper. He accustomed me to wine while I was being taught my a b c's. 'Wasn't that early?' said the prim individual in the next seat. "Early, do you say? Why early? Didn't I learn my letters off a wine list?"—New York Evening Post.

FOOLISH TO NEGLECT COLD

Child So Afflicted Should Have Immediate Care and Proper Medical Attention.

Those contagious colds, and most colds are contagious, should be cared for from the start, says a writer in Wallace's Farmer. Keep the child on a light diet for a day or so; if he is weak, keep him in bed, and have him use antiseptic gauze for a handkerchief. Burn these handkerchiefs and avoid the danger of spreading the disease further.

Do not let a child with a bad cold sleep with a well child; get a bottle of eucalyptus and put on the pillow or nightgown to be inhaled through the night. This is also a good preventive if used in time. If a handkerchief strongly scented with eucalyptus is held to the mouth and nose in a crowd where grip germs are likely to be found, the danger of contagion is greatly lessened. The odor is rather pleasing, and some parents have their children use it continually during the season of colds.

Have the victim of a bad cold use a separate towel; the use of the antiseptic gauze as a towel is an excellent plan; and teach him to be careful. The old joke: "What is the result of a cough? A coffin," has too much truth in it. "Only a cold," many people say, but the cold is a serious matter if neglected. Two health hints children should be taught early: To use a disinfectant on every wound, no matter how slight; and to get rid of a cold as quickly as possible.

HAVE ENOUGH OF DIVORCE

Couple With Strange Experience Vow That They Never Will Seek Another.

Divorced from each other three times, only to drift back again into each other's company, finally remarrying for the fourth time, is the story of the Indiana man and woman who obtained a license to wed. The man is Robert Slate, thirty-nine years old, of Vevay, Ind., and the woman is Mrs. Madge Slate, twenty-nine years old, at present of this city.

"Have you been married before?" was the question put to them by the license clerk this afternoon. Both admitted that they had been married to each other three times before. Slate also admitted that he had been married to two other women and divorced. They said they had signed an agreement never to seek another divorce.

"I guess there was a little too much haste on both sides, but this time we expect the wedding knot to stick," said Slate.—Cincinnati (Ohio) Dispatch to the New York Sun.

Thing Never Paid For.

Anyone who does his work well or gets satisfaction out of it, puts himself into it. Moreover he does things that he cannot be given credit for, finishes parts that no one else will notice. Even a mediocre amateur musician knows that the best parts of his playing, his personal tributes to the genius of the composer whom he plays, are heard by no one but himself and "the God of things as they are." There might be bitterness in the thought that in our work we get paid or praised only for what is not particularly ours, while the work that we put our hearts into is not recognized or rewarded. But in the struggle for spiritual existence we adapt ourselves to the unappreciative features of our environment and learn to look elsewhere for recognition. We do not expect people to pay us for our best. We look to the approval of conscience, to the light of our ideal, seen more clearly when our work is good, or to the judgment of God. Our terms differ more than our tendencies. The essential point is that for appreciation of our best work we look to a Judge more just and keen-sighted than our paymaster—Richard C. Cabot, in the Atlantic.

Beneficial Exercise.

Exercise to be beneficial must do these things:

1. It must slightly increase the strength and force of the heart beat, so as to improve the circulation and do away with any tendency to sluggishness.
2. It must slightly quicken and deepen the breathing rate so that more pure air is drawn into the lungs and less impure air is left behind.
3. It must stimulate into normal activity the myriads of glands in the skin whose duty it is to rid the body of a part of the poisonous substances constantly being formed within us.

New Use for Quinine.

Possibly hydrophobia may be cured with quinine. It did not seem possible until Dr. Noguchi of the Rockefeller Institute defined the minute germ of the disease, which he was the first to propagate in artificial cultures, as probably a protozoan. Quinine kills the germ of malaria, which belongs to the family of protozoa, though it will not attack bacterial germs among which that of rabies was formerly classed. In the current Journal of the American Medical Association Dr. D. L. Harris of St. Louis gives a detailed report of an apparent cure of hydrophobia by means of the malarial specific.

REFLECTIONS OF THE KAISER

Fourth Volume of German Emperor's Speeches, Just Published, Contains Pithy Sayings.

The fourth volume of the speeches of Emperor William, delivered from 1906 to 1912, has appeared, its 326 pages crowded with addresses and toasts on all kinds of subjects, sustaining his reputation as the greatest royal speechmaker of the era.

Among the most interesting and characteristic passages in the collection is the following:

"The world belongs to the living, and the living know best. I will tolerate no pessimists. Whoever is not ready to work may drop out, and, if he wishes, hunt up a country better suited to him.

"I am an optimist through and through. I want to progress. I should be delighted if people only understood what I am trying to do and would give me their support. We are bound to consider every man honest until he has proved the contrary. This is the principle on which I have always dealt with everyone with whom I have to do. The results are occasionally bad, but one mustn't be dissuaded by that.

"We (the monarch) are always in a thankless position, since no one credits us with any independence. If I 'pull off' something successful everyone asks, 'Who put him up to it?' and if I fail, the word is, 'He didn't understand how to do it.' "Confidence in God gives self-confidence, and self-confidence gives the determination to accomplish that which you have set as your goal.

"Until war cease our army will be the rock of bronze on which peace is founded. Our army is here to maintain for us this peace and to assure to us the position in the world which belongs to us.

"My first and last thought is given to my army and navy."

NOT A CASE OF DECEPTION

Probably Youth's Wish Gave Inspiration to the Neat Way He Diagnosed Situation.

Not until boarding houses cease to exist will all their romances be written. Shabby romances, most of them are, like that of the young woman who got so tired of being called "poor thing" because she received no invitations and had to eat all her meals at the boarding house table that she took to eating alone once in a while at a cheap restaurant, and then brazenly lying about the friends who had invited her to dinner.

There was a young man in that house who never went anywhere either. The first night the girl stayed out life's desolation nearly overpowered him.

"Even that poor little white-faced soul has made friends who want her," he said. "Nobody wants me. I'm no good on earth."

Then on rare occasions his place at the table was vacant.

"New friends?" asked the landlady. "Yes," the young man lied.

One night the man and the girl met at a 25-cent restaurant. They blushed, they fawned, they finally confessed.

"We're a pair of frauds," said the girl. "It is awful to think that the room house we have home that we took to eating alone once in a while at a cheap restaurant, and then brazenly lying about the friends who had invited her to dinner."

"Well," said the young man softly, "ain't we?"

To Pension Leigh Hunt's Daughter.

The long memory of British government departments is curiously illustrated in the new list of civil service pensions, wherein Mrs. Cheltenham is described as the daughter of the late Leigh Hunt, for to most of us Leigh Hunt would seem to belong to a remote past, where the use of "the late" is an irrelevance, since the great critic was born in 1784 and died in 1859. He and his have amply earned recognition from a liberal ministry. It is now a century ago that the brothers Hunt made an attack in their paper, the Examiner, on the savagery of military floggings, and suffered prosecution. They were acquitted, only to be immediately proceeded against for speaking the truth of the prince regent, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment and a fine of £500. Carlyle tells us that Hunt endured "obloquy and calumny from the Tory press greater than any other living writer." And although the Tory press of today has little kinship with that of 100 years ago, there is poetic justice in the present-day pension.

Pity the Poor Theatrical.

Here is a amusing dialogue which is reported to have taken place in a suburban theater. Utility lady, hurrying in, breathless, five minutes after the call for distribution of parts in new spectacular production: "What do I get?" Stage manager, promptly: "You get a quarter's fee for being late, and you're the Empress of India in the prologue and Queen of the Night in the last act; and you don't want to show up in them old blue satin shoes again, for you've got to sit on a gold throne ten feet high, with your foot on the neck of the King of Persia. Now you come here tomorrow at ten, letter perfect, or you'll be back in the second row, carrying a tin sword, before you know where you are!"

It Depends.

"If a man kills another man he is always put in jail, mamma?" "Not always. Sometimes he is paid by the government to do it, and if he can only kill enough he will have monuments erected to him."—Life.

NOW HER FRIENDS HARDLY KNOW HER

But This Does Not Bother Mrs. Burton, Under the Circumstances.

Houston, Texas.—In an interesting letter from this city, Mrs. S. C. Burton writes as follows: "I think it is my duty to tell you what your medicine, Cardui, the woman's tonic, has done for me.

I was down sick with womanly trouble, and my mother advised several different treatments, but they didn't seem to do me any good. I lingered along for three or four months, and for three weeks, I was in bed, so sick I couldn't bear for any one to walk across the floor.

My husband advised me to try Cardui, the woman's tonic. I have taken two bottles of Cardui, am feeling fine, gained 15 pounds and do all of my housework. Friends hardly know me, I am so well."

If you suffer from any of the ailments so common to women, don't allow the trouble to become chronic. Begin taking Cardui to-day. It is purely vegetable, its ingredients acting in a gentle, natural way on the weakened womanly constitution. You run no risk in trying Cardui. It has been helping weak women back to health and strength for more than 50 years. It will help you. At all dealers.

Deep Eater.

Senator Freawley said in Albany of a corrupt politician: "He went in too deep. He was like the boy.

"Motoring one summer day in the country, I saw a boy who was going through a strange performance. He hopped up and down on his left foot, while he held to his right ear a large stone on which he tapped—tap, tap—with a smaller one.

"My boy, I said, 'what on earth is the matter?' "Water in my ear," the boy replied, as he continued his hopping and tapping.

"My own boyhood came back to me. I remembered doing just such things myself.

"Aha!" I said. "I remember now. I, too, my boy, have hopped and tapped like that when I've been 'swimming' and got water in my ear."

"I ain't been swimmin'," said the boy.

"But how on earth, then?" I began.

"Been eatin' watermelon," he interrupted calmly.

METHODS TO CONTROL
Blind Stagers, Which is Causing The Death of Thousands of Horses.
Washington, D. C.—In the past few years horses have died by the thousands in Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska and Nebraska from a disease affecting the nervous system, popularly known as blind staggers or forage poisoning. The Department of Agriculture has received urgent requests for help against this disease from fifteen different states, and as a result it is now publishing a bulletin containing definite instructions for combating this disease.
The states that appealed to the Department of Agriculture for assistance include the following: Colorado, Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Missouri, Oregon, Kentucky, Nebraska, South Carolina, West Virginia, Louisiana, New Jersey, South Dakota.
This shows the universality of the disease. Kansas and Nebraska bore the brunt of the affliction during the past year, but other states have also suffered seriously. Kansas has had more than her share. Severe outbreaks extended to the entire state in 1911 and since that date have recurred with equal severity on two occasions in various portions of the state.
The bulletin contains notice of the fact that additional deaths have undoubtedly been due to the use of "cures" sold by unscrupulous persons. It is reported that in Nebraska "black-leg vaccine" was used on at least 1600 unaffected horses, nearly 1500 of which are said to have died as a direct result.
Investigators have practically established that this horse disease can be controlled effectively only by a total change of feed and forage. It is quite obvious that there is a direct connection between the green forage, exposed to the sun and the disease, and this Cerebrospinal Meningitis as the disease is known to scientists. In fact, eating of such forage when contaminated is undoubtedly the most important cause. Over 95 per cent of cases of this disease in Kansas and Nebraska during the outbreak of 1912 were maintained under such conditions.
Great care must be taken that horses do not obtain the dangerous forage used by the farmer. The owner of one farm informed the Department's investigator that his dead horses had eaten nothing but old hay and grain.
"But what about the closely-cropped grass in this pasture?" remarked the investigator, noticing the farmer's horse.
"Oh," answered the farmer innocently, "I always turn the work horses into pasture over night."
Many horses have died from blind staggers caused by eating moldy baled hay. As soon as the hay was eliminated the disease ceased. Other horses in the vicinity not fed upon this hay failed to contract this disease. Later some of the moldy bales were opened and exposed to the sun for three or four weeks. After this the hay was fed to horses without producing any ill effect. Forage poisoning, therefore, seems not to be an infection but rather what is called "auto-intoxication"—that is, it is due to certain chemical poisons or toxins formed by the action of internal organisms. These poisons may be present when the forage is taken into the body or may be formed in the stomach. The nature of this poison is still unknown.
When the horse is taken with the blind staggers it usually exhibits a disturbance of the appetite, depression and weakness, while there is trouble in swallowing, drooping of the head and sleepiness which may give way to excitement and attacks of dizziness. The vision is impaired, which results in the staggering gait that gives the disease its popular name. Certain muscles of the neck and flanks are cramped and there is a grinding of the teeth. Sometimes the animal has pains as though it were afflicted with the stomach. The animal will walk strangely if in an open space and will try to push thru any obstacle it encounters. In the stable he will press his head against the manger and the side of the manger. Sometimes he will crowd into a corner. The temperature at the beginning of the disease ranges from 103 to 107 degrees F., but within 24 hours the temperature falls and eventually becomes subnormal. The animal is often down on the second or third day and may or may not get up when urged. Death usually occurs in from four to eight days, although death may follow within ten hours of the first symptoms, while chronic cases have been known to last for three weeks. About 90 per cent of the affected animals die.
While medical treatment in the vast majority of cases has not brought results, nevertheless if it is used at all it must be prompt and before the disease has had time to run. The digestive tract should be cleared out thoroughly at once. Active and concentrated remedies should be given. Afflicted animals, however have great difficulty in swallowing immediately after being treated so that these remedies must generally be given by injection. Aroclon in one half grain doses, subcutaneously, has given good results as a purgative. Early in the disease urtropin in doses of 25 grains dissolved in water and given by the recovery of some cases of the disease.
After the animal has been purged, the treatment varies according to the symptoms. The following measures have been recommended:
The first and most important. Feed only clean well-cured forage and grain, and pure water. Calomel, salol and salicylic acid, diluted with water, and antiseptic mouth washes are advisable.
Copious cold water injection, if the temperature is high, give better results than antipyretics.
An ice pack applied to the head is beneficial in the case of marked nervous disorder.
One-ounce doses of chloral hydrate per rectum should be given if the patient is violent or muscular spasms are severe.
If the temperature becomes subnormal the animal should be warmly blanketed.
If much weakness is shown this should be combated with stimulants, such as strychnine, camphor, alcohol, atropin, or aromatic spirits of ammonia.
During convalescence the usual tonic treatment is recommended: The Department of Agriculture's bulletin No. 65 is entitled "Cerebrospinal Meningitis, Forage Poisoning" and may be had on application to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Doctors Feared Lung Trouble, Restored to Health by Vinol.
The medical profession does not believe that lung troubles are inherited, but a person may inherit a weakness or tendency to them.
Mrs. Kate Rockman, Springfield, Mo., says: "A few years ago I was in a very bad run-down condition, and the physician told me I had consumption. I tried another physician, and he told me I had ulcers on my right lung—I quit the physicians and started on 'Vinol.' Today I am perfectly healthy, and that is why I recommend 'Vinol.'"
Vinol soothes and heals the inflamed surfaces and allays the cough, Vinol creates an appetite, strengthens the digestive organs and gives the patient strength to throw off incipient pulmonary diseases.
Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

SCHOOL ROOM MUST SUPPLY HOME ECONOMICS FOR CHILD OF TODAY

When Hearthstone Ceased to be Center of Industry, Young People Lost Opportunity to Acquire Broad View and Training Which Formerly Entered Into Their Education

(Mary E. Sweeny, Head of Department of Home Economics, College of Agriculture, Kentucky State University.)

Sewing Department—Home Economics, Kentucky State University, College of Agriculture.

The education of an individual in the elementary and secondary schools and in the university come through three channels, written and spoken language, experience and communication. Present-day methods of education emphasize the fact that the ultimate purpose of education is character building. In the development of a pupil, whether in the city or rural schools, there is a certain skill, judgment and initiative that can be given only by the experience that comes in the doing of things with the hands.

In that period of our national development when the home was a workshop as well as a dwelling, the shoes, the clothing, the preserved foods, the smoked meats, the lard, soap, the candles and furniture were all made there. The child was educated in the school of experience. From the moment they began to crawl on the floor among their mother's loom and spinning wheel they entered the industrial world and from that time they ate, played and slept in a trade school and had a daily lesson in the world's work.

Home Training Lost.
By the invention of power-driven machinery, and the shifting of the industry of the home to the factory and diversifying these manufacturing processes into an innumerable number of business enterprises, the child has exchanged a simple and near industrial world in the home for a complicated and distant one, estranged from the home. When the home ceased to be a center of industry the child lost his opportunity to acquire that wonderfully broad view of the organization of the industries which the home had formerly given, also the training of the eye and the hand for direct and useful action.

The only institution which can make good this loss to the individual is the school.

MILLIONS SAVING IN PROPER CARE OF MARKET EGGS

Did you know that the estimated value of the eggs laid in the United States is six hundred million dollars, and that forty-five million of this is wasted on account of bad conditions in the flocks, in storage rooms and marketing facilities? Then knowing this, isn't it high time we looked into the cause of this waste? Our whole system of marketing eggs must be revolutionized if eggs are to reach the consumer in the condition they should. The trouble begins with the main producer, the farmer. In the first place, he is extremely careless about the condition of his hens. To lay a perfectly good egg the hen must be in the pink of condition. Then she must be properly housed and fed.

The eggs from hens that are allowed to feed on filth from the pig pen or manure pile are no better than milk from slop-fed cows. The milk from garbage-fed cows is unlawful. There is a reason why such food is no better for laying hens than for dairy cows. Most people who buy eggs for consumption have only one test as to goodness and quality, and that is freshness. But already with better knowledge a change from this standard is coming about and a discriminating public is demanding other things beside freshness in their table eggs. There are eggs laid daily that are not fit for human consumption even when new laid. We would not belittle freshness in eggs. It is of great importance, but only one of the prime requisites of good eggs.

One of the reasons that eggs reach the consumer with a taint to them is, that the fillers of many egg cases are rotten and smelly. Storing egg cases in a cellar or other damp, musty place is also an abomination. It would be just as sanitary to pack butter in dirty or bad-smelling tubs as to pack eggs in bad-smelling cases.

The farmer is often not only careless as to where, when and how often he gathers his eggs, but also as to where he keeps them and how long he holds them.

The country merchant is in many instances to blame for the bad condition in which eggs reach the consumer. In many cases he receives the eggs while in good condition, packs them in cases and stores them under improper conditions until a convenient time for shipping. This condition should not be permitted to exist. Of course, in summer the average egg is naturally of a poorer quality than in spring and winter, but they would reach the consumer in a much better condition than they are now doing if there were promptness and co-operation in handling.

As short, general rules to follow with regard to producing eggs for market, let us say:

- 1st. Have birds in perfect health.
- 2nd. Have yards, houses and nests clean.
- 3rd. Feed a balanced ration, meaning a food prepared to meet the requirements of the laying hen.
- 4th. Dispose of male birds after the breeding season.
- 5th. Gather the eggs every day. When you find a nest don't market the eggs if in any doubt about their freshness.
- 6th. Combine all broody hens or keep them separate from the layers.
- 7th. Market weekly and in the hot summer months twice each week.
- 8th. Keep the eggs in a dry, cool place.
- 9th. Use egg cases or the small paper cartons holding one or two dozen. This aids materially in making your product attractive.

CULTURE OF GRAPE VINES

Proper Pruning of Vines Essential Both to Yield and Quality

TWENTY BUDS ARE ENOUGH

Ordinarily, At Least Two-thirds of the Vine May Be Cut Away—Training According To a System That Will Admit Sunlight and Air to the Fruit Also is Necessary.

(J. H. Carmody, Assistant Horticulturist, Kentucky Experiment Station.)

The grape is one of the oldest and most widely grown of our cultivated fruits. Because of the hardness of the fruit and the readiness with which it adapts itself to different localities, it is to be found in all parts of the world. Nearly every farm, and city home as well, has a few vines of some variety planted about the premises. While these vines produce fruit every year, nevertheless they are a source of disappointment to the owner because the fruit is not as good as he would like to have it.

An examination of such a vine often tells the reason for the failure. Grapes are vigorous growers and the ordinary vine is left too full of wood. In the forest where the grape grows wild over the trees one can not help but notice the distance which the fruit is located from the main trunk. The neglected vine presents a condition very similar to the wild one in the forest. The vine in the forest aims to produce fruit in order to perpetuate itself and the neglected vine to a lesser degree is doing likewise.

Pruning Requisite To Yield.

When left unpruned only a small amount of fruit is borne at the extremities of the branches. To produce quality of fruit of any kind it is necessary that the plant be pruned and kept in bounds. Otherwise the amount of wood will become so great that all of the plant food will be used in keeping it alive. When a vine is so thick, the air and sunlight are excluded and black rot and other troublesome fungous diseases are also very common. Many growers neglect to prune their vines because they do not understand the proper way to go about this work. The terms pruning and training are often confusing. Grapes are pruned in order to reduce the amount of wood, to limit the production of fruit, and to keep the vine in control so that it may be easily managed. The object in training grapes is to arrange the vine according to some definite system so that the air and sunlight may reach the fruit readily.

Twenty Buds Enough.

Before starting out to prune a grape vine one should remember that the fruit is borne on shoots of the present season which develop from buds borne on last season's canes. The important point in grape pruning is to remove a large amount of wood so as to limit the number of buds. Ordinarily at least two-thirds of a vine may be safely cut away. Usually not more than twenty buds should be left after the operation of pruning is completed. In removing the canes try and remove the weaker ones and leave the sturdiest.

There are a great many systems used in pruning the grape, but most of them depend on the annual removing of the wood that bore that season.

Double Kniffin Method.

The following is a description of one method known as the Double Kniffin. This method has given splendid results at the Kentucky Experiment Station Farm.

The vine is allowed to grow at will the first season. After the season's growth is over the vine is cut back, leaving two and a half feet high, the other end of the second season these lateral branches should be cut back so that there are not more than three or four buds to each. The young shoots that are to bear the fruit will hang down from these buds. If these shoots become too long it is a good plan to pinch them off and thus allow them to bear only one or two branches for a season or two. The following spring cut the four old canes back to the young canes near the trunk and tie to the wire in the same manner as the previous season. This method should be kept up every year. As the vine grows older the number of buds left upon the bearing canes may be increased from year to year.

Pinching Off Tips.

When the wire is reached the tip should be pinched off so as to cause the formation of lateral branches. These lateral branches should be arranged so that they will travel along the wires in both directions. At the end of the second season these lateral branches should be cut back so that there are not more than three or four buds to each. The young shoots that are to bear the fruit will hang down from these buds. If these shoots become too long it is a good plan to pinch them off and thus allow them to bear only one or two branches for a season or two. The following spring cut the four old canes back to the young canes near the trunk and tie to the wire in the same manner as the previous season. This method should be kept up every year. As the vine grows older the number of buds left upon the bearing canes may be increased from year to year.

Key To Illustrations.

Figure one is a photograph of a bearing vine in the fall of the year before the pruning is begun. A and B are the old canes and a, b, c, d, e, are the shoots which grew from them and bore fruit this past season.

Fig. 2. The Kniffin System of Training. Pruned.

X marks the point where the canes will be cut off, leaving small "a" which will be trained along the wire as indicated in figure two.

Figure two shows the vine after it has been pruned. The one-year-old canes are stretched along the wires and tied there before the growth starts.

The main trunks should be securely fastened to the wires in order to protect the vines from being damaged by the wind.

PLANNING THE GARDEN

PLEASANT OCCUPATION FOR SOME OF THE EVENINGS REMAINING TO WINTER.

Study Should Be Made of Companion and Succession Crops and a Definite Plan Be Followed in Putting Out Vegetables and Flowers When Spring Calls.

(T. R. Bryant, Superintendent of Agricultural Extension, Kentucky Experiment Station.)

At this time of the year we begin to get seed catalogs with pretty pictures and describing new vegetables that we have never tried to raise. These and the consciousness of the approach of springtime, together with the interest and delight that all members of the family can find in the garden, encourage us to spend some of the few remaining winter evenings planning the garden.

In making these plans it is interesting and profitable to study among other things (1) Variety of vegetables and flowers which means more enjoyment from the table standpoint; (2) Profit, both as regards saving of grocery bills and possible sales; (3) The quantity that can be produced on a given area, especially in towns and villages where space is limited; (4)

The possibility of canning, for winter, the surplus. A definite plan should be made. The kinds of vegetables, their period of growth and the time of planting must be considered. By "companion crops" we mean two that can be planted together, one of which will be matured before the other needs the space very badly. By "succession crops" we mean that one crop is harvested in time to permit the planting of a second after the first is harvested. By a careful plan and a knowledge of the plants we can get two and sometimes three crops from the same area.

Without going into detail regarding specific vegetables, it is not here out of place to urge that every farmer and at least every villager in Kentucky should have a strawberry bed. Scarcely a fruit can be named where more good fruit, which means pleasure and profit, can be so easily gotten from the same sized plot.

As regards fertilizer, none better than good manure can be recommended. For such crops as lettuce where a quick leafy growth is desired, a very light sprinkling of nitrate of soda at or just after planting time, will be found beneficial. It is conducive to leafy rather than to fruit growth and should be used sparingly. Outside the Bluegrass region, phosphorus, either as acid phosphate or as raw ground rock, may be advantageously applied.

Keep the hens comfortable. They don't mind a little cold if the quarters are dry.

FEED THE SHEEP REGULARLY

Value of Regular Practice Has Been Demonstrated With Two Flocks—One Turned Out Thrifty.

Sheep should be fed regularly in the winter. In fact, as much depends on the regularity of feeding as on the feeding itself. Those who are familiar with the characteristic of sheep know that they always become restless about feeding time.

The value of regular feeding has been demonstrated by experiments with two flocks. One was fed daily at six o'clock in the morning and again in the evening, while the other was fed at different times during the day. The result was that the flock fed regularly turned out in a thrifty condition in the following spring, while the others were thin and sickly.

Many of the latter flock had died during the winter. Fully eight per cent. of the lambs had either died at birth or made only a stunted growth.

FEED FOR THE FARM HORSES

By Selecting Only Good Hay The Danger of Heaves Is Avoided—Natural Grain Is Oats.

(By C. L. BARNES, Colorado Agricultural College.)

The feed for the farm horse should be of as good quality as that given to higher priced animals used in the cities or on the race track. The question of mode of feeding is an important factor in keeping the farm horse healthy. Most of the hay should be fed at night when the horse has plenty of time to eat. The hay should be of good quality. All mouldy or musty hay should be rejected as unfit for feed. By selecting only good hay the danger of heaves is avoided. The most natural grain for the horse is oats. The oats should be well matured and not mouldy. Bran has very little nourishment in it but serves as a bowel regulator. If a quart of bran is fed each animal with the oats the danger of colic is lessened.

Whenever possible one should make it a practice to feed the farm horse after it has had 30 minutes or an hour to rest before trying to digest its concentrated food. In other words let the farm horse eat a little hay while warm and after it has entirely dried off, water and grain. During a resting period feed more bran than oats. Then there will be less danger of azoturia after the horse is put back to work.

A well-regulated barn of modern type is equipped with watering trough in the barn. If possible all horses should have an opportunity of drinking pure water at any time while in the barn. If the horse is not too warm. Some ranchers find it a paying proposition to set a pail of water in for each horse before retiring. This gives the horse an opportunity to have water when it needs it the most while eating the dry hay.

Cause of Rickets.—Worms, malnutrition, inadequate feeding, lack of lime salts in the feed are common causes of rickets in pigs. Stop feeding corn and substitute slop of middlings, ground screened oats, flaxseed meal and milk and add one ounce of lime water to the quart of slop or give a dram of precipitated phosphate of lime in feed twice daily. If worms are seen in the droppings give sulphate of iron in the slop for five mornings in succession at the rate of one dram for each one hundred pounds of pigs and if necessary repeat the treatment in a couple of weeks. Every day rub affected joints with iodine ointment.

Colts should have a regular grain ration daily.

It is poor economy to feed timothy hay to sheep.

Nine-tenths of the objection to the mule is prejudice.

Hogs appreciate kindness and are not so stupid as they look.

Less hay and some grain is more economical and will make a better colt.

Feed the finishing pigs all they will eat. If the appetite is keen, the digestion is good.

State Aid For Roads.

The House at Frankfort has passed the bill of Representative McDerby, of Boyd county, providing for State aid in road building and imposing a 5-cent tax for the creation of a road fund.

If this bill becomes a law the State will be in position to do some real road building. Most of the States in the Union are doing something for the improvement of their highways. Some of them are making large annual appropriations, some are levying a tax and some are building roads by convict labor.

In other States the counties are issuing bonds to build roads, but in Kentucky the counties uniformly are refusing to do so, and therefore really do not deserve good roads. Indiana has a law under which townships may issue bonds, and by this method Indiana has built more roads than any other State in the United States. Roads cannot be built without money. State aid involves taxation. Federal aid is not, as some persons seem to think, a free gift. In the ultimate analysis the people pay for all they get, either from the State or the Federal Government.

In road construction there is no chance of getting something for nothing. State aid distributes the burden. Federal aid makes the distribution unfair. Neither State nor Federal Government is going to make any county a present of a system of roads. To be in position to receive aid the county will have to raise funds on their own account and the big end of the expense will have to be borne—and ought to be—by those chiefly benefitted by the roads.

If the Legislature makes possible a system of State aid it will be up to the counties to prepare themselves to take advantage of it. This many of them, no doubt, will do. Few of them are disposed to build on their own account, but to maintain a highway there should be great impetus to highway construction. If the money raised is spent wisely and economically the State should receive enormous benefit.

State supervision is right and proper where the expenditure of State funds is concerned. If we are to maintain a highway commission we ought to build some roads. With the imposition of a State tax the way is open for Kentucky to make some road improvement worth while. The counties, however, will have to hold up their end of the burden and they should begin mapping out a constructive program.—C. J.

A short time ago we noticed one of our Eastern Kentucky papers carried a headline to the effect that about 35,000,000 pounds of tobacco, and sometimes as high as 50,000,000. My dear sir, two counties in this country have a crop of tobacco half that much every year. Western Kentucky raises more than one hundred million pounds every year, and sometimes nearly twice that much.—Lancaster. Advance.

Elkton once had the prettiest shade tree of any town in Kentucky, but the electric light and telephone companies have done the work of butchering them as effectively as any tornado. It's too late to remedy the situation here, but this is printed in the hope that a number of our exchanges may yet take warning and save the beauty of their own towns. The wanton destruction of shade by tree butchers who have as little knowledge of tree trimming as they have of major operations in surgery is at once pitiful and outrageous.—Elkton Times.

The distance from Paducah to Dawson Springs is sixty miles.—Paducah News-Democrat.

There are 120 counties in Kentucky, but only 119 are in the State. These figures are taken from a recent statement by the State Auditor. A pauper county is one which draws more money from the State treasury than it pays in. The 1912 General Assembly created one new pauper county, and there is a bill before the present Legislature to create another. In business affairs this is a day of combination and consolidation, so that any particular line of business is being consolidated. It is being consolidated to earn a profit by reducing expenses, which is most easily done by uniting many concerns under one head and disposing with the services of a vast number of em-

D. Cropper, the Sheriff of this county, be and he is hereby directed to cause a poll to be opened and an election to be held at the school house in Common School District No. 40, on the 18th day of March, 1914, the same being forty (40) days or more after the entry of this order, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal white voters residing within the boundary of the said proposed Graded Common School District whether there shall be levied and collected an annual tax of thirty-five (35) cents on each one hundred dollars of property value subject to State or county taxation, owned by white persons, and one ($1.00) dollar of poll tax on each white male inhabitant of said proposed Graded Common School District over twenty-one years of age, for the purpose of building and maintaining a Graded Common School therein as provided in the Common School law of this State.

W. D. CROPPER, Sheriff Boone County, Ky.

Let The Parcel Post Alone. By a close shave the United States Senate has defeated an effort to hamper parcel post operation. An amendment limiting the weight of packages to fifty pounds was beaten only by one vote. A second amendment limiting the number of parcels to five per box was lost by a decisive vote. The adoption of either of these amendments would have taken away the power of the Postmaster General and the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix rates. This the real friends of the parcel post regard as an unwise proposition. It also is unnecessary and could only result in complications. The Postmaster General is the best judge of what ought to be done in the adjustment of weights and limits. If this authority is taken away from him and lodged in Congress the parcel post is likely to feel the influence of the same sort of smooth politics which prevented its establishment during a period of twenty years or more in which the people were petitioning vainly for it.

Now that the system has been started, about the best thing that Congress can do is to keep hands off and allow the Postmaster General, with the assistance of the Interstate Commerce Commission, to work out the problem. He is better fitted to look after the details of the service than anybody else. He also is better prepared to suggest what is needed in the way of additional legislation. There is no good reason why Congress should go into the business of limiting weights or zones or of dictating the details of the parcel post service. Anything of the kind that is undertaken will be of doubtful benefit.

The masses of the people are just beginning to realize the uses and advantages of the new service, and they will not be favorably impressed by efforts at "revision upward"—and this seems the principal object of those who are most anxious to revise.—C. J.

W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

What has become of the fireworks that Representative Myers, of Covington, was going to throw off in the House at Frankfort when he got back there from his home the first of this week?

Those heavy intonations heard in this part of the country last Monday evening were not bombs thrown into the General Assembly at Frankfort by Representative Myers, of Covington, as some supposed. They were only the explosions of dynamite being used in the Miami river to break up an ice gorge.

A fine crop of lawyers has been produced in some parts of Kentucky this winter. In its circuit court items last week's issue of the Oldham Era is the following item:

"A class of thirty-two applicants for license to practice law was examined in open court by Judge R. P. Peak and Judge S. E. Haven. Among the number were three ladies."

Frank C. Greene, who represents Carroll and Gallatin counties in the Lower House of the General Assembly has been guilty of a grave indiscretion if not an offense. He had the temerity to say something a few days ago about the influences that prevailed when some of the House committees were appointed, and the House went up in the air instantaneously, but Greene stood by his guns.

Harry Sommers, editor of the Elizabethtown News, has been in Florida dodging the Kentucky blizzards. He was not there long until some of the Florida editors discovered that he is a Kentucky politician. Of the six cylinder, ball bearing, four speeds forward and no reverse variety, and they started a gubernatorial boom for him, which owing to the severe weather prevailing he will not transplant in Kentucky for some time yet, and even then it is likely to encounter a frost.

Very few of those persons who are criticizing President Wilson's Mexican policy are ready to go to the front themselves or to send sons. It is as President Wilson and ex-President Taft have both declared—that there is no way of estimating the toll in money and lives a war with Mexico will cost. President Wilson has thus far pursued the proper course, and the few in the United States who are so anxious to fight can go to Mexico and enlist on one side or the other and fight until they are satisfied.

The hottest Democratic paper in the United States is THE HORNET, published bi-weekly by W. Henry Davis, at Fork, N. C. The Hornet is hot and will never get any cooler; it is a stunner as well as a stinger; last, but not wise least, The Hornet boasts of being the loudest thing of all loud things in the sea of Democratic Journalism. The editor says it can sting a New England Republican and a California Moose alike. It circulates from Maine to Mexico and from Puget Sound to the beautiful Southern end of Florida. 35c per year.

Representative Myers, of Covington, before leaving for Frankfort a few days ago made known his program for setting on foot one of the most stupendous investigations ever put in motion in a legislative body. He intimated that he had the goods on several if not all the members of the General Assembly and that when his probe began to get in its work the State would be involved in a sensation the like of which was never known in Kentucky. His plan was to have each member investigated by all the other members. In other words he was going to turn the legislature inside out and hang it on the fence to air out. Go in, Myers, even if you do get squeezed along with the other fellows.

If the General Assembly would repeal every syllable of road law now in existence in Kentucky and pass in its stead a law allowing a county to assess a tax not to exceed fifty cents on the one hundred dollars worth of taxable property to be used in the construction of turnpikes where a company would put one-half the cost of the proposed road, this county would soon have good roads.

There has never been a road law in this county that was satisfactory. When the roads were worked by warning on hands, complaints of the law's inefficiency were numerous. Finally the system was changed and a tax collected for that purpose and it was not long under this system, before many of the overseers were, by innuendo, charged with grafting liberally and finally the office of overseer was abolished and the office of County Road Engineer substituted, and now he gets the blame for bad roads that used to be bestowed upon forty-nine men in this county.

If the labor on the dirt roads had to be volunteered the matter would be put up to those directly interested and every community would have just such roads as it desires. The responsibility for the condition of the roads would fall upon the shoulders of those who use them, and they would have no one to depend upon to look after their roads nor to censure in the event they did not.

This would be a radical change in the road system, but why retain a system which is so expensive and a flat feature. If the charges made against during the last several years, approach the truth?

Last week's issue of the Grant County News carried a half page dog advertisement, which inspired the following article in its editorial column: "This is an age of specializing. The man or woman who specializes prospers. All around us we can see evidences of this. We know half a dozen farmers in this county who have been specializing in bees for a number of years. Each one of them has reaped a rich reward for his labors. Another man we know is making a speciality in raising high grade chickens. He has spent hundreds of dollars in improving the breed of his poultry, and now instead of selling his eggs at the market price of 25 or 30 cents a dozen, he sells them at a dollar each, and the demand is greater than the supply.

"A few years ago Stanley Blake began in a small way to specialize with dogs. Today he is shipping thousands of dogs to all parts of the country at fancy prices, employs several high class bookkeepers and stenographers and is reaping fat off the products of his kennels. We know farmers who are making a speciality of hog raising and are making money at it.

"There are plenty of opportunities all around for the man who lives and work out doors to engage in some special calling. Of course it would not do for everybody to raise and make a speciality of raising nothing but chickens or hogs, or dogs or bees, but just at the present time there does not seem to be any danger of overcrowding the market with any of these.

"The producer of some of the necessities of life, especially of those things which are necessary to life will never need to be hard up."

It might be interesting to the sheep raisers in this county to know how much dog tax he pays annually.

The Open Season.

The Legislature now in session at Frankfort is only "one of the many that has gone astray." It is simply a repetition of what has been going on for years without even an improvement in its methods. Kentucky remains behind on account of her vicious legislation, and so long as the people of Kentucky pay their charity obligations by promoting this class of men to office, the Grand Old Commonwealth will remain behind. It is our opinion that lots of the legislation is introduced for the sole purpose of forcing corporations and moneyed interests to pay bribes for its defeat. On the other hand the corporations and moneyed interests are supplied with silk stocked and gold-tipped lobbyists to see that their special interests get what is coming, and oftentimes what is due. There seems to be no middle ground and especially no ground upon which honest and practical conviction can stand. Besides the favored few with their palms turned upward, behind their coats there comes the long haired crank with his legislation to make the people pure in heart. It is hard to tell which of the two is the most damaging to the State, demagogue or the fool. The night is dark, and as yet we see no signs of the coming dawn. We hope some good common sense and honest men in the General Assembly, but they don't seem to be much in the political light just now. If the legislators would pay more attention to the people and less to the ambitions of a few simple headed candidates for United States Senators, the State would be benefited and the United States relieved from a doubtful pickout of a job lot.—Ex.

Feeding Chickens for Market.

That chickens intended for market should be divided into small flocks and should be fed heavily on fattening feeds while giving them range in a small grass inclosure is the belief of Prof. J. O. Halpin, of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin. It has been found that as a rule, the average farmer pays little or no attention to the fattening of his market fowls, taking them to market directly from the range.

A mixture of four parts of ground corn and one part of wheat bran mixed with enough sour skim milk to make it crumbly moist is the ration according to Prof. Halpin, who recommends that they be fed only such quantities of feed as they will clean up in twenty minutes.

Princeton.—In a complaint to County Judge M. P. Smith against a vendor of rabbits, Martha Greeley, an aged negro of this place, alleges that she was sold a diseased cat, which was represented as a rabbit. "Aunt" Martha cooked and attempted to devour it, but alleges that she was made violently ill and a physician was summoned to attend her.

To the Health Officials And People of Kentucky.

A few cases of smallpox exist in most of the counties of Kentucky. This loathsome disease can only occur in people who have not been vaccinated. Quarantine against individual cases of smallpox is expensive, as it only gives a false sense of security. To one who has been properly vaccinated, at least three places on the arm, has ever had smallpox in Kentucky. There has never been an arm nor a life lost from vaccination in Kentucky. Properly done by a competent physician it is devoid of danger, is inexpensive and is the only preventive against smallpox. More money has been spent, most of it uselessly, in combating smallpox in the last few years in Kentucky than has been expended in thirty years in protecting our people from typhoid fever, diphtheria and other common diseases of everyday life, and yet more deaths have occurred from either typhoid or consumption in the past year than smallpox, diphtheria and cholera, combined, have caused in a century.

The Board is frequently asked why the law requires vaccination at three points on each arm on the arm. Because experience teaches in Germany that no one having three or more good scars has had smallpox. Vaccination does its work of protection through the glands under the arm. Charging these glands from three points instead of one makes them manufacture more of the protective element.

As soon as a case of smallpox occurs every individual exposed should be promptly vaccinated or revaccinated, and there should be no second case of the disease. It is unnecessary to quarantine the well, provided they have been successfully vaccinated.

It is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of from $100 to $1,000 for any one having an eruption even resembling smallpox to go on any public street or road or any place where well people are. If the court officials will enforce this law and the one requiring vaccination, they will actually put into practice some real economy instead of the variety it is popular to talk about at election time. To prevent not only smallpox, but the commoner and more dangerous diseases that cause most of our sickness and death in Kentucky, we need simply real education, actual law enforcement, and a health officer in each jurisdiction who can devote his entire time, to, and earn a living by preventing sickness and death instead of treating people for unnecessary sickness.

It is a violation of the law to be vaccinated, and it is also unlawful for any person, firm or company to employ any unvaccinated person in any work for salary or wages of any kind. Intelligent people will be vaccinated without compulsion because it is reasonable, necessary and lawful; and health and other officials are urged to see that those who are not intelligent be compelled to be vaccinated so that the unnecessary drain on the city and county treasuries and on the purses of the people themselves from this entirely unnecessary pestilence be stopped. Smallpox, like murder, will only be prevented when the law is enforced. In Germany they have no smallpox because they enforce compulsory education and compulsory vaccination.

This Board urges all the people of Kentucky, who read this, to be vaccinated within seven years, be revaccinated if they have been vaccinated within seven years, and to see that their families, neighbors and dependents are vaccinated immediately.

Fresh reliable vaccine virus may be secured from the State Board of Health, Bowling Green, Kentucky, for $0.50 for each 100 points. By order of the Board.

FOUR SCORE AND ONE

Henry Terrill, One of the County's Oldest Citizens Gone To His Reward.

Henry Terrill, the fifth child of Reuben and Eliza Parker Terrill, was born March 28th, 1833 on the farm now owned by Mrs. Mary V. Chilson, in the hills of this county. In this family were nine children and only one is alive, Arthur Terrill, who lives with his daughter, Mrs. Frank Laws, of Republic, Kansas. The Terrill and Parker families are among the oldest families of our county. The Parkers came to Boone county in 1798 and the Terrills came to this county a little later. Both families were from Virginia but the Terrills lived in Greenup county before they came to Boone. The father and mother of Henry Terrill died within a week of each other in 1847.

Henry Terrill was married to Mary Parg, of Missouri, October 7, 1858. To this union were born five children viz: Reuben, Belle, May, Georgia and Henrietta. May Terrill married Dr. J. C. Holloway in 1881 and died in 1897, leaving a son, Pratt Holloway, now of Burlington. Henrietta Terrill married Edgar C. Riley in 1895 and she is the only living child of this family. In 1896 Mary Parg Terrill died and since that time Mr. Terrill has made his home with his daughter Mrs. Riley. In October, 1907, Mr. Terrill lost his eyesight but in spite of this affliction he was cheerful and always ready to talk about old times. He had a very remarkable memory and was familiar with all the early history of our county.

As a business man Mr. Terrill was careful. He owned a good farm below Petersburg and while he did not try to accumulate much of this world's goods his family always lived well. In religion he and his wife were among the leaders in the Christian church at Petersburg until the organ was used in worship. Since that time both were very earnest in belief but that was one essential which they could not overlook.

Mr. Terrill died February 25th, 1914, at the home of his daughter in Burlington, lacking one month and one day of being 81 years old. He has suffered from cancer of the stomach since October 23, 1913. He was buried in the family plot in the Petersburg cemetery last Saturday.

A short service was conducted at 9 a. m. Saturday morning in the death of Henry Terrill the county has lost one of its oldest and most estimable citizens. His death is a sad loss to the community but his family will miss him most of all. He made his home with her, the sympathy of all.

In a letter received from Boone's Representative in the legislature, Hon. W. T. Stott, he says:

"I receive your paper every Friday and am glad to get the news from over the county, the dearest spot on earth to me. Well, Will, I am trying to vote right, at least I am voting according to the dictates of my conscience, and feel as if I have no regrets to make. I came here and only had two acquaintances here, Rankin Revell and Elmo Gaines, and I feel honored by being appointed one of the Probe Committee, which teaches me that I am looked upon as being a good citizen. This makes me feel some but not me as there is too much responsibility resting upon me if I do my duty, which I intend to do as I see matters with each vote to all. Regards to all. I remain Yours, &c. W. T. STOTT."

Renewing her subscription to the Recorder, Mrs. S. M. Utz, of Valley Falls, Kansas, writes: "Sometimes I have thought of asking you to discontinue your paper to my address, but I find that having been a reader of my old home paper so long, it is not easily given up, for it keeps me informed of the times and changes as that occur in that (to me now) distant home. We had a very mild winter up to the first of February. Since that time the ground has been covered with snow and been very dry, and last Sunday night and Monday we have had the worst blizzard we have had for several years."

As Sunday, the 22d, was my birthday as well as Washington's, I was disappointed as not even my children, who live near me, but I was well remembered by friends as I received over 100 birthday cards which I appreciated very much. It being my 90th birthday I desired to keep open house but the weather and day were not suitable. I wish you and all my friends a prosperous year."

Last Monday Albert Conner sold his small farm adjoining the town of Burlington on the south to Hubert Rouse and bought of D. E. Castleman, of Erlanger, the property occupied by Rev. Edgar C. Riley and situated just outside the town limits. The consideration of each has been stated at different amounts, but is evident that each piece of property brought a good price. Possession of each purchase is to be given in the next few weeks. Rev. Riley is now hunting a place to occupy.

In a letter received from Judge John M. Lassing, of St. Petersburg, Florida, is a clipping containing a list of the flights of an air ship from St. Petersburg to Tampa. The account says "Mrs. Lizzie Gaines made a special flight, and Judge Lassing suggests that 'some of the folks from home can fly as high as anyone else when they want to.'"

Stockholders Take Notice.

The consolidation of a number of the Farmer's Telephone lines into the Mutual Telephone Co. will have been in operation one year the 1st of April, 1914. During this time the company has extended her service, built new lines, paid all the expenses incidental to consolidation, lineament switchman and met all other obligations necessary to the organization of a new company at the small unprecedented cost of five dollars a box.

During the coming year we desire to extend the service to all the principal lines in the county, who desire to join us, and a number have so expressed themselves, then we will have one of the best and cheapest systems in the State.

It is not a money maker, but a money saver to the Farmer. The assessments the present year was divided into two payments, making it easy for everyone to pay. Most of the stockholders have paid their assessments. In some cases, however, we have failed to pay in full or in part. This we are sure is simply a matter of carelessness, as no one should expect service without paying for it.

To keep the service at its best the payment should be prompt. We urge and request that those in arrears, send their assessments to any of the following Directors by March 30th, so the books can be closed without debt: E. H. Tanner, J. G. Finner, H. R. Hearne, S. S. Smith, Geo. H. Swenson, L. R. Miller, Wm. McMillan.

One of our By-Laws says, if the assessment is not paid within 30 days after notice has been given, the party shall be discontinued from the line until said assessment is paid. We haven't enforced this law yet and we hope we shall not have to do so. Yet we will enforce it if necessary. Therefore, take notice and govern yourselves accordingly.

By order of the Directors. Wm. McMillan, Secretary.

Los Angeles, Cal., Letter

Dear Editor:—Enclosed please find money order to cover subscription to the RECORDER. I have thought so many times in the last few months that I would write a few lines to my country paper but since returning to California last time I have been so busy I have had no time to do much writing.

This city and Southern California at large have so changed in the past few years that it would be impossible for one to describe the growth. On corners that time which were occupied by one and two story shacks now have modern office buildings and hotels and at that time are now built up with beautiful residences.

Not only has the city grown but the surrounding country has built up and become a regular work of interurban railway lines. We have had an unusual amount of rain this season, total to date being 22.05 inches this date last year was only 18.3 inches. The average season's rainfall is 15.55 inches. In last Wednesday and Thursday's storm over 7 inches of rain fell, turning the streets into rivers and the Los Angeles river into a roaring Niagara, causing a damage of $300,000 (estimated) to city and surrounding country in destruction to streets and roads and railway systems.

This is a great country, I love it, and it is going to be greater for when the great canal is opened for travel and eastern transportation companies get a taste of the prosperity here, there is nothing but superhuman power that can prevent its progress.

My mother is with me here and joins me in kindest regards to all our old Kentucky friends.

Most heartily yours, F. R. McMULLEN, 227 E. 30th St., Los Angeles, Cal.

At a recent discussion among doctors in Cincinnati as to whether a person could live without a brain the following story was told. "A man was practicing medicine in Indiana," said one "a remarkable case came under my supervision. A man while out hunting had leaned upon his shot gun and while he was gone he accidentally making a large wound in his head just over the ear. The brain was laid bare, and in bringing the patient to the hospital a handful of the gray matter leaked out. He was trapped and finally recovered. His mental faculties were apparently as good as ever. 'Your story is very interesting,' interrupted an auditor, 'but it sounds to me somewhat inconsistent.' 'Why so?' questioned the narrator. 'Because,' answered the other doctor, 'if he had ever had a handful of brains he wouldn't have leaned on the gun.'—Ex.

Renewing his subscription to the Recorder W. T. Davis writes: "We have moved from Burlington to Shelby City. I wish you to send the Recorder my address at this office. This is a mile from our home. We live three miles south of Danville. We have purchased a farm of 100 acres and have moved on and are getting ready to farm."

Jerry Blyth has bought a farm at Landing this county. The farm contains 150 acres being the same owned by the late Thomas N. Grimley and sold by Master Commissioner Maurer at the court house door last Monday.

CLAIMED BY DEATH.

J. W. Berkshire, Senator From The Twenty-Third District Dies at the Home of His Daughter in Lawrenceburg, Ind. Last Monday.

Hon. Jno. W. Berkshire died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Fisher, in Lawrenceburg, Indiana, last Monday afternoon. He was a member of the State Senate from the 23d Senatorial District, composed of the counties of Gallatin, Boone and Owen, and was at his post of duty in Frankfort when he became ill and was on his way home when he was detained at Lawrenceburg by ice in the river, and he was unable to get away until death. He had been in delicate health for several months as the result of a stroke of paralysis from which he had sufficiently recovered to go to Frankfort when the General Assembly convened, but in the last few weeks his physical condition became such that an effort was being made to get him home, it being feared his trouble would prove fatal.

John W. Berkshire, son of Bellfield and Elizabeth Terrill Berkshire, was born near Petersburg, this county, August 12th, 1842, and until 1881 was engaged in farming. He always took an active interest in county affairs, and in 1888, was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the office of Sheriff being defeated by only a few votes with three candidates in the race. He was a delegate to the State convention in Louisville, when the late Governor William Gobel was nominated, and served many years as a member of the Boone County Democratic Committee. He was a member of the Christian church and the Odd-Fellows' lodge in Petersburg by both of which he will be missed greatly as he always took great interest in the welfare of each of these organizations.

Mr. Berkshire served two terms as Boone county's member in the General Assembly and at the close of his second term he was elected to the State Senate from this district in which office a vacancy is caused by his death. John W. Berkshire and Miss Fannie S. Walton, sister of Hon. N. B. Walton, were married March 15, 1915. Mrs. Walton, two daughters and four sons survive him.

The funeral took place at the Christian church in Petersburg yesterday, the discourse being delivered by the pastor, Rev. Waggoner, which was followed by the Odd-Fellows' funeral service. Mr. Berkshire's long service at the capital of the State had secured for him the admiration of many friends in different parts of Kentucky who will deplore his death. The county, and the town of Petersburg especially, has lost a worthy citizen whose death brings to the bereaved family the sympathy of all.

Man and Woman.

If there were no women, men would have no object in life; they would have no love, no interest them; they would not care a Chinaman whether their collars were ironed or not; they would have nobody to nurse them when they had the toothache, to keep them from believing they were going to die when an old fashioned stomach ache had its grip upon them. There would be no body to take for ice cream and no small edition of fresh, red blood to hug. There would be no body to fight against being kissed and then take to it as natural as the cat does to cream. Most important of all, there would be nobody to write against, to complain of, to love with all your heart, your soul. Without her, man would never have taste of the other place on earth. So if a man has any sense, he will never get his arm around the woman he is fond of, thank the Lord for her and wonder as she does what in the world he would do without her.—Fulton Leader.

DAIRY FACTS

THREE GOOD FEEDING RULES

Pennsylvania Station Says Make Amount of Grain Given Cow Agree With Her Milk Yield.

It is not practical to spend the time necessary under ordinary conditions to figure out an extra ration for each individual cow. It is practicable, however, to make a mixture of grains and other concentrates and to feed each cow from this grain mixture in proportion to her daily milk yield, and then to give her all the roughage she will eat up clean, and be reasonably sure that she has had all the food she needs to produce milk to the limit of her ability under ordinary conditions. The following rules of feeding are suggested by the Pennsylvania station:

1. Feed grain in proportion to milk yield, i. e., give her, for example, one pound of grain mixture per day, for each three or four pounds of milk produced in one day.
2. Feed all the roughage, which the cow will eat up clean, up to the point where she gains too much weight.
3. Whenever she becomes too fat, reduce the amount of roughage, leaving the amount of grain to be determined by the milk yield.

When a cow leaves uneaten either grain or roughage, which is free from mold, dirt or foreign material, it should be removed immediately, the manger swept clean and a much smaller amount given at each succeeding feeding until her appetite returns, as evidenced by the cleaning up of her manger; the amounts should be gradually increased until she is on full feed.

PASTEURIZE MILK AT HOME

Small Outfit for Use in the Kitchen Is Suggested by Professor Franden of University of Nebraska.

Prof. J. H. Franden of the University of Nebraska has suggested a small pasteurizing outfit to be used in the kitchen when the milk has not been pasteurized before. Says the Orange Judd Farmer, "It is arranged to hold a single quart bottle submerged while the water around it is heated. A thermometer in the milk indicates when it is hot enough and this should be between 150 and 160 degrees. The pail and the bottle should then be removed from the stove and allowed to stand 25 minutes. Through an opening in the cover, a stream of cold water from a faucet is slowly let into the pail. After a short time the milk will be cooled down to about the temperature of the water.

A similar device for use when an infant is being fed on cow's milk, is built to hold five small bottles, which, when pasteurized in the morning and kept in the refrigerator, are ready to warm up and use at the proper time during the day. It is not necessary to be so careful about the temperature, except that scalded milk is considered somewhat less digestible for infants pasteurized at a lower temperature and for a longer time.

SILLO IS VALUABLE ADJUNCT

Poor Man's Necessity and Rich Man's Luxury, Says Connecticut Experiment Station Bulletin.

A bulletin of the Connecticut experiment station says that "the silo is the poor man's necessity and the rich man's luxury, for by it both gain a better and more independent living." It is a well-known fact that much more of the nutrients in the corn plant and other forage crops can be saved in the silo than by any other method. Besides the advantage of silage in the economy of preserving so large a percentage of the feeding quality of forage crops, it furnishes a succulent feed in the winter when it is needed to stimulate the assimilation of food in an animal, to keep the appetite active and the digestive organs healthy.

In a summary of its conclusions the bulletin says that any farm product can be siloed profitably, there is sufficient sugar in the mixture to ferment into acid to preserve it. The following mixtures silo successfully and make a very desirable and nearly balanced ration: Alfalfa and rye, clover and timothy or wheat or oats, and oats and peas, and corn and cowpeas and soybeans. Nothing excels the feeding of silage, especially legume silage, during the dry summer months for keeping up the flow of milk to its highest point.

Safe Investment.
The dairy farmer who stocked to its full capacity without being overstocked is a pretty safe investment.

SORE THROAT NEEDS CARE

At the First Feeling of Discomfort, Well-Known Effective Remedies Should Be Employed.

An excellent illustration of the old adage, familiarity breeds contempt, is found in the tendency of most people to pay little or no attention to that very common complaint, sore throat. As a matter of fact, neglect of a sore throat is not only extremely unwise, but may have fatal results. Director Neff, of the department of health and charities, points out in his weekly bulletin the dangerous consequences that may and very often do follow such neglect.

Among the deadly diseases of which sore throat is one of the early symptoms are diphtheria, scarlet fever, and "septic sore throats." The mortality from diphtheria has been greatly reduced since the discovery of antitoxin, but the application is delayed in the likelihood of cure is materially reduced. Doctor Neff points out that there has not been a single death at the Philadelphia hospital for contagious diseases where diphtheria antitoxin was administered on the first day of the disease, whereas the ratio of mortality steadily increased as admission was delayed, until it rose to nine per cent. where the remedy was not applied until the fifth day.

A mere glance at the mortality statistics of diphtheria, scarlet fever and septic sore throat shows the importance of swift precaution. The sound advice of Doctor Neff is that every person with a sore throat should have it examined at once by a physician. Such a simple precaution may stop in time any one of these dread diseases and may save your life or your child's life. It is also extremely important to bear in mind that most sore throats are contagious, therefore contact with those thus afflicted should be avoided.

PLUTARCH ON THE SLIT SKIRT

Garment Is Described as Being in Vogue in Times of Lycurgus the Law Giver.

We must reread Plutarch. We must reread some of the other so-called classics—not for antiquity's sake, either. Thomas Owen of Topeka informs us that we are centuries out in saying the slit skirt is only 1,200 years old. Speaking of Lycurgus the Lawgiver and his times, Plutarch relates (so writes Mr. Owen):

"The skirts of the habit which the virgins wore were not sewed to the bottom, but opened at the sides as they walked, and discovered the thigh, as Sophocles very plainly write:

"Sitt in the Night dress struts Herminion Whose opening folds display the naked thigh."

This passage of Plutarch is well worth looking up for more than details of costume—500 or 900 years before the Christian era, says a writer in Collier's Weekly. You may read there of the complaint made that women in those times were too bold, too masculine, to prone to make themselves mistresses of the houses they inhabited; and even "they wanted a share in the affairs of state." Aristophanes satirized feminism in a comedy that is now 23 centuries old—and still acted! If you have time to do only "timely" reading, you would better cut out the periodicals and read the Greeks. To them we owe (wrote Wilde) "whatever is modern in our life"—including the slit skirt.

Important Court Decision.

A decision that will be of assistance to executors in settling estates, comprising a large amount of securities, was handed down the court of appeals of New York in the case of Luke V. Lockwood vs. U. S. Steel corporation. The court held that a foreign corporation having an office in this state for the transfer and registry of its corporate stock may be compelled to make such transfer at its New York office on demand of the local executor of a testator who was resident in a foreign country at the time of his death, and the stock was in the possession of the executor.

The court ruled that the doctrine that the situs of personal property owned by a decedent is deemed to be either at his domicile or at the domicile of the corporation does not stand in the way of such transfer, since the maintenance of a transfer office here makes this state its domicile to that extent.

Dual Personality.

There was a certain small boy, a native of the country about the city of Strasburg, where about Zeppella's nirships are always flying for anybody to see. He went to Berlin to visit his uncle, who undertook to amuse him by showing him pictures in an illustrated paper.

"And who is that?" said the small boy, placing a sticky finger upon the portrait of an elderly gentleman.

"That," replied the uncle, "is Zeppella."

"It's funny about Zeppella," was the child's answer; "sometimes he looks like a big yellow sausage; and then the first thing you know he has a cap and a white mustache."—New York Evening Post.

Fireproof Films Wanted.

The French government has forbidden the use of celluloid moving picture films after December 1, and ordered that only films that are not inflammable be used. Consequently, the moving picture men are in the air, as, according to Thomas A. Edison, there is no other material known that can be used in making such films.

FOR MILK PRODUCTION

Getting Largest Yield at Least Expense Is Problem.

Adaptability of the Cows Used and Amount and Kind of Food Supplied Are Factors That Must Be Wisely Considered.

(By C. H. ECKLES)

There are two factors which largely control the economical production of milk. One is the adaptability of the cows used for this purpose and depends upon her individual breed characteristics. The other is the amount and kind of food eaten. The problem confronting the dairyman is the production of the largest amount of milk and butter at the least expense. In order that this may be realized both the important factors mentioned must receive careful attention.

In most cases the largest direct expense is for feed. Everyone familiar with the prevalent condition knows that a large amount of feed is used without producing the results it should. It would be safe to say that the average yearly milk production per cow could be increased by one-half or three-fourths by following better methods of feeding.

Every owner of a cow welcomes the time when the animal can be turned out to pasture. Not only is the labor and expense connected with winter feeding done away with, but each cow is expected to give the best results of her year on grass. In changing from dry feed to grass, it is best to go somewhat slowly, especially with heavy milking cows. The young, immature grass of early spring contains a large amount of water and a small amount of dry matter, and it is almost impossible for a heavy milking cow to get enough of such feed to supply the necessary amount of nutrients. Wheat and rye pastures are of the same nature. Another reason for putting cattle on pasture gradually rather than suddenly is the effect on the taste of the milk. When a cow is changed at once from a grain ration to grass a very marked taste is developed in the milk, while if this change in feed is made gradually and not suddenly the change in the taste of the milk is scarcely noticed.

Soon after the cows are on pasture they reach the maximum production of milk for the year. This suggests that the dairyman must do in order that the production of milk may be the largest, is to imitate these summer conditions as far as possible throughout the remainder of the year. This is what the careful dairyman and skilled feeder does, and the results correspond closely to the success with which these summer conditions are maintained. The summer conditions which bring about the maximum production and which are to be maintained as far as possible through the year as described in the following statement:

1. An abundance of palatable food.
2. Balanced ration.
3. Succulent feed.
4. Moderate temperature.
5. Comfortable surroundings.

There is some difference of opinion regarding grain feeding while on pasture from the standpoint of economy.

DAIRY NOTES

The good cow deserves to be kept in comfortable surroundings. A constant income is one of the great advantages of dairying. There is constant improvement in the land where cows are kept. Cleanliness is absolutely essential in the production of good milk. And the dairy business develops fertility of the brain as well as of the look.

Lookout for those cold rains; put the cows up. This applies to calves as well.

Feeding musty hay to milk cows is not economy. Better let the young stock have it.

The silo makes it possible for the farmer to have a green feed ration the year around.

Even when the cows are fed a full ration of silage crops they should have some grain.

There is no good argument against having plenty of light in the cow stable, but many for it.

SAVING LIVES OF INFANTS

Humanitarian Movement One of the Most Successful of Present Day Endeavor.

Among all the humanitarian movements of the time, there is perhaps none which has been more free from the spectacular and the sensational than that for the reduction of infant mortality. It has been steadily prosecuted, quietly and patiently though with vigor and enthusiasm, both by governmental authorities and by private agencies. When there has been anything wild or noisy in connection with the matter, it has come from all-round world-reformers whose tongues the mere fact that there is such a thing as infant mortality is sufficient to set wagging, and who think nothing of saying that there has been an appalling increase in an evil that exists, when they haven't taken the slightest trouble to find out whether it has increased or diminished.

The workers go about the matter very differently. They fight infant mortality neither because it is greater nor because it is less than it was 50 years ago, but because they know that by the taking of proper measures the lives of thousands of infants can be saved. But they unquestionably do find great stimulus, as well as great satisfaction, in such figures as those presented by Dr. Emmett Holt of New York, president of the American Association for the Study and Prevention of Infant Mortality, at the annual meeting of the association in Washington the other day. "In 1890, in New York city," he said, "the death-rate was 28.8 per cent. of infants; in 1908 it was 13.8 per cent.; in 1912 only a little more than 10 per cent."

This means that in New York city alone, for every infant that now dies three would have died under the conditions of a quarter of a century ago—that 20,000 or 30,000 little ones are saved to their parents every year in this city through the improvements that have taken place.—New York Evening Post.

SEES MARKS OF DEGENERACY

In the Opinion of Sir Gilbert Parker, the Modern Race of Man Is Losing Its Senses.

The astonishing question of Sir Gilbert Parker, Are our senses growing less keen—his fast-degenerated has aroused great interest. Sir Gilbert thinks our life may have been made so mechanically easy that some of our senses are losing their vitality and usefulness.

"Motoring might be instanced by some as evidence that the acuteness of seeing and hearing is on the increase," said Sir Gilbert recently.

"The chauffeur's marvelous quickness of eye, by which he observes danger, and by a halfbreath, escapes it by skilled precision, might be pointed to, but I regard that as a kind of specialization, exceptionally narrow and confined to a limited area. "Too often the chauffeur is like a horse in blinders—he can only see one way down a narrow lane. Many accidents are due to limited and inadequate observation. I know a chauffeur who can see very well ahead of him, but if he wants to see to the right or left he has to turn his head to right or left. Every one knows that the trained and educated eye can see to the right and left without turning the head."

Bowling Green, Ky., Feb. 25.—A smallpox scare started here yesterday when it became known that there were five cases at the pest house and thirteen in Delaware. About two weeks ago a student here became afflicted and was sent to the pest house. Later four more students exposed to the disease were stricken and were all so immediately sent out of the city.

HUGE INVITATION

A Conference of Farmers and Business Men Early This Spring

A MEETING FOR THE SOUTH

A Great Opportunity For a Short-cut Method of Seeing What Is Being Done Rural Co-operation in the United States—A Real Getting Together.

Almost everyone who has read the magazines and newspapers in the last or so has wished to travel to many points and learn first-hand what the leaders in co-operation are doing. Of course, this has been an impossibility and even if one could make it possible, there would be no time left for constructive work at home. To a certain extent the "County Life Conference" in Louisville, April 7, 8, 9, 10, will make this a possibility without extensive traveling.

Leaders in co-operative movements from many parts of the South and from innumerable Northern States, have been engaged to tell just what they have accomplished and how it was accomplished. They are to tell their "ups" as well as their "downs," in the cause of co-operation. They will also be on hand to show exactly how the work which has been a success at home can be transplanted to other neighborhoods. They will bring with them not only the story, but also all of the material that is used in their perfected organization to-day that it may be smoothly.

Enough enthusiasm is sure to be developed to make organizations among these present a certainty. This will be done by these men in the most detailed way possible. The leaders who come to the Conference should be able to take the good word home in such shape that it can be redeveloped and take root.

If you should wish to better your own condition, or the condition of your state, or the condition of the whole South, it would be well worth your time and money to come to Louisville at this time.

Even if you are not at all anxious to hear any one of the speakers or see any of the demonstrations, still it would be a delight to be in a crowd of people who are enthusiastic enough and devoted enough to come and rub elbows with other leaders. After all, there is nothing much better in life than the glow which comes to all of us when we come in contact with "live wires" from scattered places over the whole country.

If you are a leader or feel that you might be a leader or hope to be a leader, make your plans at once and get the dust off your grip sack that you may be ready to be with the splendid bunch that will talk things over so that the South may grow in prosperity, in farm life, in home life and in neighborhoods.

FARMERS' CLUBS

Prof. A. D. Wilson.

The press of the country for the past several years has been full of the wonderful work done by the Boys and Girls' Corn and Tomato Clubs. Naturally, it would seem time for us to have something in the press concerning clubs for farmers and their wives.

Some work in successful farmers' clubs has been done in the State of Minnesota and Prof. A. D. Wilson, of the Extension Department of State University is the man who has developed it. His wide experience in this field has appealed so strongly to those in charge of the program for the Farmers' and Business Men's Conference, that arrangements were made for him to come to the meeting at Louisville, April 7-10, to develop the same enthusiasm that has attended the work in his home state. He is a speaker of ability, and it is hoped that he may entice our farmers to the point of organizing some clubs in Kentucky and in the South for this year.

The Conference in Louisville, April 7-9-10, is of such importance that extremely low railroad rates have been made. You can make the trip from your home town to Louisville at this time for one fare plus 25 cents.

NOTES From MEADOWBROOK FARM

Feed alfalfa to the hogs.

Keep the laying hens active.

Give the colt needed exercise.

It does not pay to send half-fat sheep to market.

Change of feed occasionally serves as an appetizer.

Fowls in confinement, to do well, need a variety of food.

Concrete floors in the barn help a great deal in saving manure.

Sweet food for hogs is better than any that has fermented or soured.

Only sound fruit and vegetables should be stored in the cellar for winter use.

Red clover in bloom is not good for hogs, but when young it makes a fine pasture.

An egg may be fertile and hatch and still the chick will not live because of lack of vitality.

Strong urine, thickened with soft soap, makes a good mixture to rid cows and calves of lice.

Do not haul waste products back to the farm from the creamery in the same cans used for delivering milk.

A calf from a poor cow is a doubtful proposition, but a calf from a good cow poorly raised is almost a crime.

Animal feeding saves the cost of hauling farm products to market; it creates a demand for the crops on the farm.

Don't hurry the cows from the stable to the pasture or vice versa. Dogs have no place on a dairy farm to help in driving cows.

One advantage in keeping sheep on the farm is that whenever they are kept the farm presents a neater and cleaner appearance.

Never grease the hen that is setting, as grease getting on the shells of the eggs will close the pores and smother the chickens.

Horse breeding requires more capital, is more profitable if successful and involves larger losses if not, than any other kind of stock breeding.

Coarse, masculine-looking pullets never make the best layers. Select those whose heads have a distinctly feminine appearance and expression.

Hearty eaters are most to be desired for cows, and they may usually be selected while they are calves. You will find a dainty calf to be a dainty cow.

The food properties of wheat bran and high grade alfalfa meal are very much the same, though it is best to use both when available for variety's sake.

Every farm ought to be equipped with a crowbar and a ten-foot iron-tipped wooden spike for moving heavy objects. They save time and take the place of muscle.

Build silos, grow less acres of corn, but utilize the whole crop in its best form, and grow alfalfa on the corn acreage saved for a cheap, palatable home-grown balancer for corn.

Just because an ear of corn is large does not necessarily make it the best for seed. See that the rows are straight from tip to butt, and that the kernels are all well formed and plump.

Let us not wait until spring to make up our minds about what we are going to do in the way of poultry raising. But in our planning, let us not neglect the present work in the poultry yard.

The perfect bird in any variety or breed is very hard to find. Occasionally we find some very fine specimens, but when we go over the birds from head to toe we are sure to find that something is not just as it should be.

Of course you have saved your best grain for seed. Next is to see that it is clean. Right here is where the fan mill will pay big dividends. It increases the crop, prevents foul weeds, and best of all makes better seed for next year.

It is not best to keep the colts tied up after day, nor is it best to allow them to run with the mothers while the latter are at work in the fields. Keep them in a lot that has good fences, where they can run and play and yet be in the sunshine.

Get rid of the old hens.

Roup is a dangerous disease.

Geese rarely contract disease.

Give the hogs what they will eat.

Keep pure, fresh water always within reach.

Having things convenient saves labor and discourages waste.

To avoid disease, it is better to breed away from it.

Regularity of feeding and work makes long lived horses.

Salt should always be accessible, as well as fresh, pure water.

There are 4,386,000 mules and 20,567,000 horses in the United States.

If kerosene is rubbed into leather hardened by water, it will soften it well.

Be careful and not close a can containing warm milk which has not been aerated.

Animals must be fed on food that they relish, in order to produce the best results.

The guinea fowl is a great forager and destroys many insects that other fowls will not touch.

The Mediterranean or egg breeds are Leghorns, Minorcas, Spanish, Blue Andalusians and Anconas.

Don't house the sheep too closely. Cold is not as bad as damp, foul air. Give shelter instead of warmth.

See that the garden tools are dry and properly stored. A little paint and oil will make the matter surer.

Remove from the dairy herd at once any animal suspected of being in bad health and do not use her milk.

Stock can be fed with profit only when they make a steady gain. Any falling off costs double to regain.

Dairy cows should be fed twenty-five to forty pounds of silage, supplemented with five to ten pounds of hay, daily.

Scratches, grease-heal and other animal diseases come directly from not taking proper care of the horses' feet.

Blackberries should be given space in the garden, for there are few, if any, fruits that give quicker and better returns.

Use a metallic strainer; it is practically impossible to keep cloth strainers sweet and clean, and free from bacteria.

Aim to bring the pullets into laying condition at a time which will be most consistent with a continuous winter production of eggs.

It costs no more to keep a flock of known good layers than it does to keep a flock of poor layers and the first kind is profitable.

In selecting the brood sows, as in other lines of farm work, the man who can think three or four years ahead is the man who will succeed.

Water scalding hot is not good to thaw out the grindstone with in cold weather. Better take a little longer and use water fairly hot, but not boiling hot.

Root crops, such as parsnips, beets, and carrots, may be prevented from shriveling in the winter if they are covered slightly with dry sand in the bin or box.

Plan to put away some good clover or alfalfa hay to feed the hens. They will more than pay you for your trouble by the increased amount of eggs that will be produced.

Every farm ought to have a little work shop stocked with a few good tools and plenty of bolts of various sizes, nuts, rivets, a few pieces of round and strap iron and such things.

Green forage crops of some sort can be grown on most any farm, and they yield a large amount of fine feed. Oats and field peas, rye, rape, corn and vetch are some that can be sown with results.

A pig's tail is said to indicate un-erminally the condition of the animal. If it hangs loose it shows that the pig is not well and that its food should be changed; if it is curled tightly, the pig is healthy and happy.

The successful poultryman must plan each year to raise a few more chickens than he has need. In this manner he will be enabled to cull freely. Keep only the best and carry over at least half as many pullets as hens.

If any of the fowls have rough, scaly scales on their shanks, wash the shanks with kerosene, then apply vaseline and apply the vaseline continuously every other day until the scales have returned to their normal appearance.

Keep the hens active by making them work for their food. Put it in straw or other similar material so they will have to scratch for it. This will prevent them from getting fat, and this is important, as fat hens do not lay a great number of eggs.

Contractor Nicholson's bid was the lowest—$225. The other bids were $237 and $245. The building will be built as soon as the weather permits.

One day last week Mrs. John Conley, of Mudlick neighborhood, became marooned in the ice on the creek near the Sam Johnson farm. She was coming to Walton in a buggy to take a train for Cincinnati. The horse after breaking through the ice got into the middle of the creek and refused to go further as it could not vault on the ice in front of it which reached to its shoulder. Mrs. Conley was kept sitting in the buggy for over an hour until aid came. She suffered considerably with the cold and missed her train.

The farmer's institute held here Monday and Tuesday was fairly well attended. The bad condition of the roads was the cause in part of the small attendance. Then again, those who should be interested in this movement (the farmers) were indifferent in some cases and failed to attend. The feature has always been intended to better the condition of the farmers by imparting information that will be of untold benefit to them.

The speakers employed by the State were as follows: J. E. Hill, Tennessee; W. B. Anderson, Missouri; C. L. Clayton, Louisville; Mrs. Mary B. Ginn, Lexington.

NEW RAILROAD

Will Open Up Rich Farming Lands Along the Ohio River.

The following is taken from the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune of recent date. There may be something in it and there may not:

A steam railroad to run from Madison to Miamitown along the Ohio River, entrance to Cincinnati to be over the Cincinnati and Westwood line will be under construction in the spring.

Practically all the final touches of the enterprise were completed last night in the office of one of the leading members of the Cincinnati bar when a conference was held by those interested.

It was announced at the conference that the Cincinnati and Westwood line had been sold to Chas. L. Henry as an important link in an interurban line he is building from Rushville to Cincinnati. Mr. Henry is one of the great interurban railroad men of the country and is accredited with having constructed the first interurban road in the country. He is a resident of Indianapolis. He is the owner of the Indianapolis and Cincinnati road and roads to Connersville and Greensburg, besides other traction properties.

The steam railroad will connect with the Henry road at Miamitown and use its tracks into Cincinnati. The road will start at Madison and touch Vevay, Patriot, Rising Sun, and Greendale, and there will be free ferries at all these points to the Kentucky shore, as well as free ferries to connect the Laughtery Club and Warsaw and Carrollton on the Kentucky side.

This steam railroad will open up 300,000 acres of rich farming land in Ohio and Switzerland counties and 200,000 acres on the Kentucky, territory not now tapped by a railroad of any kind, steam or electric.

Both Switzerland and Ohio counties have voted a tax of 2 per cent for the road surveys have been completed and rights of way obtained over all but a small mileage.

It was reported that the C. C. & L. had completed a survey with the intention of building into Switzerland and Ohio Counties when the C. C. & L. was sold to the C. & O.

Owing to the nature of the ground what is called "the second bottom" is built with a comparatively low cost. The average grade is but one-half of 1 per cent and the curvature is but three degrees. Most of the construction work will be fills.

The land of the two counties is admirably adapted for raising vegetables and cattle. The road will be converted into dairy farms and market gardens and the produce shipped into Cincinnati with the expected result of reducing the cost of living.

At Madison connection will be made with Pennsylvania lines that connect with Indianapolis. Cochran is a suburb of Aurora and Greendale of Lawrenceburg.

A unique feature of the road is that only heavy freight will be hauled by steam power. Light freight and passengers will be carried by gasoline electric cars.

Amending the Primary Law.

The measure in the legislature amending the primary law, will no doubt pass without opposition. It provides that the section requiring a nominating petition shall be stricken out, and in the event of the election of a candidate for any office the nomination shall be granted him without the expense of participating in the primary, as now is the case. The primary ballots shall be so stamped upon the front and back and there shall be ballots for each political party. The candidate who asks nomination must make affidavit that he is duly qualified and that he has affiliated with and supported the nomination of the party from which he asks nomination. The measure further provides that no person shall participate in any primary election unless he has affiliated with one of the "winners or nominees" of such party at the last preceding general election, or if during the last five years preceding he, having been voted for the length of time, has not usually voted for the nominees of the party to which he claims to belong. The bill pro-

A MESSAGE TO WOMEN

Who Are "Just Ready to Drop." When you are "just ready to drop," when you feel so weak that you can hardly drag yourself about—and because you have not slept well, you get up as tired-out next morning as when you went to bed, you need help.

Miss Lea Dumas writes from Malone, N. Y., saying: "I was in a bad, run-down condition for several weeks but two bottles of Vinol put me on my feet again and made me strong and well. Vinol has done me more good than all the other medicines I ever took."

If the careworn, run-down women, the pale, sickly children and feeble old folks around here would follow Miss Dumas' example, they, too, would soon be able to say that Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron remedy, had built them up and made them strong.

It is a wonderful, strength creator and body-builder, and we sell it under a guarantee of satisfaction. You get your money back if Vinol does not help you.

P. S. For any skin trouble try our Sazo Salve. We guarantee it.

vides that such qualifications shall be determined as of the date of the primary without regard to the qualifications or disqualifications as they exist at the succeeding regular election. In precincts where registration is required no elector except those entitled to vote by special registration shall be entitled to vote in any primary unless he is registered in the registration book for the preceding year as affiliating with the party whose ballot he offers to vote.

Shrouded in Mystery.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 26.—The second Coroner's inquest, which has held today, upon the death of Mrs. Laura Wilder Simpson, the young society matron who died from a pistol-shot wound received last Sunday at the home of her husband, Lawrence Simpson, a wealthy young farmer near Avon, this county, has left the matter shrouded in even deeper mystery than ever.

Although the second inquiry had been held, the coroner's request of the family of the young woman, who felt that the verdict rendered yesterday by the coroner's jury that the killing was not suicide, but decided to state it was accidental, was not fair to members of the household, by leaving as it did a shadow of suspicion hanging over them; yet the same jury today after hearing two additional witnesses and probing further into the matter not only again returned practically the same verdict, but refused point blank to accept a verdict offered by Common wealth's Attorney John R. Allen that Mrs. Simpson came to her death from a wound caused by the accidental discharge of a pistol in her own hand, and we further find from the testimony of the slight evidence, incriminating anyone else in the matter of her death.

In fact, so inconclusive did the jury consider the evidence offered that the theory of murder, it is understood, was seriously considered in their deliberations, tho their final decision was that the killing was not suicide, but they did not believe it was shown beyond a reasonable doubt that it was accidental.

However, Commonwealth's Atty. John R. Allen was evidently thoroughly convinced that the shooting was entirely accidental and therefore there is little probability of the case being brought before the next grand jury.

Miss Lula Edwards and Mr. Holman Wingate spent Sunday very pleasantly with their friends, Mr. Bernard C. Gaines and Mrs. Gaines. Mrs. B. C. Graddy proved a most delightful hostess Thursday when she entertained a number of her friends with one of her famous good dinners. L. C. Seothorn's big motor truck and two horse wagon made the trip to Cincinnati and Lawrenceburg Tuesday and Wednesday for supplies for his store, the first in three weeks. Instead of blaming the poor ground hog for all this bad weather, let's give him a credit mark for letting us know what to expect, also a still longer mark for staying out of sight instead of standing around like some other weather prophets with, "I told you so," standing out all over him.

WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Wm. Bagby and wife will go to housekeeping this week on M. M. Ryle's farm on Gunpowder creek at the foot of the big hill. John Q. Elston, of the Hathaway neighborhood, left last week for southern Louisiana, to join the Boone county colony there. Herbert Kirkpatrick, the Burlington fur dealer, made his Hathaway and Gunpowder circuit last week and gathered up a considerable bunch of exceptionally nice furs. Wednesday of last week was a record breaker for Burlington. D. No. 2 in the matter of business transacted. The value of stamps on mail collected on that day was $3.78, and the value of stamps sold was $4.52. Included in this were two money orders, two registered letters and one insured parcel. The farmers deserve great credit for their work in clearing the public roads of snow drifts during the recent blizzard, but no one seems inclined to praise our County Road Engineer very highly for the part he took in the matter. The only assistance he is known to have rendered was to take the county's road grader and clear the snow drifts from the Burlington and Florence pike. He received numerous calls for assistance to clear the drifts from the county roads, but in every instance the appeal was either ignored or positively refused. In contrast to the above named facts the RECORDER took the liberty to state in last week's issue that the farmers had nothing to do but to build fires, feed and cuss the road engineer, when in fact they were actually shoveling snow drifts out of the county roads at their own expense, while the road engineer was sitting by a comfortable fire refusing to assist or compensate them for tussling. No doubt they were tussling. Who wouldn't? BERT SMITH.

UNION.

The Union Graded School Improvement League will meet with the school Friday afternoon of this week. This is a special meeting. The pupils of the school have sold buttons and received in return a large picture of the "Old Swinmin' Hole" and a bust of James Whitcomb Riley and other prizes. Unless their calculations miscarry the tobacco growers of Boone county will pitch a large crop this year. The very remunerative prices received for the 1913 crop will stimulate an active effort for a crop of tobacco and when the farmers of this county set their heads for the production of the only cash crop conditions will prevent. Look out for a bumper crop of tobacco in Boone county this year.

Use The Split Log Drag.

At this season of the year people who live on dirt roads naturally look forward to bad roads. Now this evil can be eliminated to a great extent by the use of the road drag. It has been proven in many places in the United States by actual test that by the constant use of the King Split Log Drag or a similar drag the roads can be kept in splendid condition at least eight months in the year and fifty per cent better than those not dragged at all. Roads that have been dragged during the winter will dry out much more quickly than those that have been neglected, so why is not this test worth while? If the farmers living on the dirt roads of Boone county will drag along their farms the result would be so great that they would regret not having made the effort along this line sooner. With the graders bought by the county to crown the roads there is no better or cheaper way to maintain our roads than by the constant use of the Split Log Drag. Why not follow the example of the Michigan farmers who turned out and dragged 300 miles of road in one day with a very gratifying result. Chas. Goodridge, County Road Engineer.

Mrs. Louisa Craven Dead.

Mrs. Louisa Craven, widow of the late Noah Craven died of asthma at the home of her son, Charles H. Craven, in Constance last Saturday morning. Mrs. Craven had been in poor health for a long time, but was tenderly cared for by her son and his wife until claimed by death. Mrs. Craven was a daughter of the late Dorchester Mirrick, who married in 1852. To this union were born two daughters, Mrs. Anna Craven, of Ludlow and Mrs. W. T. Ryle, who resides four miles west of Burlington. Mrs. Craven survived about ten years after her marriage, leaving his widow with two little girls to provide for and to educate. In 1862 Mrs. Neal and Mrs. Craven were married. To them were born one son, Charles J. Craven, of Constance. Mrs. Craven had reached the good old age of 81 years, three months and nine days when she died. BREEDING BEEF CATTLE.

A Good Time to Start in This Business.

The present prices for beef cattle prove beyond doubt that farmers can invest profitably in breeding stock. It is no longer necessary to harp upon the necessity of live stock feeding to maintain soil fertility; farmers can figure out a greater profit from retaining their stock or buying more breeding animals than they can possibly obtain by selling grain. The country has gone short of cattle because there has been a sweeping and almost wanton sacrifice of breeding stock. There is still a general famine of mothers, so far as beef cattle are concerned, that it will be years before breeding herds can be replenished and put back into the normal supply. What time will be required to rehabilitate the beef industry, depends upon the methods pursued in the conservation of cows and calves. At present there is current scarcity of both at market centers, which indicates that there is a disposition to go back into the breeding business. The replenishing of breeding herds will require considerable time. The cow should not be permitted to breed before she is from 24 to 30 months old. If the calf is a heifer this long period must be repeated. So it will be a long time before the supply of breeding stock can meet the demand.

People Forget.

"The oldest inhabitant is sure there was never such a winter as this, but he forgets." In November 1890 snow fell on the 15th and 28th. None at all fell in December and a slight snow on January 22d, and just a trace on February 28th. There was a slight snow fall on March 5th, and this was all for the entire winter. The weather during January and February was so exceedingly warm that all the fruit trees and peaches attained the size of peas. Nearly the entire crop of slaughtered hogs was lost. There was excellent grazing the last of February and flowers in abundance. While we were enjoying such charming weather on this side of the Atlantic it was so exceedingly cold on the other that the wolves and wild hogs came from the mountains and forests and infested the villages and prowled around the habitations of men, just as they are now. When the weather moderated there it intensified here, and nine inches of snow fell on the 7th, 8th and 9th of March, but the rain on the 11th closed the season. It is comforting to reflect that when the wild animals on the other side, which are now abroad, return to their accustomed haunts, the country people here may yet enjoy the unlimited opportunities for the frozen harvest. The winter of 1872-73 was like the present in every way, and the beauty of the ice, its thickness and long continuance through the last days of February and early part of March are suggestive of what might again happen.—Lexington Leader.

Luke McLuke Says

A man may forget to kiss his wife for four months, but he always gets very affectionate the nights he comes home full of him-burger, onions and booze. A horse never refused to work after you let him stand out in the cold for an hour without any covering. That's the reason the automobile get all the farm blankets. Things could be worse. When you see a young man standing on a corner chewing tobacco you know he isn't wasting his time dancing the Maxine. The reason we have so many divorce cases nowadays is because most women would rather have two twenty-five year old husbands than one fifty-year-old husband. A woman may be as old as she looks, but she is never as young as she acts.

When a woman is raising a family she is always telling her husband that she hasn't a thing to wear. But she gets out so late that she never gets really mad until even her aprons has holes in them. Every now and then a man is jaded by the discovery that some guy whose credit isn't worth a nickel with him can go to a bank and get $10,000 on a note. Don't be afraid of the fellow who announces that he is a Bad Man. But look out for the gink who is always trying to advertise the fact that he is a Good Man. The man who lets his wife come down every day and take his money away from him may be henpecked, but he seldom patronizes the loan sharks. There are a lot of brave men in the world, but it takes a full jeweled hero to go into a department store and purchase a union suit for his wife. Any girl can tell you the difference, but a skin and a complexion look just alike to a fool man. Isn't it funny that the woman whose husband drinks, smokes and gambles never has any more money than the woman whose husband never drinks, smokes or gambles? Love may be blind but it should remember that opera glasses are cheap. There are all sorts of people in the world, including the man who thinks that wearing whiskers if a poodle makes him look dignified. We are living too fast. Some women have their second husbands selected before they learn the first husband's middle name.—Equizer.

How Farmers Can Teach Agricultural Scientists.

It is not enough that the country agent be simply a "common carrier of ideas" from farmer to farmer. He is to be a go-between to gather facts and experiences to the farmer and to interpret the facts and experiences in the light of local conditions and needs. Then he is to go to a step further and carry to the farmer the ideas of the farmer themselves to the Department of Agriculture and the agricultural colleges for these institutions are as much in need of the farmer's wisdom and an accurate knowledge of the farmer's problems as the farmer is in need of the information which agricultural institutions can give.

Active and mutually helpful cooperation is needed between the farmers themselves and all of the public agencies intended to promote agriculture and agricultural education. The farmer needs the facts and the explanations which the scientists can give. The scientists and teachers are no less in need of the facts and the point of view of the farmers; they need to learn the science which farmers call common sense, that wholesome wisdom that is the essence of the thought and experience of generations of men who have made good through work and thought and thrift and unconscious adaptation to circumstances.

In nearly every county it will be found that the serious agricultural problems have been solved by several of the good farmers. There is no better way of teaching a scientific method than by calling attention to some one who is successfully practicing it. It will often be found that the successful farmer has not stopped to analyze the cause of his success and may often attribute it to the wrong factor. The lesson is there just the same.—Ex.

Decline in Small Towns.

Because of complaints of poor business from merchants in many towns of 2,500 or less population throughout the country some of the large wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing concerns in the United States have organized the Home Town Association of America.

The motive for forming this organization is of a financial nature, it is a matter of business. The concerns which are manufacturing and selling goods are interested in the prosperity of the small towns. They have a large trade in such localities, and they do not want this trade to dwindle. They cannot hope to enlarge their business in a town which is diminishing in population and commercial importance. Thru the Home Town Association they hope to infuse more energy into local merchants and to adopt modern methods, that they may sell more goods—and, incidentally, buy more from the wholesalers and manufacturers.

The big concern which is undoubtedly cutting deep into the business of the country merchants. The net sales of one of these houses in Chicago in 1913 amounted to more than fifty-one million dollars. This is only one of many such concerns which by energetic methods have pushed their trade into every town in the land, no matter how insignificant or how remote. To resist competition of this sort the Home Town Association is trying to induce the country merchants to band together in the aggressiveness, to advertise their goods, to handle for customers and to increase their trade.

The plan is to adopt a method which will have to be adopted if the rural merchants expect to continue in business and enjoy a remunerative patronage. They cannot brush away competition by a local desultory appeal to their customers to do their financial advantage to trade at home. Otherwise, the country merchants in their stores and order to houses will continue to take away their trade.—Ex.

Good Advice From Farmers.

Some good advice to the Legislature, from an agricultural standpoint, is embodied in a series of resolutions adopted by the State Farmers' Institute at its annual meeting in Frankfort.

The Institute urges the passage of bills providing for the teaching of agriculture in the common schools and the county High Schools, and in good roads and indorses the State Highway Commission. It urges the Assembly to enact the bill which enables fiscal county agents to do their financial duty to their customers to do their financial duty to trade at home. Otherwise, the country merchants in their stores and order to houses will continue to take away their trade.—Ex.

Make Your Hens Happy.

The other day a visitor at my farm asked me why it was I had such success with my hens. I told him that I managed to keep them happy. He smiled, turned away and took it as a joke. He did not know that hens have a disposition of temperament, and like men, can do their best work when optimistic. I would rather have one happy hen than two grumpy ones.

A happy hen I find is one that fattens the pocketbook. A hen with a grouchy is not worth her space. A downcast hen keeps her feathers plastered down tight by except when you are around with the pail of feed. She never goes around singing softly and good naturedly. The cheerful hen walks a step or two and then takes a scratch, a long, sweeping stroke, while a sour hen goes along with her head down, and when she scratches it is with a short, jerky stroke.

There are different reasons why a hen gets the blues. When a hen is overcrowded she gets disgruntled. She likes to have elbow room. If the housing quarters are either too hot or too cold she loses her spirit. She daunts sanitation.

A hen with her toes frost bitten is never gay and optimistic. A hen too fat is lazy. She takes no interest in life. One too poor cares nothing about her egg, neither does a hen who is a victim of contentment.

A hen likes sunshine. If she can't get it she develops an alarming grouchy. She mopes around and says by every action, "aw, what's the use?"

The average farm hen does not produce a hundred eggs, but if she is one of the enthusiastic, happy hens, she will turn over to you a full dozen a year. That is the difference between a happy hen and a pessimistic hen—forty-four eggs a year. Are you keeping your hens happy?—A. E. V. in Indiana Farmer.

Shooting Things to Pieces.

Unfortunately we seldom secure any progressive legislation here in Kentucky from our General Assembly, but the next Assembly does not contain a few embryo statesmen who are bent on shooting to pieces.

Kentucky was one of the last of the States to enact a fish and game law that embodied modern ideas and methods of fish and game protection. A bureau was created and a capable man was placed at the head of it. Wardens were appointed for the State at large and for the several divisions of the State. The bureau is self-sustaining. Unlike so many other branches of State government it is costing the taxpayers nothing.

Ultimately it will be a source of large revenue. The bureau has been at work on construction plans for restocking the streams with fish and for replenishing the fields and forests with game. The under taking is a large one, for the work was too long neglected, but gratifying progress is being made. The fish and game are being conserved. Lawbreakers are being punished. The dynamiting of fish is no longer an everyday pastime. The reckless slaughter of game out of season is at least being checked. The hunters are paying their licenses cheerfully. The real sportsmen are in favor of the law and the experience of other States demonstrates its wisdom.

But there are members of the Legislature who want to abolish the Fish and Game Commission. There are others who want to shoot holes in the law. In fact there are some members still who want bounties on chicken hawks and fox skulps, and there are others who seem to favor the free and unlimited slaughter of fish and game at any sort of a ratio that a combination of dynamite and devilry may regard as satisfactory.

The House has passed a bill to permit the use of hoop nets in streams. It is to be hoped the Senate will kill this bill as dead as a doornail, and will perform a similar office for all other such measures emanating from that element of the House which seems intent on shooting up some of the State's really beneficial laws.—C.-J.

Pikeville.—Robt. C. Schrader, a former Deputy Sheriff of Pike county, was tried before the Circuit Court here on a charge of having conspired with one J. C. Stone. The jury acquitted Schrader on a plea of justification, he alleging Williamson attacked him with a knife. The jury deliberated over the verdict eleven hours.

STATE NEWS.

Dover is one town of importance without an organization called the "Entre Nous" Club.—Dover News.

The Kentucky Legislature took a day off and spent the time dining with the Lexington Commercial Club. Well, there's consolation in the fact that no fool laws were passed or at least one day of the session.—Danville Messenger.

The Rev. W. W. Willis informs us that though age is creeping upon him, he is still a valuable man of God for tying nuptial knots, taking neither too much nor too little time for the performance. Of all the hundreds of such knots he has tied, not one of them has been severed except by death.—London Sentinel.

Hayden Moore, road and bridge supervisor, has promised that before a new year shall have arrived the county shall have at least a few miles of gravelled roads. It may not be a great deal of gravelled roads that the county will have this year, but it will be a start in the right direction. He is added to a year after year until the whole county will be benefited.—Bardwell News.

The United States government may be doing a good act in ridding the Kentucky river of snags and stumps, but last week hundreds of sticks of dynamite were let go in the river near Ford and hundreds of pounds of fish were killed. Natives along the river were busy picking up most any size from the small fry to the twenty pounders, mostly all white perch. It is a shame that Uncle Sam's men on these dredge boats are allowed to kill millions of fish each year in the Kentucky streams with dynamite.—Winchester Democrat.

Mr. O. S. Searcy, who lives just over the Mercer line in Washington county, if given a chance might prove to be a wizard of electricity. He is a plain "gallus" man, but is very highly thought of. For 25 years he has been experimenting with various devices and has built up wood two machines on the typewriter order that he has connected with a wire. He can touch the keyboard of one and the other machine on the other side of the room and will produce and print the same word. It seems that he should make a fortune out of this, for if words can be reproduced fifteen feet away it is probable that they can be reproduced at any distance, if sufficient power was used.—Hardsburg Herald.

During the present session of the Kentucky Legislature efforts have been made to put into law a provision providing for the teaching of agriculture in the County High Schools, but so far nothing has been accomplished. There is a nation-wide excitement and discussion over the question of how to prevent the boys from leaving the farms to go to the cities. How could we expect any thing else when we are urged to educate the boys, and when they are sent away to school all the courses of study lead them irresistibly into every other vocation of life than that of agriculture? If the science of agriculture and it is a science—had been given the same prominence in the courses of study in our State colleges and High Schools as has been given to teaching law, medicine and other professions, in our humble opinion there would be a different story to tell at the present time.—Hartford Republican.

The Bootleggers' Troubles.

It is always a sad affair to see anyone in trouble but for the past three years men have sold liquor and laughed at the law, and no one is surprised at the present overhauling by this term of Circuit Court. It is thought that several who visit Owenton court days and sell booze and a few people higher up in the town will yet be caught. The reason that men have not been caught before is that the demand of the citizenship of this town has not been strong enough. We hope that the boys will get out in time and shape for spring work in their way through all clever fellows and are liked by all. We believe that no one has a disposition to crush them, but all are anxious that they become law-abiding citizens living lives that they would have their children follow.—Owenton Democrat.

To Protect Trees from Rabbits.

We are located near a woods where rabbits are frequent visitors. They come and gnaw the bark on the trees, so vigorously that sometimes much damage is done. We tried putting poultry fence around the orchard, but they dug under it. We then tried wrapping cloth around the trees and this seemed to do no good. The animals would gnaw the cloth and in a short time would have it completely torn from the trees. The third method of protection administered to the trees was whitewash which completely destroyed the desire to gnaw. They disliked the taste of the whitewash and decided to let them alone. The next day we tried this solution to obtain the best possible results is to make a thick whitewash, allowing the lime to sink over night. To each bucket of whitewash add a few spoonfuls of Paris green and paint the trees with this solution. Stir frequently while applying. Try this and you will see the results. W. H. Give the Oats a Good Start.

It is a common practice in many parts of this state to seed oats broadcast this method should not be employed if the maximum yield is to be grown. A number of careful tests have been conducted at some of the state experiment stations to show the difference in the production of oats that has been drilled and broadcast. The tests show that drilling not only costs less than broadcasting in time and money saved, but gives a much better yield per acre.

At the Illinois Station tests were made in both methods of seeding oats. Equal amounts of seed on both drilled and broadcast plots resulted in yields uniformly in favor of the drilled plot. The general increase on the drilled plot was not less than 5 bushels per acre. The Kansas Station also conducted some interesting tests which show the advantage in using a drill in seeding the oats crop. For seven years they have seeded oats by the two methods and have found that the average yield on broadcast fields was 20 bushels while on the drilled fields it was 44 bushels, a gain of eight bushels per acre in favor of the drilled oats.

A prominent Illinois farmer says on this question:

"I sized up the situation as follows: A single disc drill will save one bushel of seed per acre. It will work when and where any tool will work. It will plant the grain in the soil at even depth. It will distribute the grain much better and even than can be done broadcast. The drill will disc the ground at the same time the grain is sown. I believe that a good drill will save for me one year on an 80-acre crop. Clover and timothy do much better sown with drilled oats than when sown with broadcast sowing. I believe the drill is the coming oats sower."

Drilling is to be preferred to sowing broadcast. It puts the seed in the ground where it should be. Sowing broadcast lets the seed fall on the surface on dry soil where it may dry out or be eaten by birds, and no matter how carefully one cultivates it, much of the grain never gets into the moist soil so essential for rapid growth.

A rain will pack it down but it is poor policy to depend on a timely rain for such a thing. It may not come and much of the seed may never sprout.

Drilling north and south lets the rays of the sun reach the young clover and timothy when it is seeded with oats, better than when the grain has been sown broadcast. This is important in producing plants that are stronger and more vigorous and does not only mean a larger yield per acre but a yield of better quality.

Disking ground one way is not enough preparation for seeding oats. It is sometimes all the preparation that is given, however, but it is not a profitable plan. If the land is disked twice and then gone over with a smoothing harrow, the better results will more than pay for all extra trouble spent in preparing the soil. When land is double disked all stalks or trash and the surface is well cultivated, if the soil is thus prepared and the seed then drilled the chances for a poor crop are reduced to a minimum.

Baseball Editor.

Recently the baseball editor of a metropolitan paper was sent to report the sermon of a new minister at the religious editor's office. This is the copy he sent in: "Quite a bunch was present last Sunday evening at the church opening to the presence of a new star and the box of boosters was anxious for a line of his work. Rev. ——— is certainly there with the goods and performed to the satisfaction of all present. Owing to the fact that this was his first appearance on the local grounds he was a little nervous the first inning. Encouraged by the coaches in the 'amen corner' he let himself loose and had the game well in hand from then on. His new Jerusalem slow ball is a peach and while he turned in on eternal punishment his speed was terrific. As this was his first workout it is too early to try to predict a future for him, but if he can keep up the game he has started with, it's him for the big league next season."

No Comparison.

The time was when the spring girl always had her eye on the fellow who had a good driving horse; but the fellow who has an automobile holds over the fellow with a horse so far now that there is no comparison. A girl could tell her fellow by the way he drove up to the door, or by the sound of his buggy, but now she simply listens for the "honk" or sniffs for the smell of gasoline. There is one handicap yet as to running an auto; it requires both hands. But this may be obviated later on. The tandem bicycle was not a howling success as a means of locomotion to the young people, and it was touted to the skies first, and there may be brighter days yet for old sorrel and top-buggy if the girls of today and tomorrow are anything like their mothers of yesterday.

Pikeville, March 6.—Mrs. Maude Taylor, 39 years old, today sentenced to the penitentiary for from two to 21 years for the killing of Cleveland Huffman. The case was one of the most noted in the history of modern Kentucky. Mrs. Taylor is one of the few women ever convicted for manslaughter in Kentucky.

PRESS COMMENT.

Chicago Tribune: It is one of the most impressive utterances from the executive in many years. Not only its exceptional gravity of tone—to which its brevity adds rather than detracts—but its studious care in phrase must impress the nation with the seriousness of the tolls issue in itself and in its implications. The President's message on toll exemption, if not needed, will mark an ominous turning point in our history.

New York Tribune: President Wilson has never appeared to better advantage than he did when urging his party in Congress to undo an act of national bad faith. It takes high intellectual and moral courage to confess error and to make pledges of reparation that his party in Congress will follow him is hardly open to doubt. It cannot persist in treaty breaking at the same time with the only successful leader it has had in a couple of generations.

Baltimore Sun: The forbearance with which the government is showing with regard to Mexico and the cordiality of our relations with other powers very probably are the result of a considerable extent to the spirit of toleration and good will that the administration is manifesting on this and other international subjects. Apart from any question of honor or obligation, Democratic members of Congress should consider whether they desire to commit themselves to the principle of subordination of the United States to American coastwise shipping from Panama Canal tolls at the possible sacrifice of international good will.

New York Times: But the matter is not in its essence merely a party matter, though it deeply involves the honor of the Democracy, which it is the duty of Mr. Wilson, as the authorized leader of the party, to preserve, or, in this instance, to restore. In this appeal he speaks for the American nation. He speaks as the last of a long line of Presidents, who, however they may have differed in party views and aims have steadfastly maintained a high standard of national faith. We do not see that Congress can possibly refuse an appeal so just, so wise, so plainly dictated by the highest interests of the nation, so assentual to the keeping of national faith.

Brooklyn Eagle: On the side of Mr. Underwood is what ought not to be. On the side of the President is what ought to be. What ought to be in the case of every great President has always been accomplished, sooner or later, first or last, in the history of this Administration on first demand every time. It is not Wilson's "luck." That is a gambling phrase. It is not Wilson's "prestige." That is a word indicative of sleight-of-hand and really not a respectable word. The righteousness of Wilson's position and international endeavors, his persistence, his patience, his power of view, review and of foresight, or preview, will be taken into account by history, and should be taken into account in the daily creation of history by those who refuse to believe that there will be either an abdication or a suspension of justice and righteousness between governments or among men.

New York Evening Post: President Wilson's message to Congress today is a miracle of condensed words. He says all that is necessary, and does it with a force and impact that must go deep into the mind of Congress and the country. To attempt to re-enforce the President's argument is happily needless. It speaks for itself better than any speech can speak for it. What the President has done is to make the whole question look large and national. Before, to many minds, it had had the appearance of a squabble. The whole matter has been lifted into a higher air. The President leads the country to a larger view. We are talking the completion of the Panama Canal. Let us, urges Mr. Wilson, free our rejoicing from every regret or stain. Best of all, Mr. Wilson has put every foot of blatant dogmatism under his feet and given us all such a vision of national honor and the true grandeur of the nation that we can all echo.

The Wheels of Justice. Princeton, March 7.—The "wheels of justice" certainly did move rapidly here in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Press O'Hara. The arrest, indictment and conviction, all occurring within eight hours, breaking all previous records for swiftness here. The defendant, who had always been regarded as a rather trustworthy negro, owing a small farm and several head of stock, was caught in the act of stealing corn from a storage barn on the farm of John H. Stevens, near this city. The grand jury being in session indicted him, and before the petit jury had entered a plea of guilty, he was sentenced to the penitentiary under the indeterminate law.

Pleads Guilty.

Lawrenceburg, March 6.—Edgar D. Barto, a schoolteacher and former candidate for the Legislature, pleaded guilty in the Anderson County Circuit Court here today of selling examination questions and received an immediate sentence of one to two years in the state prison. A petition is being circulated asking Gov. McCreary to pardon him. The charges against J. McWilliams, formerly a candidate for School Superintendent of Washington county, were dismissed.

The Strength of "Thornhill" Skeins and Axles Explained

Note at the bottom of this advertisement, the difference between the types of skeins.
One, the old way, gives a natural breaking point where iron stops and wood begins.
The other, the "Thornhill" way, shows the long sleeve malleable skein non-breakable.
The long sleeve of malleable iron extends underneath the axle strengthening it and distributing the strain. There is no weak part. This banishes, forever, the old time weakness of wagons.

This long sleeve malleable skein runs as lightly as a cast skein, is as strong as a steel skein and will outlast either.

A Defiance machine, infallibly accurate, fits each skein to its use insuring the right pitch and tuck.

A "Thornhill" equipped with these skeins has no equal anywhere at any price.

Learn the great improvements in wagon construction by coming in, and seeing the construction used on this wagon.

Why The Thornhill Longsleeve Malleable Skein and Axle does not Break

Natural Breaking Point of Old Style Skein

The legislature's breath is growing short rapidly.

It looks like a triangular war in Mexico will be in progress in the next few months.

The Bureau of Entomology and the Forest Service, working together for the control of forest insects, last year covered more than 168,000 acres in their operations.

An ear of corn which for twenty-eight years hung on the wall as an ornament in the home of Frank Stoner, in Belvidere, Ill., is to be tested, and if it is found that the kernels will germinate the seed will be planted, next year.

Navigation in the Ohio river was interfered with considerably during the latter days of February, but an ice block in the river is preferable to a devastating flood, consequently if a flood, or a freeze up of the river, has to come in February let it be the latter.

How many of the nation's burly Senators who are advocating war with Mexico are willing to exchange their Senatorial toga for an army uniform and go to the front if war should be declared? Not one. They would be found pleading exemption from service on account of age or because of official position.

The State Prison Commission has paroled 422 convicts, who will be released from the Frankfort Reformatory, at Frankfort, and the Penitentiary, at Eddyville, by the 13th of this month. Among those released is John Jackson who was sent up from this county for house-breaking, and who has served two and one-half years.

A movement has been started in North Dakota to get every farmer to donate a bushel of wheat to the state agricultural college for the purpose of securing funds to build a dormitory for the students. The proposed building is spoken of as the Bushel-of-Wheat Dormitory. Already thousands of bushels have been donated by the wheat growers of that state.

While prices of flour are low or high according as wheat is cheap or dear, changes in the price of flour do not always immediately follow changes in the price of wheat, nor are they as great on the average. Middlemen who handle wheat and its products, including retailers, are content with somewhat smaller profits when wheat is high than when it is low. This is indicated in a report on prices of hard winter wheat and flour, from farmer to consumer, just published as Bulletin No. 130 by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics.

It is amusing to read the criticisms of President Wilson by some of the leading Republican papers of the country because he desires Congress to pass a law regulating Panama Canal tolls to conform to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty in regard to these tolls as negotiated by President Taft's administration. When the treaty was being negotiated these papers never raised their voice against the provisions which President Wilson wants now observed by Congress. Why? Because they were more loyal to their party than they want to see loyalty to their treaty manifested by Mr. Wilson. The London Evening Star in an editorial, characterizes President Wilson's stand on Panama Canal tolls as one of the most noble acts of statesmanship in the history of nations. The message to the most splendid memorial that could be devised for the worthy celebration of the centenary of peace between the United States and Great Britain. It places President Wilson for all time in the high rank of great American Presidents whose names are an inspiration to democracy on both sides of the Atlantic.

Some Good Advice.

A tobacco grower writes a letter to the Georgetown News in which he makes a suggestion that is worth considering by the farmers who are engaged in the production of "the weed." He says he believes it would work to both the interest of the landlord and tenant to "keep the common fall end of the crop off the market entirely." If the tobacco he says which sells for less than four cents could be kept off the market by some plan worked out between the landlord and the tenant, it would be to the benefit and profit of both. It costs as much to strip and market this common stuff as it does the good tobacco and it proves about a clear loss to the tenant. As to a possible use of this poor quality of tobacco, the writer says it could be used for fertilizing the land, "instead of giving it to the manufacturers at a price less than the cost of stripping and handling." There is undoubtedly a large amount of poor stuff put on the market which serves no good purpose. The Scott county grower's suggestion probably will fall on deaf ears, but it merely bears out what has been said repeatedly—that too many tobacco growers go in for quantity rather than quality.—Ex.

HON. N. S. WALTON

One of Boone County's Most Distinguished Citizens Passes Away.

Honored In Life, Lamented In Death.

Hon. N. S. Walton, who has been in failing health for some time died in a Cincinnati hospital Wednesday morning. He was taken to the hospital only a few days, he having had a light stroke of apoplexy a few weeks ago.

Mr. Walton was born at Petersburg, June 8, 1811, and was reared on the farm. He served in the C. S. A. Army during the civil strife with Co. B, Jessie's Battalion. In politics he always took an active interest and served in the Legislature during '83 and '81, and '91 and '93, which was in the wake of the constitutional convention. He was a delegate from the Sixth Congressional District to the National Convention in 1896, and voted for William Jennings Bryan.

June 12, 1865, he was united in marriage with Miss Emma Rucker, two sons being born to them, Hubert and Courtney. Personally speaking, Mr. Walton was one of our best and most influential citizens and loyal Democrats—a gentleman in all that the term implies.

He is survived by his wife. Funeral arrangements had not been made when the Recorder went to press.

New York Herald: Never has the President's breadth of view, his comprehensive statesmanship, been more clearly revealed than in his terse, ringing admirable address to Congress. Sweeping aside all such senseless surpluses as "platform declarations" and "party faith," with a clarity that leaves nothing to becloud the simple logic of his argument, he shows where the plain duty of Congress lies. His reasons for holding that the exemption clause should be repealed are convincing as they are complete. No ground for controversy remains.

Thursday—Half day's sunshine Friday—Bright.
Saturday—Partly cloudy.

Controlling the Elements.

Orchard heaters, to protect the orchard and garden from the ravages of spring frosts, are practical. Last year an enormous loss was suffered by farmers from the inroads of late spring frosts. In some sections, however, this loss was prevented by the use of orchard heaters. One of the best examples of this was found in Delaware county, Ohio, where it is estimated that $40,000 was saved by a few growers in a certain section where the fruit trees were protected. These men got together, used orchard heaters and cooperated with the weather bureau in such a way that special warnings were sent them during the dangerous frost season. That saving was estimated from the fact that the growers in the same neighborhood who did not use heaters lost the larger part of their crop. Orchard heating is simply raising the temperature of the air in the orchard by burning some easily combustible material. Oil heaters are mostly used in Ohio. These heaters do not cost a great deal and can be used for several seasons. If alarm thermometers are used it will be necessary to light the heaters only for a short time each night and this practice for a very few nights may be the means of saving an entire crop of fruit. Other types of heaters, such as coal or wood, which may be used, serve the purpose just as well. The U. S. weather bureau will send special warnings to any farmer or group of farmers during the dangerous frost season.

Making a Soil Fit.

Recently a man bought and moved onto one of the poorest farms in Belmont county, Ohio. To the surprise of his neighbors he announced his intention of sowing some alfalfa. They ridiculed the idea and with good intentions insisted that it would be folly to risk time and money in such an experiment. However, as the newcomer was anxious to grow some alfalfa he decided to find out if the handicap of a poor, sour soil could not be overcome. He had been told that the soil lacked in organic matter so he hauled from a nearby lively stable fifteen loads of manure to the acre. He would have preferred other manure because of the many times and weed seeds commonly found in such stable manure, but being a practical man he took what was at hand. Experience and observation showed the soil to be better. Accordingly he gave it a heavy application of some form of burned lime. A liberal dressing of commercial fertilizer and inoculation of the soil with the proper bacteria helped still more to put the soil, which was naturally well drained, in good shape for the crop desired. A fine stand of alfalfa was the result of his preparation and the second season, three good crops of hay were cut and it gives promise of many more.

March may be properly called the "chicken month" as it is usually the season when more chickens are hatched out than any other. Some enterprising housekeepers already have "taken off" a few, while they have their hens and incubators on the job for more.

Renewing his subscription to the Recorder, James L. Lawell, of Lexington, writes: "I will be 55 years young June 11, and enjoy pretty good health. My wife was 55 Christmas day, and we were married 62 years ago the 22d day of last February. This is the fourth year I have taken the Recorder."

The maple tree that for many years furnished fine shade during summer at Kelly's corner, was removed last week, it having been a victim of the looter's knife. It made a hard struggle for existence but a two frequent application of steel proved fatal, and its decaying boughs became a menace to those who assemble on the corner at the store.

B. B. Hume shook the snow of Burlington from his feet last Saturday when he moved his furniture to Covington where he will make his future home. Mr. Hume's sojourn in Burlington was a very pleasant one, and his friends hope that the prosperity he enjoyed here will abide with him and his wife the remainder of their days.

If county clerk W. R. Rogers were to set the example it may be there would be an increase demand for marriage licenses in Boone county, just so long as he continues his past course in regard to matrimony he has no right to sit back in his office and knock because his time on the issuing of marriage licenses is not larger.

The RECORDER was reminded last week that Col. William Baterson is still in the land of the living by receiving from him at St. Petersburg, Florida, a post-office order for renewal of subscription to the Recorder, and his son Add have been residents of that southern city for some time but have not forgotten their Kentucky friends among whom they spent so many years.

Dr. Yelton took Miss Cora Aylor to the home of her sister, Mrs. James Allen, in Walton, one day last week. It will be remembered that Miss Aylor was nursing Miss Moore, who died of pneumonia several weeks ago, when she contracted the disease and was taken to the home of W. E. Walton, near Pt. Pleasant, where she was dangerously ill for many days, but being able to be moved until last week.

J. Emmet Riddell and John Hogan, the latter of Hebron neighborhood, were in Burlington one day the past week closing a deal whereby Mr. Riddell became the owner of the 50 odd acres of land on the Bullittsville and Dry creek pike, and which Mr. Hogan purchased of John J. Rucker some time since. Mr. Riddell has been in the grocery business in Covington the Colonel time but growing tired of that and having a good opportunity to dispose of it he decided to return to the farm.

Ten days or two weeks of nice weather would be very pleasing to the people of this county, but long time since they have been able to do anything towards advancing their work. They have taken the prolonged bad weather very patiently and when they are permitted to begin their spring work they will make things hum, consequently if you have any business with them you would better transact it now, as a farmer is in no mood to talk to strangers when he has his teams in the harness and is using the dirt for the approaching crop.

The road question is paramount with the people of this county, and the pike system ought to be pretty well understood by them, they having several years in which to observe the results from them in the immediate neighboring counties. Grant county was the pioneer free turnpike district in this congressional district, a county with whom the people of Boone are intimately associated in many ways, and her experience with free pikes ought to point Boone the way in which to avoid many difficulties in putting in free roads.

John W. Berkshire.

In Memory of our father, John W. Berkshire, born August 12th 1812 and died March 24, 1914. As we lovingly hands have borne our loving father to his last sleep.

The grave opens to receive him, he sinks into its bosom. He lies with a blanket woven of God's flowers and grass and all in peace.

The very winds seem gentle here, and the songs of birds seem sweeter because they sing to him.

We turn our faces to the world, to take our places—among men, and fight the same battles he has so well fought.

The faithful wives and husbands, and those beautiful jewels of life, your children, be better men and women—more holier—more Godlike. Believe in God and His laws. My hands are so tired but I lift them once more in prayer for you that you may be all that is possible for you to be. God have thee in His prayer.

Goodnight. The Children.

Tributes of Respect.

In respect to the death of our brother, State Senator John W. Berkshire, Morning Star Lodge No. 16 I. O. F. adopts the following resolutions:

Whereas, It has pleased the Supreme Ruler to take from our association our esteemed brother and true friend, therefore be it resolved by Morning Star Lodge, that in every walk of life Senator Berkshire met the full measure of his friends' fondest hopes. He was a Christian of the purest type, and being possessed of a most lovable, genial disposition, coupled with all the highest principles of a well bred gentleman his life became a blessing to mankind, and the sunshine of his benign influence was felt wherever he came, and the example of his useful life remains for the records of our organization, a copy sent to the family and a copy to the Boone County Recorder for publication.

Resolved, That these resolutions be read upon the records of our organization, a copy sent to the family and a copy to the Boone County Recorder for publication.

WHY DON'T YOU?

A farmer who was carrying an express package from a city mail order house, was accosted by a local merchant: "Why didn't you buy that bill of goods from me? I could have saved you the express and besides you would have been patronizing a home store, which helps pay the taxes and build up this locality." With characteristic frankness the farmer asked: "Why don't you patronize your home paper and advertise? I read it and didn't know you had the goods I have here, nor do I ever see your name in the paper inviting me to come to your store." The Pomotrope.

There is no doubt but what several of our farmers in this county who have been watching the results obtained from silos this winter will build silos in time for filling next fall. There is no question but what a silo is a saver of both food and labor.

BREEDING STOCK FOR DAIRY

Cow Must Have Large Middle and Strong Constitution to insure the Best Results.

Prof. W. J. Kennedy of the Iowa station recommends the following in reference to the selection of breeding stock for the dairy:

In selecting dairy cattle the real test must be the scales and the Babcock tester. The cow is a machine to convert food into milk, thus she must have a large middle and a strong constitution to insure the best results. She must also have a large udder, large milk veins, large crooked milk veins and good sized teats. Her head should be clean and unobscured in appearance, with the eyes standing out prominently.

The neck should be rather long and lean in appearance. The shoulders pointed, and the backbone rather prominent. The skin should be loose and soft to the touch. In selecting herd bulls, either mature animals which have already demonstrated their worth as sires, or younger animals from high testing dams, and sires only should be used. The best and surest results will always follow the use of mature sires which have sired heifers with good results.

A good dairy bull should be kept as long as he is a sure sire. Real good sires are so rare that when we do find one, he should be only of old age. All the breeders of dairy cattle should secure yearly tests on each and every cow in the herd. Shorter tests do not really mean very much. It is the cow that stays by her job that is really valuable.

PAIL FOR MILK IS SANITARY

Most Common Fault of Covered Receptacles Is Their Excessive Height—Avoid Dirt.

(BY HERBERT A. HOPPER.) The most common failing of the covered milk pails is excessive height. For short-legged or heavy-shouldered cows the pails should not be more than 12 inches high over all.

An elliptical opening is preferable to a round one covering the same number of square inches, since it is easier to milk into it. While a smaller opening may be used, one 5 1/2 inches and of the shape seen in the Trueman, Storrs or Loy pails, will be found practically as convenient as the ordinary open pail.

Pails which have no detachable parts to become foul, and in which the opening permits of easy cleaning, and have their seams well flushed with solder so there are no rough edges, answer all practical sanitary requirements.

Recognizing the fact that the time of milking is the critical period in the life of milk and cream and that the covered pail and cleanly habits are important to consider as influencing the keeping properties of milk, it is always desirable to remove the milk from the stable to the milk room as soon as practical and convenient. This contributes to its length of life. Open cans or pails of milk should never be allowed to stand unprotected. Covered cans should receive the milk from the milkers and be transported to the milk room at frequent intervals. Circumstances must determine the best methods to follow. Any system that succeeds in getting the milk promptly from the cow to the milk room without contamination is good provided it is accomplished with a minimum amount of labor.

Most Profitable Cow.

Someone has said that the cow is profitable when she makes 200 pounds of butter in a year. If this is the case imagine how much could be made from a 350 or 400-pound cow, and these are by no means impossible.

Calf Pasture Is Important.

One of the most important lots on the farm is the calf pasture. The little fellows should have good care and feed in the barn and they ought to have a pasture all by themselves during the summer.

Water Is Important.

Cows will fall off in milk if water is not within easy reach. When in full flow of milk they require, it is claimed, 50 per cent. more water than when dry.

WONDROUS CHARM IN WOODS

Traveler Writes of Peculiar Character of Romance Noted in Ireland's "Forests."

Returning to these woods, I am struck once more by the peculiar character of their romance, says a writer in Scribner's Magazine. It is so different from that of a German forest, where the imagination is lured and lost in the depth of thickets and baffled by the endless lines of serrated trunks, brooded over by the canopy of dark, high-blued fir boughs, interwoven solid.

The poetry of these Irish woods—and not merely from the resemblance they certainly bear to the Pinetops of Italy—is southern, or perhaps Celtic passed through southern imagination, alluring, fascinating, but not quite to be taken seriously.

Enchantment without end and endless adventures: in and out, in their forest green, lured among the big twisted many bushes under the oaks, and the high grasses and meadow-sweet, and into their open spaces, marshy and flowered with pale lilac seabius, where the sunset sky is blue, and there is the gibbet for wicked hawks, where not merely wild ducks, but a great heron, or heron; where at dusk it becomes rather frightening among the immense pale oak trunks.

A wayward in-and-out romance, as in the pages of a book, that one indulges in because one chooses (not under the terrifying necessity of the German and Alpine forests), in these Irish woods and alongside this brown, clear river, which under the great oak boughs has tortoise-shell flickers and transparencies. On it and into the very deepest forest heart, I imagine the tales, stained by enchantment, like those that carried Sir Guyon or Rinaldo, passing up or down like the broken off narratives of the poets.

LIKE MOTHER USED TO MAKE

Young Wife Scored Heavily—When Hubby Came Forward With the Stereotyped Comment.

There was a worried look on the grocer's face as he rushed helter-skelter down the street and ran up the steps of Acacia Villa.

"I'm sorry to say there's been a slight mistake, Mrs. Grumble," he panted. "You ordered two pounds of oatmeal yesterday, and by mistake my apprentice put up some sawdust that our grapes came packed in!"

"Oh!" replied the lady. "Then I reckon my 'usban' must 'ave got through about a pound o' the wood for breakfast!"

"You don't mean to say that he ate it?" gasped the man in the apron.

"Course 'e did," was the reply.

The lady leaned back on the doorpost and for three minutes indulged in a laugh that brought all her neighbors to the scene.

"Wal, that's right-down funny," she observed with a laugh.

"Funny?" cried the grocer.

"Yus, funny! 'Ere we've been married 13 year come last of April, and Charles 'as never paid me a compliment till this mornin' at breakfast, when blist if 'e didn't pass 'is plate for another go o' that sawdust, an' 'told me it remind 'im o' the porridge 'is mother used to make.'—TIT-BITS.

Dawn of the New Day.

There is nothing more wonderful than the noiseless way a new day is slipped into place with each rising sun, a new day with its attendant of special duties and fresh outlooks, different from all yesterdays, carrying with it unexpected opportunities, fulfillments or losses. Its hours, whether flying or dragging, are unmarked by ticking of clocks; there is nothing in its silence to give a hint of what the next hour holds, or to remind one of the passage of time, or the brevity of life. A day is a slow, leisurely procession of events that, one by one, salute our consciousness as they pass. No one sees the figures as they greet another. Each one is surrounded by a silent world of his own, full of mystery and wonder, created out of the invisible substance of yesterdays. From "A Kingdom of Two," by Helen R. Albee.

Emigration From Scotland.

The tide of emigration continues unabated. Thousands every week continue to leave London, Liverpool and Glasgow for Canada and Australia. There is every indication that the year 1913 will beat every record in the recent history of emigration, and that before the end of the year 300,000 will have left these shores. And what is even more ominous than the quantity of the emigration is its quality. It is the young men, the enterprising and the energetic that are leaving. It is, in the old men, the women and children that are left behind. Some of the most beautiful districts of Scotland are being depleted. Whole cities, like the ancient town of Jedburgh, are left desolate, and houses are crumbling even in the main streets.—London Eveningman.

"The Felki."

Samuel D. Felker, the present governor of New Hampshire, was one of the best known men in Dartmouth college in steady succession. While not so many as four were there together at any one time, there was a good representation of the family from the arrival of the first one until the graduation of the last. And the boys roomed together at the top of Dartmouth hall, getting their own share as a measure of self-help. They were known as the Felki. The subsequent careers of the boys have been in keeping with this sturdy endeavor of their college days.

DAIRY

LITTLE TROUBLES OF UDDER

Immense Amount of Worry, Work and Loss Can Be Saved If Ailing Cow Is Isolated.

(By DR. A. S. ALEXANDER, Wisconsin Agricultural College.)

Dairymen would save themselves an immense amount of worry, work and loss if they instantly isolated a cow when anything is seen to be wrong with her udder. Infection from germs is present in nearly all cases of mammitis (garget) of the udder. The infection is often carried from the diseased cow to other cows by the milker's hands, or the infection spreads from stall floors and gutters contaminated by milk, or pus from a milked udder. The contents of a diseased udder should never be milked out onto the stall floor. The affected cow should be milked last, or by some one who does not milk the other cows. All milkers should be careful to wash their hands frequently and to keep their finger nails short and clean.

Stall floors should be kept clean, disinfected and adequately covered with fresh, clean bedding material. If cement stall floors are used, the rear third of each should be boarded over, else chronic congestion and garget may result from scuffing or bruising of the udder.

"Beware of the nonsterilized milking tube. It carries infective matter and leads to loss of the quarter or the whole udder. The milking tube is a most dangerous instrument unless cleaned by boiling for twenty minutes before use.

Lastly, remember that immediate, intelligent, persistent treatment must be given to the diseased udder; that the most good is accomplished in the first twenty-four hours of treatment; that delayed treatment usually proves futile, and that the cow should not be stabled or pastured with other cows before her udder has become perfectly sound.

MANNER OF DRYING UP COW

Better for Progeny and for Animal Herself to Have Resting Period of Few Weeks.

Some cows are such persistent milkers that it is next to impossible to dry them up even for a short time, says the Farmers' Digest. When a cow persists in milking from one lactation period to another, it is better to milk her than to take any chances on forcing her dry. There is much danger in injuring the cow's udder if she is forced dry and we have found it the safer plan to milk the animal from one lactation period to the next. Nevertheless, it is better for the progeny and for the animal herself to have a resting period of six to eight weeks.

A careful observer will usually find that from eight to ten weeks before calving the cow will have a strong tendency to stop giving milk. If the milker takes advantage of this time, there is usually very little trouble in getting an animal dry but if she passes by this period, a persistent milker is difficult to dry up.

than the fork is wide. In one edge of the board bore as many holes as there are tines to the fork, running them in about three inches. One edge of the board is beveled. After the holes are bored and the scraper will be found handy in gathering up the finest particles.

Result of Good Care.

The dairy cow had a good start and foundation in the calf, and it makes no difference if she is good or bad, these qualities are due to some extent to the care she receives during her first year or so.

If you have a calf from a good cow and expect to build a good dairy cow from her you can almost surpass your expectations and astonish your neighbors by giving the calf a little extra care and attention before she has her first calf. The prospects of a good dairy cow can also be ruined in the calf.

Dairy Business Spreading.

The dairy business is reaching out into new territory every year. It knows no boundary and is just as well adapted to the north as the south. It is going farther south each season and also farther up into Canada.

Co-Re-a-Lia Sweets FOR THE DAIRY.

Is a Real Feed. No other feed can compete with it.

Read this Prominent Dairyman's Opinion:

The Early & Daniel Co., Covington, Ky. March 7th, 1914. Gentlemen:—I am milking 40 cows and have tried out a great many different feeds. I have been using your Co-re-a-Lia Sweets for several months, and will say since feeding same, my cows produce an average of two quarts, per head more milk, than on any other feed I have ever used. This is a gain of about 20 gallons of milk per day, from my herd and am well pleased with your feed. Yours truly, Pointers on Feeding Hogs.

Regular feeding promotes ideal health and insures the maximum gain in fat-production.

Few feeders seem to realize how many pounds of fat will be lost in a herd from the effects of a good scare caused by a dog, or by anything else.

Scattering ashes, with a goodly sprinkle of salt, among them, where the hogs feed, will do much toward warding off disease, while adding to the cleanliness and sanitation of surroundings.

A good feed-feder, either of lumber or concrete, is another important factor in maintaining cleanliness, as well as saving feed when the ground is muddy or covered with snow during the feeding period.

Some experiments show that hogs make the most rapid gains when finished on corn alone, with clear water as a drink, but it has been the writer's experience that even the hogs being finished for market, require and greatly relish a little oil-meal or other rich milk in conjunction with the corn ration.

However, the importance of furnishing the fattening hogs with plenty of pure, fresh water, especially during the finishing period, should not be overlooked, as the animals not only require an abundance of water to further digestion and assimilation, but the promotion of fat-production among the various tissues, makes it imperative that plenty of water be furnished to keep down heat and possible constipation.

Another point often is neglected in handling hogs intended for the market. The animals are allowed to sleep in places that expose their bodies to the effect of the cold. With their accumulating load of fat on their frames, the chill air does not detract from the comfort of the hogs, but the exposure to the cold is sure to cause a shrinkage of body tissue and a loss of fat. Clean, warm, dry quarters should be furnished, and then the animals should be forced to sleep there.

It requires a most skillful feeder to feed hogs just right about the time for marketing them. If the animals are fed too heavily, they get "off feed," and will not consume sufficient to insure the most successful gain; while, if they are underfed, practically the same condition results, as the fatteners begin to leave a little corn after feed-time, cut down on the amount of feed being given, till their appetites again become normal; if they begin to show signs of wanting more feed, increase the amount already given very gradually, to prevent any complications resulting from the sudden change.

It will pay the swine-feeder well to take more pains than most of us do in offering a more uniform bunch of hogs for sale, as the buyer will figure on a lower margin of profit where he can consider the purchase of a herd that he knows exactly what price they will command when offered for sale in the stock yards, which he could not do with a herd where the animals were of various sizes.

GREAT HALL IN WHICH CONFERENCE FOR FARMERS AND BUSINESS MEN WILL BE HELD

It is indeed very fortunate that the great Armory in Louisville happens to have a number of rooms which can be used for small sectional meetings during the Conference of Farmers and Business Men, and that it is quite close to the Auditoriums of the Seelbach and Henry Watterson Hotels. There will be no lack of space in the Armory itself or in its large balconies, for all the demonstration work that will be used. In fact, so many huge events have been handled in the Armory that there is no danger of crowding at any point. It is fortunate that our paper has been able to secure a first-class picture of the Armory during the great Automobile Show, which was held in Louisville from February 11-14. We believe this picture will give our readers a very much better idea of the greatness of the Conference than anything that we could possibly put into a news story. If our readers are interested in any of the wonderful discussions that will take place during the Conference April 7, 8, 9, 10, or wish to know anything about co-operative dairying, co-operative poultry or fruit-marketing, or the handling of farm produce through the parcel post, it would be a splendid investment of time and money to make the trip to Louisville and talk the matter over with experts.

The Conference in Louisville April 7, 8, 9, 10, is of such importance that extremely low railroad rates have been made. You can make the trip from your home town to Louisville at this time for one fare plus 25 cents.

MAGGIE BARRETT WEAVING "KIVER" FOR THE WHITE HOUSE BRIDE'S BED

In looking over the program for the Woman's Department in the Country Life Conference, Louisville, April 7-10 next, it is plain to be seen that many interesting talks and demonstrations are to be expected. The old fireside household industries will be under the direction of Mrs. Ernberg, of Berea College, Berea, Ky. In the mountain homes these old industries have not been completely lost. Rag carpets, quilting, weaving and basket-making are still part of the school work. Maggie Barrett, who lives on Bald Knob and walks four miles over a rough country road to and from Berea, wove "the kiver" for the White House bride's bed last autumn. All good housewives of the Southland over should come to this great meeting and give what they have to give and receive what they feel they need. President Joe Cook, of the State Normal College, at Hattiesburg, Miss., will have the general direction of the demonstration work in the Household Equipment Department in the enormous Armory. Household management, meals and their serving, house cleaning and the beautifying of the home will be developed under the leadership of Miss Mary E. Frayser, Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C. All of the demonstrations in cooking will be done by the teachers of Domestic Science in the State University and the State Normal Schools of Kentucky.

A SOUTHERN LEADER

Hon. T. F. Peck, of Tennessee.

At this Conference in Louisville most of the Commissioners of Agriculture from the Southern States will be present, either to speak or to take part in the general discussions that are sure to follow the papers that are given. Among the earliest to signify his intention of being on hand early and staying late is the progressive Commissioner of Tennessee, the Hon. T. F. Peck.

Would a Delegation Pay?

Each year the papers are full of overflowing with reports of meetings of merchants, bankers, manufacturers, railroad officials, labor unions and many fraternal orders. Some of these are enormous affairs, bringing thousands together that are interested in the same thing. Would it not be a splendid idea if Kentucky to-day should turn out her thousands of farmers and their friends for the meeting at Louisville.

Certainly there never was a time riper for a careful and thorough discussion of the needs of the country than the present. It will be a time when the farmers can "get together" to discuss their own problems. Many of the speakers will be men who come from between the plow handles and have worked their problems out in an everyday way, a way which any farmer could probably utilize.

This meeting will be in reality a liberal education. Not an education gleaned from books by the midnight oil, but an education that comes from contact with men who have thought big things and then lived to see those same big things become a part of the life about them.

If you can not come yourself, make it your business to see that your county sends at least a strong delegation to Louisville, April 7-9-10, to the Conference of Farmers and Business Men.

The railroad people of the South have been quick to see the tremendous advantage of quickening interest in rural life through the Conference of Farmers and Business Men in Louisville, April 7-9-10, and have allowed a very low rate, one fare plus 25 cents for the round trip.

Hotel rates are never increased on account of convention crowds in Louisville. Besides the numerous hotels, there are many restaurants and innumerable splendid boarding houses.

FRUIT IN THE SOUTH

All over the South the papers are having much to say about the awakening of the people to the value of fruit that has fine flavor. Northwest fruit has been beautiful to look at on the fruit stands in the big cities, but a very small proportion of it has anything in the shape of that touched by the Southern sun. Apples from Georgia lately took a number of first and second prizes in the Great New York exhibit in New York State, and Kentucky apples shipped to the North-west also took a great many prizes.

As this is true it is especially fitting and opportune that the Conference at Louisville, April 7-9-10, is to have Mr. W. M. McDonald, manager of the Excelsior Fruit Growers' Association of Minnesota, to give a talk and make some demonstrations. Mr. McDonald was originally an expert bookkeeper in Minneapolis, but finding that his health was breaking under close office work, he decided to go to the country. He at once took hold of the Excelsior Fruit Growers' Association and in five years pushed the business from $5,000 annually to $200,000. This man will organize a typical fruit growers' association among the horticulturists at the meeting, and show them methods of shipping, packing, advertising and the locating of markets.

When asked about the prices which prevailed when he took hold of the organization, and those prevailing last year, he said, "When the Association was launched, 75 cents per case of 24 pint baskets of red raspberries prevailed. Last year our red raspberries cases of the same size averaged $2.05. Of course, to get such prices one must have a perfect pack and first-class fruit. Every fruit grower in our Association has his number and the dealer orders through the number and upon the reputation of the Association for fair dealing."

THE PROGRAM

During the Conference of Farmers and Business Men at Louisville, April 7-9-10, there will be discussions and demonstrations of the following:

Secretary of Farmers' Conference, Clarence Poe, Raleigh, N. C. Secretary of the Business Men's Conference, Harry Hodgson, Athens, Ga.

Secretary of the Conference of Country Preachers, W. H. Mills, Clemson College, S. C.

He was a resident of Louisville and the remains were taken there for burial. He was about 38 years old and was well liked by all who knew him. Those who have subscribed money for the construction of pipes in the proposed water works have been refused assistance from the county because the county's money has all been appropriated to other roads, are demanding to know what the final court had to appropriate all of the money to a few simply because they asked for it first. They think the money should be divided among all applicants so that each road which has the required amount subscribed may to a portion of the necessary amount to construct. This would probably be a better plan than to give it all to a few, but a still better plan would be for the county to borrow the necessary amount to meet each and every applicant dollar for dollar as soon as they are ready to use it. If the people are willing to put up half of the money they should certainly be encouraged in their efforts.

HOW PURE BREEDS PAY

Where the Profit in Handling Pedigreed Hogs Comes In.
The fact of the matter is that many of us are afraid of the pure breeds of hogs, says E. W. Gage in the Farm and Fireside. Here is the way we are apt to look at the matter. The packers will pay just as much for one hog as another, provided he has the weight.
The fact is, however, that there is better money, all things considered, in the pure breed of hogs if bred, as most are, for vigor, vitality and prolificacy.
Within a year the University of Nevada priced a pure bred sow safe in pig to a would be buyer for $150. The price seemed big for a yearling, but the question of the state farmers, and the sale was not made. The litter of pigs the sow was carrying at the time she was priced was later sold at under six months of age for an aggregate of $215.
An office man, formerly living in the city, who went into the country to get his health, and having a great desire to go into pure bred stock in all lines, walked into the office of one of the state colleges of agriculture and wanted to buy a pure bred pig for his five acre ranch. He was supplied with a young sow for $100. His neighbors were all well to do. He had a half acre of the town for the coming weeks. The sow's first litter brought this man $110, while the second litter sold at about $100.

OLDEST BUILDING IN CINCINNATI

Three Stories High, a Marvel in Its Day. Was First Skyscraper.
The next time you are in Cincinnati and have a half hour which you have no particular business to attend to, look up the relics of which this observer writes in the Cincinnati Post:
"Of course, you know all about Cincinnati. Live here, and you know life and can get around blindfolded. But, do you know where 'Thoms' Folly' stands? And did you ever see the sun dial on Fifth and Main streets? And please tell us the reason for the little iron market booth on the Esplanade?
"Well, 'Thoms' Folly' is a building and stands at the northeast corner of Fifth and Main streets, and has been in the same spot since 1829.
"The conservative citizens of Cincinnati of the 1829 period called the building 'Thoms' Folly' because it was three stories high, and they said it was absurd and contrary to precedent to put up three stories of brick and expect it to stand up.
"But there it still stands, with one story added, while every one of its one story and two story neighbors has passed away. The building was donated by Robt. Thoms son of William Thoms, the courageous skyscraper builder, who maintained and proved that a three story building could stand up. 'Thoms' Folly' is perhaps the oldest building in Cincinnati. Just to see how Cincinnati looked in those days, look at the Fourth and Vine street corner, where the Union Central skyscraper now stands.
"It is surprising that in all these years you've missed the sun dial on Fifth and Main streets, for it, too, has been there since 1829. It is built in the corner of 'Thoms' Folly', and across its face are carved the words 'Wm. Thoms 1829'.
"The sun has marked its course on this dial more than 31,000 times since 1829. Nothing is left of the Cincinnati that clustered around Fifth and Main streets when the dial 'Thoms' Folly' that nobody thought would stand.

"RANK, ROTTEN ROBBERY"

Justus Goebel Says That is What a Clique of Corporation Corruptionists Are Trying to Again Perpetrate Upon the People of Kentucky.

Upholds the Work of the State Board of Valuation and Assessment and Combs Attorney General Garnett's Suggestion That There Be Compromise With Railroads.

Tells of an Attempt to Bribe an Honest and Influential Kentuckian for $60,000 to Procure a Reduction in the C. & O. Railroad's 1912 Franchise Valuation to $16,000,000.

A STRONG, FORCEFUL LETTER IN BEHALF OF THE PEOPLE'S RIGHTS

The burning question of the hour in Kentucky is—shall the provisions of our constitution and the laws pertaining to corporation taxation written by William Goebel more than twenty years ago for the protection and benefit of the whole people ever be executed as he intended that they should be or shall they continue to be mocked at and the State and people be further robbed through shameful compromise now being sought by corporations that see the handwriting of defeat prefigured by recent developments in the L. & N. case now pending in the Federal Court at Lexington.

Covington, Ky., Mar. 12, 1914.
To Governor James B. McCreary and the People of Kentucky:

RANK, ROTTEN ROBBERY is what a combination of men are attempting to perpetrate upon an unsuspecting public.

Every taxpayer in the Commonwealth should arouse himself and keep his eyes on Frankfort.

Every citizen should watch and see who of their duly elected servants favors and fathers a shameless, dishonorable compromise of the franchise assessments of 1912 now being contested in the courts by the five largest railroad corporations in the State.

The Commonwealth, the Counties, Cities, every school district in the State; every man, woman and child for many years past has suffered the rank, rotten robbery of inadequate assessments of railroad properties, procured by corrupt and corrupting emissaries of such corporations and their secret allies at Frankfort. Such end has been accomplished by perjury, calumny, intimidation and what not? "What not" includes a multitude of things that, if generally known, would raise the ire and resentment of every honest citizen and taxpayer in Kentucky.

$10,000,000 Robbery.
In my open letter of October 31, 1912, addressed to Governor McCreary and all citizens of the Commonwealth, I made the statement that I repeat it here as absolutely correct and susceptible of proof—in the last twelve years the State, Counties and Cities have been robbed and the wealth of the Commonwealth has been reduced by more than $10,000,000 in taxes.

Those eager to compromise away the "people's rights" do not care to advance any argument predicated on actual fact of value of properties owned by a single corporation—but their entire effort to accomplish their unholy purpose consists only of the chicanery and artifice of the paid lobbyist and corruptionist.

Though I have tried hard, I must confess that I have been unable to bring myself to understand the position, or his motives therefor, assumed by Kentucky's chief law officer, Attorney General James Garnett, with reference to the matter of compromising with the railroads the values fixed by the State Board of Valuation and Assessment in its 1912 assessments.

Garnett's Letter.
Under date of October 18, 1913, from his office at Frankfort, Attorney General Garnett addressed a circular letter to the County Attorneys of the State in words and figures following:

"OFFICE OF ATTORNEY GENERAL,
James Garnett, Attorney General,
Frankfort, Ky., October 18, 1913.

"Dear Sir:
"As County Attorney you have an interest in the litigation pending in the United States District Court relative to the franchise assessment of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad for 1912, and for this reason I am submitting to you herewith the proposition which has been made to compromise this litigation.

"For the year 1911 the Board of Valuation and Assessment fixed the value of the C. & O. Railroad's franchise in Kentucky at $16,000,000 in round numbers. For the year 1912 the Board of Valuation and Assessment fixed the value of the C. & O. Railroad's franchise in Kentucky at $16,700,000. On the first of October, 1912, this railroad paid to the State the taxes on the same amount as they paid for the year 1911, and instituted suit in the United States District Court seeking an injunction against the collection of taxes on the remainder of the franchise value.

"As you will remember, this case was argued before Judge Cochran on the motion for an injunction pendente lite about the 23d of October, 1912, after which he took the motion under advisement, and at the September term, 1913, of his court, he handed down an opinion granting the temporary injunction and holding that the assessment was void because the Board failed to give the company proper notice of the tentative assessment; because the plan followed by the Board in arriving at the tentative assessment was erroneous; and because of discrimination in fixing the value of the franchise at its fair cash value, when the Board had fixed the value of the franchise at only eighty per cent of the fair cash value. At the time Judge Cochran delivered his opinion, he stated that he would not grant the temporary injunction until the Board had paid to the State, counties and taxing districts more money, but that he was not prepared to say the exact amount on which they should be paid before he would grant the injunction.

"Since Judge Cochran handed down this opinion the C. & O. Railroad has proposed to the Board of Valuation and Assessment that it will settle this litigation by agreeing upon a franchise valuation of $11,430,000, which is an increase over the 1911 valuation of $8,725,730, and will produce in taxes to the State the sum of $2,648,852, and to the counties and taxing districts through which the road runs their proportional part, according to the tax rate in the respective counties, towns and taxing districts.

"If we can not reach an agreement and settle this suit, the case must be prepared and tried on its merits before Judge Cochran, and it will probably go to the Circuit Court of Appeals and to the Supreme Court of the United States, in which event we will not have the matter finally determined for several years. Should the Board accept the proposition made by the railroad, it will probably continue this valuation through the next three years.

"I shall appreciate very much receiving a letter from you giving me your advice as to whether you think it best for the interest of all parties concerned to accept the proposition made, or to continue litigation with the hope of securing more money.

"Awaiting your reply, and thanking you in advance for your advice, I am,
Yours truly,
James Garnett,
"Attorney General."

Cochran's Opinion.
On October 18, 1913, the day before the above quoted letter of General Garnett with reference to the C. & O. Railroad proposition of compromise was sent out from Frankfort, Judge Cochran handed down an opinion in the case of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, to which General Garnett makes no reference in his letter, the reasoning in which applies to the equal force to the C. & O. and all the other railroad cases, and in which Judge Cochran uses these words:

"... On the basis, then, of the correctness of the plaintiff's claim, to which I have alluded, questions arise as to the value of the part of the plaintiff's capital stock in this State as at least the sum which the Board found it to be, to wit, $7,950,451. As to whether such a value can be worked out by pursuing the method prescribed by the statute is another question, and it is essential that it can be in order to maintain the validity of the assessment. The value of valuation as much as that. I am quite confident it can if the necessary pains be taken. As to this matter, I do not deem it necessary for me to say more than this. As I have said, the determination of what is fair and equitable assessment is a matter for the Board, and having indicated my views of the method prescribed by the statute, I should leave it to do the work unhampered by any ideas I may have."

The letter of General Garnett taken as a whole is nothing more nor less than an advocacy of the C. & O. Railroad's proposition and a request that he, the chief law officer of the State, be advised by the County Attorneys of the State as to whether they think it best for all concerned to accept the proposition made, after warning the County Attorneys that "should the Board accept the proposition made by the railroad it will probably continue this valuation through the next three years."

If the advice from the County Attorneys with reference to the C. & O. Railroad proposition is, as General Garnett's letter plainly shows he desires it to be, why will not and why should not the same rule be adopted for compromise with the other four roads now litigating these matters with the state of Kentucky?

Be not deceived! The precedent that the railroads and their friends are trying to accomplish by having the C. & O. Railroad's proposition of compromise advised and accepted is not for the benefit of that corporation alone, but must, according even to that standard of honor failed to exist among thieves, in its fair analysis apply to and benefit all litigating railroad corporations alike. When you consider the enormity of it all, what must be your feelings?

Favors Railroads.
Leaving for the moment the matter of the value for 1912 as fixed by the Board, and which value, according to Judge Cochran, "is for the determination of the Board" merely to be arrived at "by pursuing the method prescribed by the statute," I ask the people of Kentucky, why should they be so willing to see and tolerate a man who has their rights as to the revenue they ought under the law to have paid into their treasury by the railroads, and who has been compromised and thrown away for 1912, 1913 and 1914, and who more years ago is suspected by General Garnett in his above quoted letter?

Total Compromise.
It is, as Judge Cochran said, on October 17, 1913, with reference to the L. & N. assessment, "... there can be no question that the value of the State's interest in the franchise of this State was at least the sum which the Board found it to be, to wit, $7,950,451; and if the determination of what is fair and equitable assessment is a matter for the Board, and can be worked out by the Board, why pursuing the method prescribed by the statute," Judge Cochran is "quite confident it can if the necessary pains is taken"—why should the 1912 or any year's assessments of any of the railroads be compromised for less and according to the Garnett idea, to the pleasure and benefit of the railroads and the hurt of the people, especially since Judge Cochran has said, "I think I should leave it (the Board) to do the work unhampered by any ideas I may have."

In the name of common sense and common honesty I ask, why should the chief law officer of the State turn himself into an advocate for the railroads with the County Attorneys of the State in an effort to have them assist him in a scheme to bring about so foul and shameless a compromise?

"$60,000 in it."
I have information, which I do not doubt, that in 1912, at Frankfort, in form of words or substance, a man said to one yet alive and held in high esteem by the people of Kentucky, as has been evidenced by their having twice elected him to important State offices, "I do not want you to think I am trying to bribe you and would not offend you for any consideration, but I am interested in you and in the matter of the assessments by the State Board of Valuation and Assessment of the railroad properties in this State. If you got for the C. & O. Railroad a total valuation of its properties in this State for taxation on a basis of $16,000,000, and for the other roads on a proportionate valuation, there will be $60,000 in it for you."

The man to whom the above statement was made was an honest man; he spurned the offer and declined to have anything to do with any such effort to help the railroads and to hurt the people.

Assessments Correct.
The 1912 assessments, now being contested in the Courts by the five great Railroad corporations, and upon which I worked for months with the railroads' own respective sworn annual reports before me, together with the signed and sworn statement made in 1905 by the president of the Louisville & Nashville road, I swear, are the people's rights as to the matter of values.

The Governor of Kentucky, in a signed statement which appeared in the public press last November, announced:

"The existing Board of Valuation and Assessment based their 1912 assessments on evidence of the values placed before them at great length, and I am sure they have presented what they believe, after careful examination and convincing proof, are fair and just assessments, and of about 400 corporations assessed 'only eight have protested in the Courts.'"

Prof. Carl J. Plehn, head of the Department of Economics of the University of California, and one of the most respected tax experts in America, who came to Kentucky at the instance of the Legislative Tax Commission to study conditions and recommend changes, after having written to or visited every county in the State, has submitted a preliminary report, in which, in referring to railroad franchises, he says:

"In the application of the franchise tax on the railroad corporations, your State Board of Valuation and Assessment has during the past two years made some severe increases, in some cases raising the franchise assessment nearly thirty fold. Some of these assessments are now in litigation. I have satisfied myself as to the general validity of these assessments, made by my own computations, and that in every case my results are as high as, or somewhat above, those of the State Board. It would seem, therefore, that in the past the assessment of franchises has been too low, but this evil has been corrected by the assessments as upheld by the courts."

Fight For Assessments.
In the face of all these matters of fact, quotations from the Court's opinion, the extracts from Governor McCreary's published statement and verification of the values fixed by the State Board of Valuation and Assessment, after "making his own computations," say Kentucky State official who will not fight to maintain those assessments, or who will lend himself directly or indirectly to compromise them, is a traitor to the people's cause and should be dealt his political death and assigned to oblivion eternally.

Most respectfully yours,
JUSTUS GOEBEL.

Ask Uncle Sam.

The editor of an agricultural magazine says that we pay our taxes on the basis of what a few of us use them as we might. There is not a worm, a bug, a blight, a disease, or a problem of the soil which is not studied by the United States Government, which they are not anxious to tell us.

At the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington almost any question will be answered by experts free of charge. In such cases not even a stamp is required for reply. They will examine diseased plants and tell what the remedy is, if there is one. Someone has said that the way to tell a toadstool from a mushroom is to eat it—if you die, it's a toadstool. But the experts will save you the trouble of dying, and tell you in case of doubt, if you will send them the specimen.

The number of things an observant farmer—especially a young one—wants to know is simply limitless. And he can be sure that if there is an answer it will be sent him. The country teacher who wants to ruralize her rural school might well ask for these policies to be brought to the school and sent them to the experts. Such a policy will do much to bring the Government closer to the farmer, and to make the public feel that it is really their Government.

DUPLICITY

Of Attorney-General Garnett.

"PEOPLE'S RIGHTS" THREATENED.

The Question is Which Shall Prevail, Wrong or Right, Injustice or Justice, Compromise or No Compromise?

—Open Letter.

Covington, Ky., Mar. 11, 1914.
Hon. James Garnett, Attorney General, Frankfort, Ky.

Dear Sir:
You are aware that, at the instance of certain gentlemen, I withheld from publication on Dec. 17th, 1913, an open letter addressed to Gov. McCreary and the people of Kentucky, in which I criticized you and those who have been attempting to compromise away the "people's rights" in the franchise assessment of 1912, now being contested in the Courts by the five largest railroad corporations in the State.

Your letter of Dec. 17th, 1913, written to me the day following your receipt of information that above indicated letter had been, for the time, withheld from publication did not clear you of the charges made in that proposed open letter, but, to the contrary, justified every word contained therein.

Astonishing as is yours of Dec. 17th, 1913, it is no less so than was your conduct incident to the meeting of the County Judges and Attorneys of the State held at the House of Representatives, Frankfort, Ky., on Nov. 8th, 1913, when I felt called upon to tell the more than 300 citizens there assembled, in your presence and standing face to face with you, that as the head of the legal department of the State and just shown to me you were not faithful, true and loyal to the people who had elected you. What I said it I believe now more than ever.

Your letter of Dec. 17th, 1913, is a mesh of denials, admissions of connection with compromise propositions, all damnable in their purpose, and I will be charitable enough to say I am at a loss to know just how to characterize your denials, notwithstanding overwhelming proof that you have been seeking and favoring compromise of the tax suits, as is shown by your letter of Oct. 18th, 1913, your statements in Court at Frankfort, and at Maysville.

In paragraph one of your letter of Dec. 17th, 1913, you use these words: "You are under the impression that I am endeavoring to compromise the tax suits," and further on, you use these words, "I will say that no such effort is being made by me." Yet only three days later, as indicated on page 45, of the transcript of the hearing before Judge Cochran at Maysville, Mr. Galvin, counsel for the C. & O. Railroad, complimented you in the following words:

"The Attorney General came to us in the best of good faith and tried to reach an agreement—and he asked your honor to help up that the State and the road hoped to reach an agreement."

The transcript further shows you accepted Mr. Galvin's statement about you to the Court with perfect acquiescence, good grace, and considerable satisfaction, even though it was direct contravention of what you had written to me exactly three days before. Comment is unnecessary and it should be self-evident to everyone who may read this that you are Dr. Jekyll one day and Mr. Hyde the next before.

"Taxes cannot be compromised." Only through the invention of method, can the intent of the law be defeated, and the 1912 assessments compromised. In a speech at Elizabethtown on August 27th, 1913, William Goebel said of compromise deals:

"Mr. Taylor compromised all the franchise taxes against the railroads and if the Democratic Administration is elected it will be opened without doubt and the franchise tax due by these railroads will be assessed at a regular and legal valuation."

This matter should no longer be trifled with; it should not be compromised, but should be fought with all possible vigor and to the conclusion in the highest court in the land, in the interest of the people who you have sworn honestly to serve.

No more compromise! No more growth through having tax-collectors rob the State, rob her school children of a better education, and the taxpayers of their due.

This to inform you that the above referred to open letter will be published under date of March 12th.

Respectfully,
JUSTUS GOEBEL.

Breaking Point, Style Sketch, does not break.

Like the road law—there was never a legislature that was any account.

The candidates for Congress will begin to announce in the next few weeks in the several districts throughout the State.

The Kentucky Legislature has adjourned. Now if the ground hog will adjourn the people of this State will be happy again.

The legislature having adjourned and time having been called on groundhog winter Kentucky farmers are a happy set of people again.

The insurance law passed by the legislature has caused an exodus of insurance companies from the State and they are running a bluff. It will be several weeks before the insurance situation in Kentucky clears sufficiently from the effect of the new law to become definitely certain.

If some of the nation's great men at Washington were working as hard to keep the U. S. out of a war their efforts would be of some benefit to the country. It seems that they will be satisfied only in case of a fight by which they will not profit unless they land some fat government contracts during hostilities.

The spoiling of the silage that is left after the winter feeding is over and which it is desired to carry through the summer may be reduced considerably if the silage is tramped down thoroughly and a barrel of salt scattered over the surface. If the surface of the silage seems too dry, water should be supplied before the salt is put on.

One thing can be said to the credit of the legislature just adjourned—it did not indulge in many large appropriations, having profited by the example set by its predecessors along that line and the fact that the State is considerably behind in its financial affairs. Another thing—it did not create a long list of offices to be filled by special friends.

It is generally desirable to use home grown seeds as they are usually better adapted to local conditions than seeds from other states. It has been found especially true with corn seed. A variety that does well in one locality may not in another. Reports from many farmers indicate that the acreage of corn is gradually increasing. The most favorable results are obtained by men who use home grown, selected seed. Corn is a crop that can be adapted to a wide range of conditions, and should be better each year if the seed is carefully selected. Where corn is late in maturing the seed should be selected early in the fall from the more mature stalks. Only the best ears should be used for seed. Many failures in corn growing have been traced directly to the use of seed which has not been carefully selected or seed which is not acclimated.

FLOODS SURE TO HAPPEN.

But Protection Is Possible; Right Man Could Do It.

Someone is trying to establish a reputation as a prophet by predicting floods in the Ohio valley for the near future. It does not seem a very difficult feat. But when a person sets out to be a prophet and predicts floods in the Ohio valley, that would hardly be considered a specimen of his handiwork that would admit him to the guild of the prophets. For it is a foregone conclusion that there will be floods in the Ohio valley this spring. There has been practically not a spring in many years that did not bring floods to that valley and that did not work damage all the way from Pittsburg to Cairo and perhaps all the way down to the Gulf.

When the damage is just about the average, nobody complains. Some move to the upper stories of their homes and others move out. But there is no use making much fuss over the situation. It is only when there is great loss of life and enormous damage that the valley speaks up and complains and deigns to ask for help. Otherwise the trouble has long since become chronic. It may not be so severe in one season as it is in another. But it never fails to appear and it is always more or less of an affliction.

And after it has passed, then the nation usually sits up and declares solemnly that it is high time that something were done about the river. We know that the losses caused by these floods run into enormous sums, and that there are going to be similar losses in the future, but we are still at the stage where we occasionally voice the sentiment that pretty soon something will have to be done with that unruly river. It seems to have had a habit of flooding much of the country when that country belonged to the red men. But we of the twentieth century pride ourselves upon the fact that we can curb and improve upon mere nature. And there is a growing belief that the enormous losses could be prevented if a man like Colonel G. W. Goethals were found, given authority to proceed and sufficient money, and the instructions to curb the Ohio he would do so.—Burlington Hawk-eye.

Many say that the last day's work done by the legislature was the best it did.

Farm Product Post.

Washington, March 15th.—Postmaster General Burleson has amplified the parcel post by the establishment of a "farm product post," which can be utilized by farmers and truckers for the shipment of crates of butter, eggs, vegetables, dressed poultry, weighing between twenty and fifty pounds, directly from the farmer to the kitchen. The service, which was announced by the Postmaster General today, is provided only for the first and second zones, a distance of approximately 150 airline miles.

Under the new regulations boxes and crates, similar to those used in the express office when packed with farm products, will be carried outside mail bags and promptly delivered to the city customer. The "farm products post" is created for the purpose of opening up a cheap marketing avenue between the truck gardener and the city consumer with a view to reducing the cost of the table in populous centers. Investigations in every market basket costing under the old system $5.50, the farmer receives $3.24 on his farm are retailed in the city for $5.50 under the present system.

It is the idea of Postoffice and Agricultural Department experts, who have been studying this problem, that the farmer will accept $2.25 postage prepaid, for the articles of food which he sells to the commission merchants for approximately $3.21 and for which the city consumer will save about $2.25 on every market basket costing under the old system $5.50.

The Postoffice Department, in the statement, declares that the new regulations should prove a "boom to farmers and truckers." Under the old regulations the crates and boxes of farm products had to be securely packed and were limited in size so that they could be placed in mailbags. Under the new regulations the ordinary crates used for the shipment of butter, eggs, fruits, berries, vegetables, dressed poultry and other articles by express will be accepted provided that the maximum weight of these crates is not fifty pounds.

Packages under 20 pounds must be securely packed so that they can be handled in mail sacks with ordinary mail.

STATE NEWS.

Mr. F. H. Durham, who recently located here, coming from Merrimac, Taylor county, informed The News a few days ago that before leaving his former home he slaughtered an immense hog. It weighed 150 pounds net. He sold the hog, the hams weighing seventy-five pounds each, the sides 100 pounds each and the shoulders seventy-five pounds each. The hog brought him $100. The mate to this hog netted 650 pounds.—Columbia News.

The Legislature, which has been in session for a century, has for four more days to steal their salaries from the State Treasury. Never before in the history of this State has there been such a congregation of cases. They were not only deficient in brains but hadn't the moral courage of a jacksnipe. Everything that should have been done was left undone, but taxes will be increased by the imbecility of this weak body. It is a shame that this Legislature ever met. There were a few good men, but a few—Carrollton News.

At C. W. Mardis' store rats have been causing some damage, and a few days ago a trap was set and the next morning there were nine big rats in the trap. After some discussion it was thought best to drown them. Then the question arose as to what should be done with the dead rats. Tom Wayne and Cley Smock fixed them in a shoe box, and wrapping them up nicely, hired a boy to carry the box out beyond the Chattanooga and lay it beside Porter Smith's mail box, expecting to have lots of fun at Mr. Smith's expense. The boy did as directed, but had hardly gotten a hundred yards away when a buggy stopped beside the mail box and a young man stepped out, swiped the box and drove rapidly away. Tom Wayne says he would have given $50 to have seen that fellow when he opened the box.—Lebanon Falcon.

Edgar Riley went to Verona in his auto on Wednesday of last week. He had a hard trip, but these people who own Ford autos think they can go anywhere a horse and buggy can.

W. L. Kirkpatrick made his last killing of hogs last week for packing purposes. He has butchered over one hundred hogs since the season began, a few of which were for persons about town.

The remains of Hon. N. S. Walton were taken from Burlington last Thursday afternoon enroute to his late home in Petersburg, from which the funeral was conducted last Friday at 10 a. m.

The following persons have used the split log drag on their roads, and the good results are now in evidence: Hubert W. White, Robt. Snow, Temp Graves, C. A. Gaines, H. S. Tanner, Manlius Goodridge.

It will not be many days now until those Boone county people who have been sojourning in Fla., will begin showing up at home. They have missed seeing considerable of the beautiful past month.

W. Lee Cropper, of Idlewild neighborhood, sent to this office yesterday, the double head of a lamb. The head, under the end of the neck, each having one ear, two eyes, a nose and one ear.

Edgar Riley is giving the residence he bought of John and Chas. Clore several days since a complete overhauling, which work he hopes to have done by the time he has to give possession where he now resides.

The smallpox situation in Trimble county is not improved, and there is considerable uneasiness about it. At least five families in the Leopold neighborhood have been afflicted. Some of the older people are reported to be quite sick.

D. M. Snyder, agent for the Lawrenceburg Marble Works has sold to Hubert and Carl Rouse a monument to be placed on the family burying lot in the Odd-Fellows' cemetery. He has also sold one to N. Riddell, administrator of Miss Anna Cason.

A Recorder representing the W. L. B. House's Zoological Garden at Sunday and enjoyed the antics of his fox squirrels. Mr. Rouse is very fond of his pets. Mr. Rouse invested in a fine Victrola phonograph recently and the Recorder man was treated to some fine music.

Miss Olga Kirkpatrick opened one of the mail sacks last Friday at noon and was surprised to find in it three gallon cans of molasses, one of which had sprung a leak and the loose molasses had taken the shape of the sack. They were sent from Golden Pond, Trigg county, by parcel post.

Omer Dix, brother of Prof. E. L. Dix, has bought the Pendletonian, published at Falmouth, this State, and will take possession of the editorial chair shortly. Falmouth is a good town and the Recorder expects to see Mr. Dix make the Pendletonian a red-hot sheet as soon as it passes under his control.

Some time after Boss Eddins had put his auto in the garage, last Saturday evening, the tube in one of the rear tires blew out, tearing the casing off the rim. The explosion was heard for a considerable distance, many thinking a shot gun had been discharged and mayhap a murder resulting therefrom.

Renewing his subscription to the RECORDER, J. L. Clements, of Lexington, Ky., writes, "We have had moderately good weather up here. About eight inches of snow has been the deepest and about six below zero the coldest. Snow drifts lay in places. Cold, piercing winds at times. Regards to all."

Stevens Bros., of Idlewild neighborhood, captured the following premiums at the national corn show held at Dallas, Texas, recently:

First premium on ten ears yellow corn, riding cultivator valued at $40.
They also took one 5th premium.

Hereafter subscriptions for other papers subscribed for with the RECORDER will be forwarded to the foreign offices on Thursday of each week, consequently a subscription received at this office later than noon Thursday will be held over until Thursday following, therefore in order to get your subscription forwarded they must reach this office early in the week.

County Clerk Rogers gave his office a thorough cleaning last week, and in the work he discovered that some of the records executed during the term of A. E. Parker as county clerk. The tax had not been paid on them, consequently they have never been recorded, which fact may cause somebody considerable trouble sometime in the future when a gap is found in the title to land which they have conveyed.

Circuit Clerk Beasley, of Grant county, was in Burlington, Monday, having come over to file with Circuit Clerk Maurer the record in the case of the Commonwealth against Gus Stevens and Grace Kells, indicted jointly for the murder of Joe Kells, husband of Grace Kells, the trial coming to Boone on a change of venue. The case will be called for trial on the fourth day of the coming trial term of the Boone circuit court. The names of twenty-four witnesses for the Commonwealth are endorsed on the indictment and every lawyer in the Willmetts is employed in the case, only one of whom is for the defense.

Dr. Yelton has had several exciting trips this winter, but about the worst that made him an auto while in Bracken county, last week, attending the funeral of one of his uncles. He and those with him started to a railroad station eighteen miles distant in a five passenger machine having no idea as to what was ahead of them. They were soon confronted by snowdrifts that came up to the tops of the wheels on the machine, impeding their progress so that it took them five hours to cover the eighteen miles. When plowing into the drifts the snow piled upon the fenders and running boards so that they had to get out of the machine and clear it off to keep it from falling in the car and burying them.

Fifty-Six Years Ago.

Fifty-six years ago today, March 19, 1888, Joe, a colored boy, a slave, belonging to Miles Marquess, of Florence neighborhood, was hanged in the valley a few hundred yards west of Burlington, for the murder of Eliza Bryn, a white girl. The jail from which the negro was taken for execution occupied the site now occupied by the residence of R. S. Coven. James Perkins was the juror and James Calvert was the sheriff who hanged Joe.

When the indictment was called for trial the order of the court says "the defendant pleaded not guilty and placed himself upon God and his country. The jurors who tried the negro were John O. Campbell, Mathias Voshell, Wm. Huey, Joseph Polly, Stephen G. Gaines, Thos. Quick, Thomas A. Stephens, Chas. B. Smith, Reuben Borman, Lewis Helm, Wm. Gaines and George W. Terrill. The trial judge was Elijah Nuttall, and the Commonwealth's Attorney, P. U. Major. Every person whose name appears on the record as officers of the court, jurors or witnesses, is dead.

The value of Joe was fixed at $500 by the court and ordered to the auditor of public accounts for payment to John Marquess to whom Joe belonged.

Further reference to criminal trials in this county disclosed that there has been three other legal hangings in Boone county, viz: William Claytor, a white man, was the first to be executed and was hanged June 8th, 1810, the execution, according to tradition taking place on a gallows erected near the northeast corner of the Boone County Deposit Bank building, many years before that building was erected. Claytor killed a man on a boat on the Ohio river.

The second person hung was Elvira, a slave belonging to Harrison Hawkins, and for whom the State paid Hawkins $750. Elvira killed one of her children and was hanged December 11th, 1835. Gabe, a slave belonging to S. P. Brady, murdered a negro man belonging to Thos. Roberts, for which he was hanged December 14, 1848. Bray was paid $500 by the State for Gabe.

Elvira and Gabe were hung at a point near where the negro Joe was executed.

The following copy of an order of the circuit court beginning a trial for murder in 1810:

This day came as well the attorney for the Commonwealth as the foresaid—in custody of John Love keeper of the jail of Boone county—who was in custody in the jail aforesaid for the cause aforesaid he had been committed, and forthwith being demanded of him concerning the premises in the said indictment above specified and charged upon him, how he will acquit himself thereof. He saith he is not guilty, and therefore put himself upon the country, and—who prosecutes for the said commonwealth in this behalf doth the like. Therefore let a jury thereupon here immediately come before the judge of the said commonwealth, of free and lawful men of the county of Boone aforesaid, by whom the truth of the matter may be the better known, and who are not of kin to him—to recognize upon their oath whether the said—be guilty of the murder in the indictment aforesaid above specified or not guilty as well the said—who prosecutes for the said commonwealth in this behalf as the said—who puts themselves upon the jury, and the jurors by the sheriff for the purpose empaneled and returned to—being called came who were chosen, tried and sworn the truth to speak of and concerning the premises, and thereupon hear the evidence the jury retired in the custody of the sheriff of this county, and the prisoner being remanded to jail it is ordered that court do adjourn until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

MRS. LEGRAND GAINES

Passes Away at Her Home After A Lingering Illness.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gaines, wife of Mr. Legrand Gaines, died at their home out on the Petersburg pike last Saturday morning. Mrs. Gaines had been in poor health for some time and a few weeks since her condition became critical. She was a daughter of the late John and Lucy Rogers, pioneer citizens of Bellevue neighborhood, had she lived until the 11th day of next May she would have been 57 years old, and had been a member of Bullittsburg Baptist church about 30 years. She is survived by her husband, three sons, B. C. and J. E. of this neighborhood and W. Lee, of Walton, and two brothers, James and Boone Rogers, of Bellevue. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Campbell, at Bullittsburg church at 2 p. m., last Monday. Mrs. Gaines' death is mourned by a large circle of relatives and friends, and the aged husband has the tenderest sympathies of all.

Oldest American Flag

The oldest American flag in existence is now in the State House at Annapolis, Md. It was carried at the Battle of Copenans in 1781, and is supposed to have been made by Betsey Ross. The stripes are longer in proportion, than in the modern flag. There are thirteen stars for the thirteen States.

COST OF COW'S KEEP

Interesting Tests Made by Prof. Fraser of Illinois.

In One Herd Only Four Animals Proved Profitable—Money and Labor Wasted on Thirty Others—Profit and Loss Shown.

Prof. Wilbur J. Fraser, University of Illinois, after figuring out his table of the keep and profit of cows of all degrees of production, illustrates its use in a very striking manner by interpreting the records of five herds chosen from the scores of herds the Illinois station has tested for a full year.

Herd No. 1 contains 24 cows whose average production is 5,565 pounds of milk and 199 pounds of butterfat, with a profit of $11.13 per cow. The individual records show only three unprofitable cows, which lost a total of $17.15, but none other cows make a very small profit from $1.21 to $3.32. Just six cows return profits that should be expected, from $21.35 to $29.70. No cow producing less than $16 profit per year should be retained. Had this herd consisted of ten cows like the best one, the owner would have made a $710 profit instead of $268.44 for the year.

Herd No. 2 had 34 cows that averaged 4,232 pounds of milk and 163 pounds of butterfat, and made a total profit of $64.73—only $1.91 per cow for the year. Fifteen of these cows were kept at a positive loss totaling $101.87, and only four cows had as much as $15 profit. If the owner had milked only these four cows he would have made more money and would have saved the labor of caring for the other 30.

Herd No. 3 had 12 cows, every one of which shows a profit above $16 and an average profit of $41.66.

Herd No. 4 had 15 cows which average only 3,147 pounds of milk and 124 pounds of butterfat. Ten of these cows were kept at an actual loss and the best cow made a profit of only $10.21. The total loss of this herd was $112.39, or $7.49 per cow.

Herd No. 5 had 13 cows averaging 8,825 pounds of milk and 326 pounds of butterfat, making a total profit of $453.84 and an average of $42.60 per cow. And the best four cows in this herd made a profit of $244, which is more than the total profit of the whole three herds, 1, 2, and 4, containing 75 cows and returning only $221 profit in a year. Although a grade herd, its lowest cow returned a profit of $22.80, which is more than twice that of the best cow in herd No. 4.

BALANCED RATIONS FOR COW

Department of Agriculture Gives Out Report of Experiments Made at the Illinois Station.

A report showing the difference in value of a balanced and unbalanced ration for cows according to experiments made recently by the Illinois station has reached the department of agriculture.

Nine cows fed for 131 days a nutritive ratio of 1.6 consumed 50.82 of digestible matter per 100 pounds of milk. A similar lot fed a nutritive ratio of 1.1 required 68.14 pounds of digestible matter per 100 pounds of milk produced. The total amount of milk produced for the two herds was 30,393 and 26,339.09 pounds of milk, respectively. The first lot consumed 16,79 pounds and the second lot 19.92 pounds of digestible nutrients per pound of milk fat produced. The ration consisted of corn silage, clover hay, and ground oats supplemented by gluten fed in the narrow ration and timothy hay in the wide ration. Because of the lack of protein in the ration fed lot 2, the other nutrients were not used to the best advantage. This shows in a striking manner that an excess of carbohydrates can not be made to take the place of a deficiency in protein.

Clean, Sunny Barn. A sunny barn and clean surroundings encourage help to do better work among the stock. It is a mighty unpleasant task to wade around in mud and filth and dirty barns sitting on a lot of dirty, lazy cows and few self-respecting hired men are looking for a job on a farm where business is conducted along such slipshod lines.

RAT DESERVES NO MERCY

Has Been Estimated That Its Presence Costs This Country Sum of $167,000,000 a Year.

According to a bulletin issued by the Ohio state board of health, there are more rats in the United States than there are people. The Incorporated Society for the Destruction of Vermin estimates that there is at least one rat for every man, woman and child in the British Isles. Similar estimates have been made for Germany, France and Denmark.

The annual cost of each rat to the country has been computed at $150 in Great Britain, $130 in Denmark and $1 in France. As specimens of the depredations of rats, Dr. Lantz, in Public Health Bulletin No. 30, cites the following:

"An Iowa farmer, writing to an agricultural journal, reported that rats had destroyed in one winter about 500 bushels of corn of a total of 2,000 bushels stored in cribs. Another farmer reported that rats had robbed him of an entire summer's hatching of 300 or 400 chicks, and still another one attributed his loss in grain and poultry for one season due to rats as sufficient to pay for rats for three years."

The upkeep of a rat in this country is about half a cent a day. Estimating one rat to each person, $167,000,000 are lost annually by the depredations of this pest.

Rats begin to hear going when three months old. They will litter about six times a year of a total of 2,000 pups at a litter. This remarkable fecundity, together with the fact that they are nocturnal in their habits and live in hidden holes, accounts for the large rat population and emphasizes the difficulty of destruction on a wholesale scale.

SMOKE COST IS IN MILLIONS

Figures Show Wastefulness Which Is Characteristic of the American Nation.

Experts figure that Pittsburgh's yearly soot emissions would make a pile 100 feet in diameter and 600 feet high, or larger than the Washington monument. The money waste and damage are estimated at $12,000,000 yearly.

Sample tests made some time ago in Chicago of the cost of the smoke nuisance in that city showed that the smoke bill exceeded the tax bill, which was about $40,000,000 a year, and the cost of smoke in other cities is fully as great in proportion to the size of the city.

This includes only the injury to property. Doctors will tell you that is the least damage. They will point out how the smoke gets into the throat and lungs and injures the health, causing chronic ailments which diminish the happiness and shorten the life of those who are not responsible for the smoke evil.

The old saying is, "Much smoke, much business," and we need the business. But the progressive engineer of today will tell you that most smoke can be avoided. It indicates incomplete combustion, which means waste of coal, extra expense in labor and equipment, damage to property, sickness and loss of life—Power.

Empty Cider Kegs.

The year 1913 will go into history as the season when the cider keg which is to be found in the cellar of every well regulated Vermont farmhouse remained empty. The reason for this almost unprecedented condition was the total failure of the apple crop because of late spring frosts followed by a dry season. The failure of the mills which usually make cider to start their presses have caused a return to primitive methods in order to get a small quantity of the popular drink in some places, persons having the means to make cider from two or two going about among neighbors who happened to have a few trees in a sufficiently sheltered position so that they were not affected by the frost of growing at such a high altitude that the buds were not sufficiently developed to be blighted by the frosts of May.—Rutland News.

Differing on Grammar.

In Indianapolis a tablet is to be placed on a branch library building in honor of its donor. The proposed inscription contains this sentence: "All praise to the man who serves his fellowmen." Then it was suggested that the "who" ought to be that, and so a controversy arose as to which word was truly grammatical in that connection. They referred it to two authorities, and they disagreed, one saying who and the other that. Then they referred it to the Literary Digest for an expert opinion, and the decision came in favor of that, on the ground that the sentence referred to the donor personally, whereas if the word who referred to mankind in general it would be right to use who. There is still doubt in the mind as to the reason for the decision, since that is not as strong as the decision itself.—Columbus Journal.

Ants Repairing Flood Losses.

Ants are very numerous in our Ohio gravelly soil. They seem the most helpful agent for the restoration of our farms swept bare by the recent floods. Every day they bring up much of the fine soil mingled with the gravel and deposit it on top. The gravel inevitably settles down. While some of the gravel does slowly disintegrate, the process is a very slow one, and the ants far slower than the action of the producer. Perhaps in most soils the ant's work is more beneficial than the ant, but certainly not in the gravelly soils—Farm and Forester.

DAIRY

IMPORTANCE OF GOOD COWS

Poor Boarders Should Find No Room on Any Dairy Farm—Plenty of Wholesome Food Needed.

None but good cows should be tolerated on the dairy farm. It does not pay to have poor boarders. A cow that is well fed and cared for should produce 6,000 pounds of milk containing 9.0 per cent. of butter fat, or should make 250 pounds of butter per year.

The milk should be weighed at least one day each month, and a test made for butter fat. This is the only accurate way of making comparisons and finding out what the herd is doing individually. The cow stable should be well lighted, well ventilated and kept clean. Give the cows plenty of wholesome food. It is the poorest economy to starve them either in the matter of food or water. Also see that the salt is always accessible to the cattle.

There is no nicer place to milk cows than in a well-kept stable. Do it quickly, cleanly and thoroughly. Cows do not like unnecessary noise or delay. Begin milking at the same hour, night and morning, and milk the cows in the same order. Wipe the cow's flanks and udder to prevent loose dirt and hairs falling into the milk. Do not wet the hands with milk. A practice to be recommended is rubbing a little vasoline on the hands. This keeps the teats in nice condition and overcomes the objection some have to milking with dry hands. Nothing tends more readily to drying up the milk flow than leaving a little milk in the udder.

Remove the milk as soon as possible from the stable, and immediately strain through several thicknesses of cheesecloth. Place the cheesecloth over the bottom of the strainer and secure it with an easy-fitting hoop. The cloth must be removed and well washed after each time of using.

HANDY SHED FOR MILK CANS

Platform Is Especially Useful in Rough Weather—Door Keeps Out Pesticiferous Flies.

It is a great inconvenience to have milk cans on a level with the wagon which is to draw them to the factory, and it is a good plan also to have the platform covered with a shed. This is especially useful in rough weather and during winter, says the Independent Farmer. The illustration shows a shed which has proved popular in many dairy sections. The door is not essential, but is very useful in keeping out flies during the summer. It is built with light material covered with wire cloth and hung on spring hinges so as to close itself.

Shed for Milk Cans.

Feed for Good Cow.

A cow that will give a pound or more of butter a day is a good cow, and, in addition to a variety of feeds grown on the farm, she should be fed daily a small quantity of bran or cottonseed meal.

DAIRY NOTES

To make sure of a gentle cow, pet the calf and heifer.

A well equipped milk house will soon pay for itself.

The milk sheet and the scales are a necessity with every well organized dairy.

An oil cloth cover for the separator saves the machine and returns a cleaner product.

Why not raise your own protein feeds this year and cut out the high priced milkstuffs?

Testing is important. Your cows, your seed corn and your farm plans should all be tested.

The cow with a dainty appetite, the one that is a delicate eater, is seldom the most liberal producer.

Ready For The Anvil Chorus.

The distribution of Federal patronage is certain to prove a serious detriment to the next elections to the party in power in the Union.

For nearly six years it has been the rule, with but few exceptions, for the new Administration to lose control of the House of Representatives at the congressional elections succeeding their assuming power.

The peculiar conditions of the opposition to the Democratic party being divided into two strong and active parties give the present Administration a decided advantage to have again a Democratic House, but in every congressional district of the republic represented by a Democrat, Democratic disappointment, Democratic resentments, Democratic factions Democratic opposition will be found active against Democratic candidates for Congress up for re-election.

The individual voters will soon have the first opportunity that many of them ever had to register their approval or disapproval of United States Senators, and it will not be many months now until the members of that august body, who desire reelection will be face to face with their constituents at the boxes of the primaries, and if successful there, again the running of the gauntlet surrounded by the entire body of the voters in the state.

With Democratic Senators, as with Democratic Congressmen, the glamour and satisfaction of distributing Federal patronage will be over, and the ten enemies that have been made by each appointment will be waiting eagerly, while working actively, for the day that their opposition can be made to count through the ballot boxes that register as correctly the resentments of the masses as they do their favorites.

Strictly primary laws have curtailed and limited all political machines, either national, state, district, county or local, and Federal appointments, however willing, are now of very little assistance to those who give them place or position.

Activity on their part not only endangers their places, but antagonizes the sentiment of their respective communities, becomes a handicap to those they favor, causes charges of official rings, machines and bosses—charges nearly always fatal to those named as in such political control.

The day of the machine power are past. No one can build or maintain such a machine that will give the desired results. The power of the hour lies with the men who go to the polls, with their pencils ready to conclude the work they have been doing for months with those deft little hammers that never cease to knock after those who wield them have been denied the political recognition which they know they earned by faithful service, by loyal party work, and were entitled to, but some other person obtained.

They are knocking now in Ohio, from Ashtabula to Hamilton. They are rapping, rapping in every town and county of the state, and they are rapping in favor of making it an anvil chorus by next November.

They are rapping in Michigan, knocking in Indiana, striking hard in New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Illinois and Kentucky, and the distribution of the Federal patronage is each day adding to the numbers of those that wield the hammers now, and will use the ballots at the primaries and the election later on.—Enquirer.

VISUAL LESSONS

Convincing and Unique Dem-onstrations Will Be Fea-ture of Meeting

TWO ACRES OF FLOOR SPACE

Many Activities of Rural Co-operative Work Will Be Shown in Actual Operation—Parcel Postoffice Will Be Part of Exhibit at Louisville.

A talk or a lecture may be thor-oughly convincing and delightful, but a demonstration must carry absolute conviction. The demonstrations that will be used in Louisville in the huge Armory, April 7, 8, 9, 10, are sure to attract the attention of the farmers, their friends and neighbors who come to the Conference. A short list of some of these various demonstrations will probably give some idea of the wide scope of this meeting. Men who understand the business will develop real organizations for the handling (1) Poultry and Eggs; (2) Vegetables and Small Fruits; (3) Farm Products; (4) Dairy Products; (5) Live Stock; (6) Purchase of Farm Requirements, and (7) Co-operative Credit. In these organizations that will be developed, an effort will be made to show exactly how the testing, grading, standardizing and packing of all the various products is done. Directors for shipping, selling, the making of returns and the finding of markets will be made fea-tures of these demonstrations.

Besides these co-operative organiza-tions that have just been mentioned the United States Postoffice Depart-ment has arranged for space in which to equip a complete parcel post depart-ment. Instead of its being merely a dummy affair with an exhibit, parcels will be handled and sent out as they are in any great postoffice. Several of the large retail stores of Louisville will send their parcel post packages direct to this office instead of the main post office, so that there will be continuous work in handling the mail during the whole time the Armory is open for ex-hibition purposes. In addition to the handling of packages from the city to the country, experts will be present to show anyone how to pack eggs, but-ter and country produce of every type. Very few people know very much about the parcel post as yet, and this innovation should prove a tremendous advantage to those visiting the Confer-ence.

THE BANKER-FARMER

B. F. Harris, of Illinois.

It seems rather odd to find on our desk a new magazine with the above heading. It has always seemed to us as if the bankers and the farmers did not know each other as well as they should. In reading over this splendid magazine, which is a monthly review of the State Bankers' Associations of thirty-seven states, their agricultural committees and the individual banker in agricultural matters, it seems to be most timely. It claims among its items of interest "public welfare, in connection with an effort to obtain and hold successful and permanent agriculture through better farming, marketing, education, roads, rural life and credits."

All the wide-awake folks who meet at the Conference for Farmers and Business Men in Louisville to discuss rural matters during the four days, April 7, 8, 9, 10, will have a chance to hear the editor of "The Banker-Farmer," Mr. B. F. Harris, of Champaign, Ill. He is not only the editor of this strong, clean publication; but he is, also, the successful vice presi-dent of the First National Bank of Champaign and chairman of the Agri-cultural Commission, which was devel-oped under the auspices of the Amer-ican Bankers' Association.

Railroad Rates.
The railroad people of the South have been quick to see the tremendous advantage of quickening interest in rural life through the Conference of Farmers and Business Men in Louis-ville, April 7-9-10, and have allowed a very low rate, one fare plus 25 cents for the round trip.

Nervous?

Mrs. Walter Vincent, of Pleasant Hill, N. C., writes: "For three sum-mers, I suffered from nervousness, dreadful pains in my back and sides, and weak sinking spells. Three bottles of Cardui, the woman's tonic, relieved me entire-ly. I feel like another person, now."

TAKE

Cardui

The Woman's Tonic

For over 50 years, Cardui has been helping to relieve women's un-necessary pains and building weak women up to health and strength. It will do the same for you, if given a fair trial. So, don't wait, but begin taking Cardui today, for its use cannot harm you, and should surely do you good.

Married—James R. Wallace of Walton, to Miss Anna Oterseu, of New York City, at Newport, on March 14. Mr. Wallace and his bride first met in Fla., a couple of years ago when he was engaged in newspaper work, and their acquaintance ripened into an affection that culminated in the young lady coming west last week to join in the bonds of wedlock the selection of her heart.

Rev. L. A. Kohler of the Christian church performed the ceremony in his usual felicitous manner. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace came to Walton Sunday to spend a couple of days, and left for Sanders, Carroll county, Monday afternoon, where they expect to take charge of a hotel. The bride is a very pretty and accomplished young lady, and has a winsome and attractive personality. The best of good wishes are extended Mr. and Mrs. Wallace for a long, happy and prosperous future.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Bristow was saddened last Saturday evening by the death of her mother, Mrs. Mary Poor, aged 77. Mrs. Poor has been ill for quite a while and had gradually grown weaker and the end came unexpectedly as they had been told that her time was limited. This good woman and mother cannot be described to strangers and only a neighbor who knew her could know her life. Kind and contented and although a frail woman she was always ready to do whatever she could to help in whatever way she was most needed. Mrs. Bristow, her daughter, with whom she has made her home for quite a while, has been faithful and untiring in her care while she was getting feeble. Also her grandson, Dr. Charles Jones and wife of Cincinnati, have made a great fight and sacrifice to prolong her life. Mrs. Poor leaves a professional nurse of many years' experience stood by her in her last moments to administer stimulants professionally. Mrs. Poor leaves four children, three girls and one son to mourn her loss, also one sister at Toronto, Canada, and while all will miss the council of this good woman, none will miss Mrs. Bristow. Although they may think she has lived her allotted time and had not a fear to go, yet that vacant chair by the fireside cannot be overcome in a day. May the children profit by following in her footsteps. Funeral was preached by Rev. Kohler, of the Christian church, and the remains were placed in the vault at Independence, Monday afternoon.

Yelton Grocery Company managed the contest at Walton.

Why We Like a Mule.

Because he is the most tireless worker on the farm.

His feet stand hard roads better than those of a horse.

He eats less than a horse, but does more work on his feed.

He is an excellent saddle animal if you know how to saddle him.

His age cuts little figure in a sale. Nobody ever asks how old a mule is.

He is just as gentle as a horse if he has not been spoiled in breaking.

He never falls thru a hole in the bridge and generally keeps out of danger.

He is never sick but once and then he dies. But who ever saw a dead mule since he was?

Mules are ready for work younger than horses. They are able to endure as much at two years as a colt will at three or four.

He will bring from $150 to $250 when he is full grown, if he is big and strong, and big, strong mules are just the same as money in the bank.

In this herd of cows and heifers you will not find a blemished udder, all are hornless and good individuals with good colors, and when it comes to the most essential points (their test and quantity of milk) I think will compare favorably with the best.

STEERS—These Calves are grade Shorthorns, in good stocker shape, have been wintered well and are in the pink of condition.

FOR DELICATE CHILDREN

A Mother's Letter to Mothers.

Mrs. E. W. Cooper of Bloomfield, N. J., says: "My child, seven years old, had a bad cold and was weak and quite run down in health. She had been in this condition for about six weeks when I began giving her Vinol. It was a wonderful help to the child, breaking up her cold quickly and building up her strength beside. I have also found Vinol a most excellent tonic for keeping up the children's strength during a siege of whooping cough."

Vinol is a wonderful combination of two world-famed tonics—the medicinal body building elements of cod liver oil and iron for the blood, therefore it is a perfectly safe medicine for children, because it is not a patent medicine, everything in it is printed on every package, so mothers may know what they are giving their little ones.

Therefore we ask every mother of a weak, sickly or ailing child in this vicinity to try Vinol on our guarantee.

P. S. Our Sazo Salve is truly wonderful for Eczema. We guarantee it. Robert W. Jones, Druggist, Walton.

He is of no practical benefit to the community, and in reality he is but a nuisance to society. A spendthrift eventually develops into that class who cannot meet their bills. But this is to be expected—they really can't help it; it is the human condition; nature will out in everything, and bad habits are the hardest thing in the world from which to break away. The time comes when their money is spent, they can't break the habit of extravagance, and they become a continual credit loss to the grocer, the butcher and the baker, and you, the hard working, toiler, must stand the burden of their peccadillo.

The Spendthrift.

A spendthrift in the world's busy whirl never makes one real friend or commands the respect of anyone not even his own particular kind. The Lambless Ewe.

If a ewe loses her lamb she should be required to mother a lamb of another ewe that has twins or is unable to supply her lamb with enough milk. Many ewes can be induced to adopt a lamb if time and patience is exercised. Remove the skin from her own dead lamb and place it on the lamb to be adopted by her. Since she knows her lamb by tender and not by sight this method will be effective in many cases. The old skin may be removed in a day or two.

Good Roads.

There is only one right solution of the road problem and that is the construction of permanent roads. Every road built wholly or in part with funds provided by the state or federal government should have a life equal to the life of the bonds issued to raise the money to pay for them. The foundation, bridges, culverts and raising wall at least should have such durability. Otherwise future generations will find themselves doubly burdened in paying these old bonds and at the same time raising money for the rebuilding of the roads. The use of bitumen or tar for binding in place of water increases the life of the macadam roads and allays the dust nuisance, but does not provide a real, permanent road because such binders undergo chemical changes and disintegrate in time. The bituminous road is an improvement on the ordinary water bound highway, however, particularly for light traffic. The first requirement of a permanent road is a foundation which will sustain heavy loads and which will not be affected by frost and water. All though roads are very large consumers of population should be built strong enough to sustain ordinary city traffic, because intercity traffic motor trucks and motor stages will be the chief next quarters century, especially at distance of 100 miles or less. Such traffic is becoming an economic necessity because of freight congestion on the railroads and the requirement of long haul traffic. Concrete appears to be the best and cheapest foundation material. In fact, no other material is needed to make good roads.

Fashion Hints.

The butterfly is still dominant. Hats for little girls are of the bonnet shape. Scotch plaids are fashionable for children. There is a revival of ostrich feather trimmings. Leopard is the favorite fur for the motor wrap. New handbags are of silk embroidered with beads. The high school girl is wearing the tan o'shanter hat. Flowers for the hair and corsage are made of ribbon. The chrysanthemum is favored flower for corsage wear. Modified Norfolk suits are being worn by the older school girls. All the winter wraps show the upward movement in the draping. Metal woven tissues continue to attract attention for evening wear. A Ribbon broadened with velvet ties are among the novelties. New colors are russet brown, bronze grey, foster green, and mahogany. Underwear is daintier than ever. Never was there so much silk worn. A few new sweaters of shetland or argona have collars and cuffs of fur.

Short Paragraphs.

Every time woman changes her mind she also alters her views. Poets and children tell the truth, and generally at the wrong time. There are also as good compliments as ever were fished for. In these days of tainted money there seems to be a difference between spotted cash and spotless cash. Some men are proud of having descended from their ancestors and others boast of having risen above theirs. Some fellows will propose to a girl on their knees, and some on their uppers. Seventeen states require the teaching of agriculture in their high schools. In 1910 1,800 high schools in the country gave such instruction, and this number has been greatly increased in the intervals since. The usual salary for teachers of agriculture who devote all their time to the work is $1,200 per year.

A balanced ration means a balance on the right side of the ledger. Clover, cattle and corn silage makes a good combination. Good silage in winter and good pasture in summer make green feed the year round.—G. R. Bliss.

California's cantaloupe crop is taking on the appearance of an early season and with favorable weather conditions will be the largest in the history of that industry in California, and the shipments are expected to reach 6,500 cars. The acreage is 89.32.

Notice the Beds on "Thornhill" Wagons

The beds of "Thornhill" wagons are designed and finished with excessive care. The sides are made of first class poplar, because it holds paint better and gives better service. The bottom of the beds are of Southern pine tongue and grooved and reinforced over front and rear bolsters. A system of construction is employed that prevents the reinforcing from ever falling out and insures longest wear. Throughout the "Thornhill" Wagon, you will find the features that have proved themselves worthy. The long sleeve malleable skin (non-breakable) prevents the axle from breaking at the skin. The strength of the bolsters is multiplied by the construction employed. The front board plate is so made that the gears can never get out of line. You will find in this wagon six big points of superiority that no other wagon possesses. Come in and let us show you the "Thornhill" wagon sold on a guarantee. Do it to-day.

WALTON, KENTUCKY

About all the spiteful remarks possible have been made about the performance of the recent legislature.

The legislature and the road law are six of one and a half dozen of the other when it comes to pleasing the people.

The tobacco growers in the southwestern part of the State are engaged in an effort to have the acreage reduced this year.

Ninety-five bills were passed by the last legislature, only fifty-three members getting bills thru. The 1912 session passed 140 bills.

The United States soldiers tried their marksmanship on a band of Mexicans who disregarded a warning and shot across the line a few days ago.

A blood stained lock of Abraham Lincoln's hair and several other relics were willed to the Metropolitan museum by the late James Grant Wilson.

Many of the jailers in the state are protesting the new law providing for the working of county convicts on the road. They want the Governor to veto it.

Bros. Peak and Bell, of the Trimble County Democrat broke their large newspaper press last week and had to fall back on the old time hand press to get their paper out.

Gov. McCreary was not long in letting the members of the legislature know that he would not call a special session unless they might have an opportunity to draw pay for wasting more time.

Just as soils differ for agricultural purposes, so they differ for roads, says the roads experts of the Department of Agriculture. Clay or soils of fine texture easily make poor roads, especially if they contain much vegetable matter, the coarser soils, however which contain some sand or gravel will often make very satisfactory roads for light traffic provided they are kept in proper repair. If the road is composed of fine clay or soil, it will some times pay to regrade it with top soil from an adjacent field which has sand or gravel mixed with it. This method called the top-soil method, is now in successful use in Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia, and probably in other States.

It is a great mistake, say the road specialists to put the top-soil of the earth road off until August or September. The surface is then baked dry and hard. It is not only difficult to work but is unsatisfactory work when done. Earth which is loose and dry will remain dusty as long as the dry weather lasts and then turn to mud as soon as the rains begin. By using the road machine in the spring of the year while the soil is soft and damp, the surface is more easily shaped and soon packs down into a dry hard crust which is less liable to become dusty in summer or muddy in winter.

Repairs to roads should be made when needed, and not once a year after the crops are "laid by." One day's labor, judiciously distributed throughout the year will accomplish more and better work in the maintenance of an earth road than the same amount of labor expended in six days, especially if the six days are in August, September or October when the ground is hard and dry.

Parcel Post and the Railways.

The passing of the United States Express Company marks the progress of the parcel post.

The old system gives way to the new and the methods of the nineteenth century are found insufficient for the needs and conveniences of the people living in the present one.

The institution which represented the life organizing powers of Thomas C. Platt and stood as a wealth producer for that keen and aggressive money-maker, R. H. Harriman, proved ineffective before the more powerful organization conducted by the United States Government, and the mint of the late Mr. Harriman, in competition with Uncle Sam, could coin but losses instead of profits.

The parcel post now occupies the field of parcels delivery, and as month after month goes by will extend its operations and will become the great common carrier for the parcels of the nation and in conjunction with similar systems in foreign countries the world's carrier and distributor.

It is a revolution in business that the parcel post has already effected, for it has brought the city stores, shops and markets of the republic to the doors of the farmers' homes, and it has placed the products of the farms at the direct order of residents of the cities and towns.

It has added millions of tons annually to the mails carried by the railroads of the country, and as noted in the withdrawal of the United States Express Company it has reduced the receipts of these same railway companies thru the decline in the express traffic. There is no new system of honesty and the oldest and the latest definitions of the word and its application alike require that the Government compensate fully and reasonably the railways that render the service for the admirable and beneficial service they are rendering

ECLIPSE OF THE MOON

As Reported By a Lawrenceburg Observer on River Bank.

Following is a description of the recent eclipse of the moon as reported by the Lawrenceburg Press: "The eclipse of the moon which took place Wednesday night of last week as announced by the almanacs, newspapers and other authorities was a complete success and entirely satisfactory in every particular.

"It was almost total, but not quite. It would have been total if the right hand rim had been entirely covered.

"The eclipse started about two hours after the steamer City of Cincinnati going down landed at the new wharfeat and lasted right onto midnight. Some say the exact time as shown by the town clock was 11:44, but it takes a good eye to figure things down that fine when you are looking at the moon.

"When the eclipse began the moon was above Stevens Bros. tobacco barn which is located at most in the northeast corner of Petersburg precinct, Boone county, Kentucky.

"Gradually the lunar satellite moved southward and upward as the shadow moved across its face. "When the eclipse was at its greatest it was over the haunted house on the hillside which burned down the year after Bryan lost the second time. Along toward midnight, as heretofore stated, when the eclipse was all over, the moon was shining in full refuge directly above Hart man's cow pasture near the ferry landing and was flooding all this portion of the earth with its radiant and transcendent beauty.

"A man who formerly lived in Polkton, but who does not live there now because he has moved away from there, always believed that if an eclipse came early in the year the potato crop would be poor, and that if one came in the fall it would bring bad luck bare in killing time.

"But another man says he has seen more than a hundred eclipses of the moon and he never knowed nothin' to happen from any of them.

"Which, let us hope, will prove to be the case in this instance."

Sowing Clover.

In many portions of the country which are not suited to the growing of alfalfa or where farmers have not got on the way of growing it, clover must be relied upon as the best means of keeping up the fertility of the soil. The present spring ought to be a good one to sow clover generously as the seed costs but a little over one-half what it has for several years past, the price for local retail markets being about $1 per bushel. In securing a good stand of clover there are several things that should be kept in mind. One of these is being sure that the clover seed to be used is good seed—that is, that it does not contain the seeds of foul or noxious weeds, and the clover seed itself of good vitality that will grow. The point that seed that is accompanied by a trustworthy guarantee. The matter of germinating power can easily be determined by placing a given number of the seed in the folds of a moistened cloth laid on a plate and keeping in a room where the temperature is about 60 degrees F. In the course of a few days the good seed will have sprouted. If there is a germination of 80 per cent the seed may be called good seed. Another important factor in clover success is a sweet soil. If there is any tendency to sourness, and this can be determined by the use of blue litmus paper, it should be corrected by the application of lime, either in the form of ground lime stone or slacked lime. Another respect in which many fall down is the proper preparation of the seed bed. This should be fine and mellow and rolled if there is likely to be scarcity of moisture. To still further insure a stand of clover it is well to sow an early maturing nurse crop—early oats or barley—and the clover plants will have the better chance if the nurse crop is seeded light.

Hear a tack hammer, Tuesday.
March has not overdone itself in the way of good weather.

The local K. of P. lodge had a big time last Saturday night.

The weather so far this week has been all that could be desired.

Reuben Hager crossed the line last Friday and he is now a voter.

A cold wind made Sunday a very disagreeable day. Some snow fell in the afternoon.

Roads dry up rapidly at this time of the year under the persuasive influence of the sun.

In a few days moving will begin in earnest, and many people will change their places of abode.

Smallpox appeared last week in a railroad camp of fifty negroes near Dry Ridge, Grant county.

You want to read all the advertisements this week as they are full of useful information for you.

There will be preaching at the Christian church at Bullitsville, Sunday the 29th inst., at the usual hours.

In less than a month from this date the umps will be on their job again, and the base ball fans will be happy.

Lawrenceburg is on the map again as a river town, a new wharf boat having been installed there recently.

Prof. Everett Dix was too ill with cold several days last week to teach, and Miss Pauline Kelly subbed for him.

Rev. Edgar Riley began moving to his new home last Monday. His mother and brother, Milton, have been assisting him.

So far this office has no information as to the planting of any Irish potatoes in this county during the month of March.

The roll will be called at the local Baptist church the fourth Sunday in April, and the presence of all the members is desired.

If the nice weather, which was only a few days during groundhog winter, was borrowed, his hogship, hapless permission to repudiate the debt.

In another column in this issue will be found a few "incongruous" remarks on the part of the State press in regard to the recent legislature.

The Ohio County News of January 29th, last, published in Rising Sun, reached this office on the 19th inst., having been 49 days making the trip. That's going some slow.

Spring was due to arrive last Saturday and its delay is attributed to blowing the few days before resulting from coming in contact with a ten inch snow in southern Kentucky and Tennessee.

C. C. Roberts and wife and daughter, Miss Sheba, and county clerk W. R. Rogers and sister, Miss Lizzie, attended the funeral of Mrs. Julia Peak at Salem last Monday. Mrs. Peak was an aunt of Mrs. Roberts.

Farmer Bert Berkshre, who resides out on the Bellevue pike, was speculating in hens' eggs, as a side line when he had weather when he could not work on the farm. He confined his activities to Burlington grocers.

Sheriff Cropper is sending special invitations to those whose names were drawn out of the jury wheel at the last term of the circuit court to attend the next term which commences on the second Monday in April.

The gardening season is near at hand and Congressmen are making the lives of rural mail carriers miserable by their generous distributions of garden seeds, large sacks of which have commenced showing up at the rural postoffices.

Thirty years ago last Sunday night the court house at Cincinnati was destroyed by fire as an evidence of the peoples disapproval of a verdict rendered in a murder trial. The city was in a state of anarchy a few days following the fire.

BOONE COUNTY RANKS HIGH.

The U. S. Census Shows Boone Is One Of The Leaders When It Comes To Education.

While census reports are usually regarded as being rather dry reading matter, I have discovered some very interesting facts in the census abstract just received from Congressmen Campbell and Jefferson. I was interested to note that Campbell county contains fewer illiterates according to population than any county in the State, the percentage of illiteracy being only 1.9 per cent. Kenton is second with 2.7 per cent. while Boone is third with 4.1 per cent. Jefferson county is fourth in the list with an illiteracy rate of 5.8 per cent. It will be seen that Boone is a top notcher on education. Jefferson, Kenton and Campbell contain the three largest cities in the State, this fact giving them a good showing, but old Boone, with a few railroads, many tollgates and mud roads and no citizens, is in the Big Four and at that ahead of county in which Louisville is situated.

Counting all persons between the ages of ten and twenty the illiteracy percentages are as follows: Kenton 5.1 per cent; Campbell, 8 per cent; Jefferson 13 per cent; Boone 17 per cent. Still on the band wagon, Rowan county is said to have banished illiteracy practically from her borders. Boone isn't so far behind her after all, and she has not got much advertising from it either.

That Old Maple Tree.

Under the head, "A Disappearing Race," the following appears in the Toledo, Ohio, Blade, of the 18th inst:

The maple tree that for many years furnished fine shade during summer at Kelly's corner, was removed last week, it having died, being a victim of the locusts. It made a hard struggle for existence, but the frequent application of steel proved fatal.—Burlington (Ky.) Recorder.

Down in Kentucky, there is naturally a feeling of regret at the conservation of shade trees than in that of whittlers, the stock of jack-knife engravers in that region not yet knocking meekly to the brutal laws against destruction of property. It is a way with states to be wasteful until their resources are all except exhausted.

The day was when Ohio had its own noble race of whittlers. They whittled their way through telegraph poles with the same calm efficiency with which they whittled off a cheek-full of eating tobacco. While the woodpeckers drummed away at the roof of a railroad station, other industrious artisans cut shunks and sections out of the platforms and the benches and baggage trucks. The hitching rails around the public squares of many Ohio towns were made marvels of ornament by the armies of whittlers. You could judge the popularity of grocery stores by the evidence of workmanship left by the whittlers. We once had the honor of acquaintance with a rural banker who settled the cruet of his business while reducing sticks to smooth and perfect shavings. Heaven knows how disastrous would have been the financial earthquake in that community had some mischievous person stolen the banker's pocketknife or shut off his supply of pine wood.

But the whittlers of Ohio are gone, or going. The automobile has caused the banishment of the horse rail. The tyrant railroads hold their stations of brick. Jackknives are not what they were. Oppressive laws are enforced. Even school desks are respected. The whittlers' better treat its native artists kindly while yet it may. The race has all but whittled away its last wooden awning post.

Last week the court of appeals reversed the judgment of the Boone circuit court in the case of Rankins vs. Menefee. Rankins and Menefee are doctors located at Walton, this county, and a few years ago Rankins bought Menefee out, Menefee signing a contract to not practice medicine in Walton. (The months Rankins and Menefee formed partnership for the practice of medicine. In a short time the firm dissolved and Menefee continued to practice notwithstanding the first contract he had entered into with Rankins. Rankins brought suit against Menefee, enjoining him from the practice of medicine at Walton and asking that he be compelled to comply with the contract in which he had agreed to not practice there. The case was heard in Boone circuit court which adjudged that the first contract was binding on Menefee, perpetuated the injunction and gave Rankins a judgment for $350 damages against Menefee for the violation of the first contract. It was this judgment the court of appeals reversed last week which saved to Menefee the $350 and restores to him the right to continue in the practice of medicine at Walton.

Notice—Pomona Grange will meet at Excelsior Grange Hall Saturday, March 28th. If you show a bill against Boone Corn Show Association, send the bill to the undersigned, that he may be able to have his books ready to report at the next Pomona Grange meeting.

THE INFLUENCE OF GOOD ROADS ON HEALTH.

A Point in Their Favor That Has Not Received Much Attention.

The influence of good roads on public health is a point in their favor that has not received much attention. The Kansas State board of health puts the feature in the foreground and wants modern improved roads in that state because they prevent disease. They do this because they afford drainage. A good road can never remain a good road unless it is well drained. The roadbed must not have any standing water either on its surface or below the surface. It must have drainage, and the gutters beside the road must have slope and be kept free from obstruction so that all surplus water can escape quickly and easily.

An old fashioned, ill drained road, with its frequent pools of standing water on the road or by the roadside, with its ditches filled with weeds, brush and all sorts of trash, is a breeding place of life. Mosquitoes, flies and other insects, such as chinch bugs and grasshoppers, multiply there in profusion. It is these insects which either carry disease or are of the kind which destroy the farmer's crops. For these reasons well built, well drained highways are a double benefit, since they give the farmer the inestimable advantage of easy communication with his market at all times of the year and by improving the hygienic conditions of the farming community.

Good roads, mean, therefore, not only a great saving of time and labor for the farmer, but the improvement in the hygienic conditions of the farming community. He is brought nearer to his market, the hauling capacity of his teams is greatly increased, and he is no longer marooned on his farm for many weeks each year owing to the impassable condition of the roads. That health is promoted as a comfort and wealth by good roads should give the argument for their construction irresistible force so that their building shall not cease until the whole country is lined with them.

BOTH PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Items of More or Less Interest That Concern the Beliefs of the "Best Families."

The engagement is announced of Miss Tuttle Show, daughter of Mrs. Hoaleigh Show, to Mr. William Martingale Yuceless, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Worsen Yuceless.

Mr. Worsen Yuceless, by the way, comes of a good old family. They have always been fashionable. His uncle, G. How-Worsen Yuceless, is an intellectual man, having written the society notes for a fashion paper nearly a whole season. And his son, Martingale, once took a prize at a horse show.

It is rumored that Miss Tootoo Kyling has broken her engagement to Mr. Dedleigh Bohr. But Dedleigh seemed quite cheerful last Saturday at his club.

It is whispered that the F. Spending-Spendars are not so happy together as they might be. Our readers will remember that Mrs. Spendar was the charming Miss Freeke, a noted belle of Boston. Mr. Spendar is more than attentive to Mrs. Jimmy Overload, while Mrs. Spendar is constantly seen with the young duke of Borro and Keape. He comes of an ancient family. A greater part of this last season he was a visitor at Koopon Cliffs, the summer home of the F. Spending-Spendars.

Mrs. Leeds Thegang is preparing for an active social season. She is now visiting her sister, Mrs. P. de V. Blasee Rounders. Their charming cousin, Mrs. McVoy Ondek, returns from Europe Saturday on the Nausea or is it the Crown Princessen von Götter Damerung? Time will tell—Life.

SOCIOLOGIST NOW IN DEMAND

Many People Willing to Employ Her, but She Seems Somehow to Have Lost Interest.

The female sociologist, as a commercial asset, is experiencing a bull market.

"She is actually in demand as a maid of all work," said the manager of an employment agency. "Times have changed in that respect."

"Not so very long ago the application of a social worker for a nice, interesting job, where she could study the habits of heartless employers and get points for a magazine article, placed me metaphorically between the devil and the deep sea. If I didn't get her a situation, she wrote me up as an oppressor of honest labor, and if I did get her one, her employers, when they found out what she was up to, got after me and I lost their patronage."

"But people want sociologists for servants now. Here is a bunch of letters from a dozen women, asking if I have any settlement workers in need of a job. They claim that with all her faults of snooping around and trying to reform the universe, the sociologist is the most thorough, the most systematic, the most trustworthy housemaid that can be found."

"Unfortunately, now that she is wanted, the sociologist has lost all ambition to shine as a slave. I have telephoned to every settlement house in town, but it appears that social workers are primed with all the facts they need for the present, for not one can I find that will take a place."—New York Times.

Had No Objection.

Night was approaching and it was raining hard. The traveler dismounted from his horse and rapped at the door of the one farmhouse he had struck in a five-mile stretch of traveling. No one came to the door.

As he stood on the doorstep the water from the eaves trickled down his collar. He rapped again. Still no answer. He could feel the stream of water coursing down his back. Another spell of pounding and finally the head of a lad of twelve was stuck out of the second-story window.

"Watcher want?" It asked.

"I want to know if I can stay here over night," the traveler answered testily.

The red-headed lad watched the man for a minute or two before answering.

"Ye kin fer all of me," he finally answered, and then closed the window.

Friendship.

A little boy got out of bed wrong one morning and was so hateful all day that his father finally found it necessary to punish him.

A little while after the ordeal was over his mother found him out back of the barn tenderly caressing and petting an old ram that was pastured there. Her heart was touched by this display of kindness on his part and she watched him tenderly for some time. Then, walking over to where he sat, she inquired:

"What makes my little boy so good to the old sheep?"

"He did not stop or look up but answered, stifling a sob:

"Cause he just butted pa."

Spanish Illiteracy.

In thousands of villages and small towns in the interior of Spain no one knows how to read or write. There are in Spain 20,000 rural villages without schools of any kind, and many thousands which can only be reached by a bridge path, there being no high roads nor railway communication of any kind, says Herald de Madrid. Attendance at these schools is voluntary, not obligatory. Seventy-six per cent of the children in Spain are ignorant, and this is especially noticeable in the capital.

VALUE OF SMALL MILK SHED

Should Be Well Ventilated in Summer and Warm in Winter—Have Room for One Cow.

(By M. A. COVERDELL)

Every farmer should build a small shed or compartment of some kind in which to stand the cows at milking time. The nearer the barn the better. It should be well ventilated in the summer and made warm during the winter months by setting up fodder around it or lining it with building paper or roofing material.

The shed may be any size desired, but ample room for one cow is all that is necessary. Have nails arranged on the wall for hanging milk pails in places of safety while the cows are being led to and from the shed.

If there are any sore teats, caked udders or other ailments to be treated the milk shed offers a safe place in which to do it quickly and any trouble with the animal's head will cause no disturbance among the other members of the herd. Spraying solution is also easier applied in the shed than anywhere else.

Where one feeds the cows at milking time the milk shed removes the difficulty of feeding the cow that is being milked in sight of the other animals. Some cows will fret and worry away a large portion of their milk if another cow is being fed in sight or hearing of them. Then, feeding the cow in the milk shed makes it unnecessary to use so many feed troughs.

By keeping it well cleaned out and properly drained the milk shed is always ready to lead the cow into and milk under agreeable and sanitary conditions. If it be in the summer time the shed may be darkened and the peaky flies thus gotten rid of, which means a lot of solid comfort to both the cow and the milker as well as a greater amount of milk. With proper ventilation such a shed is also much cooler than the sweltering dairy barn where the animal's breath combined with the heat of their bodies contribute liberally toward the maintenance of a high temperature.

CARING FOR MILK PROPERLY

Two Great Factors—Cleanliness and Temperature—Expose All Utensils to Sunshine.

Cleanliness and temperature are the two great factors in keeping milk sweet. The fresh-drawn milk is almost free from bacteria until it becomes contaminated during the milking process or while waiting the start for delivery. To keep them out is not so easily accomplished as the general public imagines. The smallest particles will fall into the pail, even with painstaking care and the best that can be done is to use a sanitary milk pail which should be covered as much as possible and to brush the cow and udder before milking.

In order to free the milk from the animal heat, it is necessary to aerate and cool at once and pointing at a low temperature thus preventing bacteria starting, for it takes but three per cent of lactic acid to start the souring process.

Frequent scalding and exposing to sunshine of all milk utensils and machinery are of vital importance in keeping milk sweet—Farmer's Wife.

CONVENIENT TRUCK IN BARN

Dairyman Cannot Well Afford to Ignore Anything That Will Tend to Lighten Labors.

No dairyman can afford to ignore that which will lighten his labor in any way whatever. Be his stable ever so conveniently constructed, he has enough to do. Hence the importance of his considering the truck or car presented in the cut, for which we are indebted to an exchange. Made of good lumber, the only iron about Dairy Barn Truck.

It is the handle at each end by which to draw or push it, and the straps which are screwed against the ends, engage the ends of the axle outside the wheels and are screwed flat against the bottom of the truck.

Fat Content of Milk.

The percentage of fat in the cow's milk is determined by two things—first, the breed, and second, the individuality. The milk flow may be stimulated by feed, but the fat content cannot be affected under normal conditions.

Cow Essential.

It is just as essential to know how to keep a cow at her best in milk production as it is to know how to build her up to her full capacity.

NEW REVOLUTION

Catawba Valley, N. C. Had a Peaceful But Powerful Awakening

STARTED WITH $1,500 NOTE

Buckwheat Valley, Wisconsin, Becomes Prosperous Through Cooperation—What the Conference To Be Held in Louisville Really is For.

A program built with experts from the various departments of the State and National Government, is naturally quite an easy matter. To go out over the country and find people who are really doing things in their own communities, is quite another proposition.
This has been the task which the men who are handling the Conference for Farmers and Business Men have set for themselves this year.

Walter J. Shuford, North Carolina.

One of the most interesting men of this type in the whole United States is Walter J. Shuford, of Hickory, N. C.
He is one of those men who evidently dreams wonderful dreams, then rolls up his sleeves and works hard to make those same dreams come true. Way down in North Carolina Mr. Shuford saw how his friends and neighbors were limping through life on a worn-out soil that would not seemingly supply their wants. At last he found the man he needed in Field Agent Conover, and they began work to interest a group of men in a dairy proposition.
From a start that was made with a $1,500 joint promissory note with which to finance the creamery, it has grown year after year until last October, the total sales amounted to over $10,000. And it seems from the way in which things are growing that their co-operative organization will soon be handling a business that will total about $500,000 a year.

One might well wonder about what has happened down in Catawba Valley in that Tarheel country, but it is enough to say that this man has changed the attitude and viewpoint of a county through his own enthusiasm.
He will be in Louisville during the Conference, April 7-8-9-10, to tell his own story and to demonstrate the methods that he used to organize and develop this tremendous business.

FAT OF THE LAND

Seven years ago Buck Wheat Valley in Wisconsin was almost bankrupt.
Two-thirds of her property was held in mortgages and the young people were drifting toward the city. Wheat, which in the early days had yielded 50 bushels to the acre, had dwindled to 15, and it was because of this that the people had to substitute buck wheat, hence the name of the Valley.

Seven years ago Mr. William Head and Mr. Grover began organizing the people about the LaVale for developing the creamery work and standardizing the potato crop. To-day there is hardly a mortgage in this neighborhood, the homes are painted, new barns are being built, silos stand as sentinels all over the country. Mr.
Head and Mr. Grover will be in Louisville April 7-8-9-10, to tell how they lifted Buck Wheat Valley out of bankruptcy into plenty.

A GETTING TOGETHER

The seventeenth annual Conference of Farmers and Business Men which is to meet in Louisville, April 7-8-9-10, is a rather unique organization. It has absolutely no constitution or by-laws, no dues or conditions of membership. It is a loosely put together organization, which can easily shift its viewpoint or change its policy with the growth and temper of the people making up the membership for that particular year. It began its existence under the Southern Educational Board, which pays all the bills, and its President for sixteen years was that remarkable merchant of New York City, Mr. R. C. Ogden. He was one of those unusual men who can see not only the future in his own business, but also the future in other lines of activity. It has been the policy of this movement not to dictate what any meeting should do, but merely help the group that "got together" to find themselves and solve their own problems.

Black Leg in Cattle.

To the Editor:—I notice in a recent issue of your paper that black leg among cattle was prevalent in some localities where the paper is read. It is not necessary to have that disease at all if stock raisers will watch the droppings where cattle bed. Thoroughly mix them when the droppings are hard and break off in flakes with streaks of blood or slime in them. The best way to do this is to use a good preventive. Use as much air-slack lime as salt, with a single hand-grab of wheat bran, thoroughly mixed. Then give a single hand-grab of the mixture to each member of the herd at the regular salt-ing place. Do this as often as the cattle are salted, which should be once a week. Then watch the droppings. No more hard, flaky, blood or slime, but all will be thin.

This is not hearsay or read out of some medical book, but actual experience. I got it from an old North Carolina negro, who had been a slave. He said they lost nearly all the young cattle on his master's plantation, until they got the above remedy. I was foreman in a coal company's farm in West Virginia, where we lost forty per cent of all yearling and two-year-old cattle. I got vaccine from the government and used it to good effect, but lost one good year. I was burning it, when the old darker passed and gave me the above remedy. I went to look for the droppings and found them as correct as I was buying and selling all the time it made lots of butter to get vaccine and vaccinate, so I tried the darker's plan and kept it up for two and one-half years and never lost another head, nor did I see a sign of blackleg.

For years before I went on the farm the owner had lost about 40 per cent of all the cattle between one and two years old. The remedy keeps the stomach open and clear. The disease is not always in the legs but may be in any part of the body.

The above is a preventive which is better than a cure. It does not hurt the fattening of the cattle. I have seen them lick the mixture and then rub the nose on the ground as if it satisfied them.
I have seen them drink, which was good for them. If anyone reads this and doubts it they can write me, I got it free and give it free.—S. M. Talbott, Harpman, O.

Farmers and Farm Lands.

Speaking to a convention of land men in Minnesota recently, organized to induce farming development, James J. Hill told the assembled delegates there was altogether too much farming done with the mouth and too little done with the fist. "Get busy," said Mr. Hill, "and farm the land, thereby proving what it is capable of doing; then people will come and buy it." Mr. Hill's advice is good, for seeing is believing, and lands of demonstrated value for productive purposes are not hard to sell.
But Minnesota has enormous areas of undeveloped land and if her experience is like that of other States the farmers are not getting any fair return, but the farmers now being operated—at least the majority are not.
The farmer who runs his farm economically and intelligently usually gets a fair return, but the most of the farmers are not making the most of their opportunities. Many of them are quitting the farms and moving to the cities to take up other vocations.
The land cannot be farmed, as Mr. Hill advises, unless there are farmers to farm it. The men who made up the land convention, he may be assured, are not going to do much actual farming. It is their business to farm the farmer rather than the land. They are emphatically of the class which does its farming "with the mouth." They are right, however, in their immigration and in advertising their State, and this way they can sell their land if they offer it at reasonable prices and terms and they will attract many farmers of small means but of great value to the State.
There is no scarcity of land, but there is a scarcity of farmers who are able to buy it. There is no lack of persons who want land, but many of these persons are without means to purchase. There are some millions of tenant farmers in this country and most of them would like to own farms.
If the Minnesota land men can develop a plan by which they can enable their lands on the market on long time and small payments they should be able to sell them, without any demonstration work such as Mr. Hill has recommended.

A few shelled oats, feed meal and condition powders with a good curry comb and brush will put the work stock in better condition for spring.

Backache

Miss Myrtle Cothrum, of Russellville, Ala., says:
"For nearly a year, I suffered with terrible backache, pains in my limbs, and my head ached nearly all the time. Our family doctor treated me, but only gave me temporary relief. I was certainly in bad health. My school teacher advised me to TAKE

Cardui

I took two bottles, in all, and was cured. I shall always praise Cardui to sick and suffering wo-pains peculiar to weak ache, backache, or other symptoms of womanly trouble, or if you merely need a tonic for that tired,

Wayman, pastor of the Walton Baptist church, who has been attending the Baptist Theological College at Louisville, has been offered the pastorate of churches at Owensboro, Glasgow, LaGrange, the first named paying a salary of $2,400 per annum. We all regret to see him and his family leave here.

Rev. Kohler, pastor of the Walton-Christ church, will deliver his farewell sermon here Sunday, March 29th, as he has resigned the pastorate of the church to take work elsewhere. His subjects will be: Morning—"Prayer and Natural Law." Evening—"The Great Conqueror." Rev. This community was greatly shocked and saddened last Friday by the very sudden death of Mrs. Julia Peak who died at her home near Walton Friday night. Mrs. Peak had been as well as usual, but in the evening she complained of feeling poorly and had a violent fit of gagging. Her son Finell Peak came to town and got some medicine for her ailment, and she retired for the night, but later her daughter Mrs. Peak was awakened by her heavy breathing and found her in the arms of the family, but in a short time Mrs. Peak was dead.

The deceased was about 71 years old and was born and reared in this section, and was beloved by all for her kindly disposition and charitable nature. Her maiden name was Finell, and her husband died many years ago. She leaves a number of grown children, and many relatives all of whom sorrow over her death. The funeral took place Monday morning at Old Salem Baptist church, of which she was a member. Rev. John S. Steers of Dry Ridge, conducting the services, after which the internment took place in the cemetery at Salem.

The case of Dr. B. K. Menefee vs. Dr. G. C. Rankins was decided in the Court of Appeals last Thursday in favor of Dr. Menefee. The controversy grew out of a partnership of the two gentlemen. Dr. Rankins who came from Mason county, purchased the practice and office equipment from Dr. Menefee, and the latter then prepared to leave Walton, the stipulation of the purchase being that the contract of partnership of the business of Dr. Menefee being that he would not practice at Walton or within a certain radius. On account of some other features later, Dr. Rankins prevailed on Dr. Menefee going into partnership with him for the practice of medicine in this locality, and after continuing for some time a disagreement arose which resulted in a dissolution of the firm. Dr. Menefee then began practice, and Dr. Rankins demanded that the original sale contract be observed and that Dr. Menefee should not practice in Walton or vicinity. Dr. Menefee claimed that the contract of partnership nullified the original contract and that he was committing no violation of any agreement to continue his practice, whereupon Dr. Rankins brought a suit against Dr. Menefee in the Boone circuit court seeking to enjoin him from further practicing and secured a judgment to that effect. Dr. Menefee appealed the case to the Court of Appeals, and executed a bond in the sum of $1,000 in the case of damages to Dr. Rankins because of the continued practice by Dr. Menefee, and the case being heard before the whole court the lower court was reversed and Dr. Menefee's position sustained. J. G. Tomlin and Jno. L. Vest of Walton, and Harvey Myers, of Covington, and B. F. Menefee of Crittenden were the attorneys for Dr. Menefee, and Chas. Strother of Walton, and W. W. Dickerson, of Cincinnati, represented Dr. Rankins.

Uncle Sam's official farmer at Washington, D. C., says crop prospects for this year are very bright. Wonder if his predictions are any more reliable than those of the official weather man?

After coughing two years

Waycross, Ga., Woman Found Relief in Vinol.

Did you ever cough for a week? Then just think how distressing it must be to have a cough hang on for two years.

Mrs. D. A. McGee, Waycross, Ga., says: "I had a very heavy cold which settled into a chronic cough which kept me awake nights for fully two years, and felt tired all the time. The effect of taking your cod liver and iron remedy, Vinol, is that my cough is gone. I can now get a good night's rest and I feel much stronger in every way. I am 74 years old."

It is the combined action of the medicinal elements of the cod's livers aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonics which makes Vinol so efficient for chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis at the same time building up the weakened run-down system.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. P. S.—If you have any skin trouble try Sazo-Saive. We guarantee it. Robert W. Jones, Druggist, Walton

RICHHOOD.

On March 14, 1914, at the invitation of our host and hostess we gathered at the home of R. O. Hughes, Richmond community, to make of the hospitality of this home in recognition of the passing of another year for the host.

After spending the morning hours in a social good time we were invited to enjoy the palatable viands so appetizingly and bountifully placed before us; not one of us failed to show our appreciation of the good cooking and our enjoyment of such an hour. The dinner was good enough for a king and the jovialness sufficient to cheer a pessimist. We all noted in an item in last week's issue of the burial here the preceding week of John G. Conner. There was a mistake in the name, which should have been John Comer. Mr. Comer used to live here, so I thought best to correct this mistake.

LANDING.

Again the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Miller was the scene of a very happy occasion, the marriage of Miss Margaret Kite and Wm. R. Feldhaus, Rev. Geo. D. Prentiss, in his characteristic and impressive manner, spoke the last words that made them husband and wife, while Mrs. Geo. D. Prentiss played Lohengrin's wedding march.

The wedding was tastefully decorated, on one side was an arch with a large white bell suspended from the center with beautiful pot plants as a back ground. Under this arch the bride party stood. Immediately after congratulations they were ushered into the dining room where a delightful luncheon was served by the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church, of which Miss Margaret is a worthy member.

Surprise was an excellent toast was presented by Rev. Prentiss and drunk by all to the health of the bride and groom.

The bridegroom is a partner in the late A. F. and Mary Kite, of this place, and is an excellent young woman of high social standing, having all the qualities of a strong and womanly character, being liked and respected by all who have the pleasure of knowing her, and Mrs. Feldhaus is a partner in life which he well merits, he being one of our industrious, moral and gentlemanly young men, and we heartily wish him a happy and prosperous voyage down the stream of conjugal felicity.

The bride was beautifully gown in dark grey silk with trimmings of Persian and net, while the groom wore the conventional black.

In the evening the boys and men serenaded the newly wed with a grand old time charade.

The bride and groom will be at home to their friends at the home of the bride's mother, Tuesday, March 31, to present their friends and relatives.

Parable on Boys.

Verily in this day and generation the father raiseth up his son on the streets and sidewalks. He layeth around the soda founts and imbiber slop and hoodlums. He groweth in knowledge of nothing save cigarettes and cuss words.

When he attains the age of sixteen he acquireth a suit of clothes turned up at the bottom two-furlongs above his feet. He displayeth a pair of noisy socks with purple and blue ground and violet to the front. He weareth low-cut tan shoes, also a green tie. He looketh like a banana merchant on the streets of Cairo.

The inside of his head resembleth the inside of a pumpkin. He lalleth in love with a spindle-shanked girl with pink ribbons in her hair, and craveth for an automobile that he may ride her forth in the spring time. He scattereth his pin money like a cyclone scattered a rail fence. He sitteth up at night to write poetry and giveth no thought to the multiplication table. His mind turneth to the specific requirements of the act. A $3 fee for a license and a tax of 25 cents the room, not to exceed $10 annually are to be collected from hotels for the support of the department.

Verily, verily, he needeth a board applied vigorously to the south-west corner of the anatomy and he needeth a back number. He picturish to himself great riches suddenly acquired. He dreameth of steam yachts and private cars.

Yet, he thinketh himself the real stuff. He butteth in where he is not wanted; he criticiseth his elders; he purchaseth a perfume and smellth louder than a billy goat.

When he groweth up he getteth a job as clerk in a store at $1 a day, and swipeth extra change from his boss till he is caught.

SERVING STEAK "TAIL ENDS"

Part Usually Considered Good for Nothing May Be Made Into Some Delicious Dishes.

One part of food which almost invariably goes to waste is the tail end of steaks. This part of the meat is usually so tough and full of coarse fiber that no one could eat it. Now the wise cook can so disguise these tails that the eater will think it is an entirely novel dish. Besides using these ends on casseroles, they may be chopped in the meat chopper, moistened with onion juice, mixed in with potato, seasoned well, shaped into cones, dipped in egg and cracker crumbs and the despoiled ends of steak will come out triumphantly as most delicious croquettes. When porthouse steak is 28 to 32 cents a pound, it is certainly worth while saving the ends, which often weigh as much as the tender meat itself.

STEPLADDER WITH WHEELS

Handy for Hanging Pictures, Adjusting High Electric Bulbs and in Many Other Ways.

A handy attachment has been devised by an Ohio man. With it, a stepladder need not be folded up every time it is to be moved and then laboriously opened and clamped into position again. Metal sockets fit over the lower ends of the front standards and have extensions in which little wheels are mounted. The cross braces are pivoted together in the middle and their front ends are pivoted to the wheel spindles, while their rear ends hook into the rear standards. When all four standards of the ladder are on the floor it is as firm as any one would want, but by raising the rear legs a trifle the whole structure can be trundled about on the wheels and moved from one room to another with no trouble at all and without affecting its stability.

Easy to Move About.

Mixing Fruits.
When inclined to be dry or tasteless, apples are greatly improved by the addition of other fruits. Grated pineapple and quinces are both good for this purpose, but dried fruits, such as dates, figs and prunes, can also be used with excellent results. The dates should be stoned and cut into quarters before being cooked with the apples, and the figs should be shredded. Prunes must be well washed and allowed to soak in a little cold water before cooking, and, as apples require less cooking than prunes they should not be added before the latter are nearly tender. Very little sweetening, if any, is required when figs, dates and prunes are used with apples.

Banana Penicils.
Two cups of light brown sugar, one cup granulated sugar, moisten with a generous half-cup milk or cream; boil until it forms a ball in cold water; remove from fire, add a tiny piece of butter and one cup diced bananas; then beat till creamy and pour on a greased pan to cool. Mark off or cut in any desired shape. To prepare bananas, strip skin from two large bananas, cut in two lengthwise once and then once more; hold firmly and slice crosswise and measure one cup of the diced bananas.

Very Small Tapioca Pudding.
Heat 1 1/2 cups of milk and turn over the well-beaten mixture of 1/4 cup of sugar, pinch of salt and 1 small egg. Into this turn 1 mixing spoon of soaked (1 dessert spoon) white rice tapioca. Cook until tapioca is clear and soft. Serve with halved candied cherries, 1/4-inch size cubes of chocolate, or cocoa fudge, or dabs of currant jelly upon the top. Any light cake, or sugar cookies will be palatable served with tapioca cream desserts.

Salad Louisiana.
To one pint of shredded celery, finely minced, five oranges and two lemons, diced, add one pint of large straw berries or other fruit, cut in halves which have been put on ice to chill. Beat two egg yolks very light, add one teaspoonful of very fine salt, the juice of two lemons, and lastly, one cupful of strawberry juice poured over the salad just when served.

Fig Filling.
Chop fine one pound of figs and add one-half cup of sugar and one cup of water and stew in a sauce pan over the fire until soft. Add one tablespoonful lemon juice and spread between the layers and ice the whole cake with boiled icing.

Take Care of House-Plants.
Cover the plants in the house with a light cloth while sweeping. The lungs of plants are as easily choked with dust as our own breathing apparatus.

RIGHT METHODS OF BINDING

Strengthening Edges of Material Means Adding Indefinitely to Wearing Power.

Binding is used to strengthen or strengthen the edges of material by means of covering them with strips of the material, tape, ribbon or Prussian binding. The long flannels used for infants are frequently bound with soft silk ribbon.

To sew with the same material as the garment cut sufficient lengths of the material into strips, but all must be of equal breadth.

They must be cut on the straight if you are binding a part that is straight, and a crosswise piece of the material when the edge is curved.

To sew on the strips, first neatly join all the pieces together until you have the required length, fold them lengthways, and make a crease.

Place one edge of the binding strip against the edge of the material on the right side, the wrong side of the binding being uppermost, and run it along about a quarter of an inch from the edge.

Press the seam well with the thumb to make as flat as possible, fold it down exactly at the crease you first made in the middle, and hem it neatly on to the wrong side.

If you are using Prussian binding, tape, or any similar article that has not a raw edge, simply fold it lengthwise in half and make a crease, lay it over the edge to be bound, half on one side and half on the other, tack securely in position, and hem with small stitches, first on the right side and then on the wrong.

Potato Cottage Pudding.
Take half a pound of boiled potatoes, dry and mashed. Beat until they are quite smooth, add a pinch of salt, the grated rind and strained juice of a small lemon, two tablespoons of moist sugar, two ounces of clarified butter or good beef dripping and two well-beaten eggs. Beat the mixture thoroughly, turn it into a buttered dish and bake in a well-heated oven. The flavor of the pudding may be varied by the addition of a few washed and dried currants or an ounce of blanched and pounded almonds or a glass of sherry. Time to bake, three-quarters of an hour. Sufficient for four or five persons.

Convenient for cleaning skillets is a small broom made of stiff wire. All cooked food should be thoroughly cooled before placing in the ice box. All vegetables which are grown under the ground should be cooked with the lid on.
Remnants of fat, cooked or uncooked, should be saved, cooked together and clarified.
When using dates for dessert and drain them; they will be juicier and more palatable.
Never allow the firebox of your range to be more than three-fourths filled. When full the draft is checked. The flesh of all fish out of season is unwholesome. Perfectly fresh fish have clear eyes, red gills and bright scales.
After boiling or frying, if any fat has splattered on the stove, wipe it off with paper immediately and the stove will be clean.
Paint spatter marks can easily be removed from window panes by melting soda in very hot water and washing the glass with it.

Good Omelet.
Beat the yolks of three eggs to a cream and the whites to a stiff froth. Add to the yolks three tablespoons milk or water, one rounded tablespoon finely grated bread crumbs, half teaspoon salt, the yolk of one egg, and white and pour in the omelette mixture. Place on the stove where the heat will be gentle but continuous, occasionally slipping knife under it. When bottom is slightly brown set pan in hot oven for a minute, until top is firm to touch. Fold, garnish and serve.

Fly Specks on Gilt Frames.
To remove fly specks remaining on your picture frames from last summer mix the beaten white of an egg with two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Paint this over a small part of the frame at a time, using a camel's hair brush or other very soft brush. Be as sparing of the fluid as possible, only just moistening the surface. Rub off at once by wiping gently with a bit of soft silk or cotton wool.

To Mend Kid Gloves.
How many have tried to mend a kid glove with electric plaster, or surgeon's plaster, as it is often called? Turn the glove wrong side out, first mending the hole by the hole, if large. In any case the edges ought to be brought together and a bit of the plaster stuck firmly over the hole or rip.

To Wash White China Silk.
When washing China silk never hang it dry, but instead wring it out dry and wring in a piece of white material, leaving it this way for about one hour. Then iron it.

Clean a Willow Chair.
Wash the chair gently with a soft cloth dipped in the following mixture: A pint of warm water in which one tablespoon of baking soda is dissolved.

The Cost of War.

Certain German military experts are contributing articles to the ever-varying journals in that country explaining that the real reason the United States government does not interfere in Mexico is that the military resources of Mexico are superior to those of the United States, and our government might get the worst of it, if the two nations came to blows. These are no doubt the same experts who fourteen years ago figured it out that the United States would find the naval power of Spain a hard nut to crack. This view was widely held in Europe, and it was not confined to the continent. One of the foremost Admirals of the English navy published a statement a few weeks before the engagement at Santiago that the American and Spanish Atlantic fleets were so closely matched in strength that it would be impossible to predict which would be the winner, and that article had hardly reached this country before the Spanish fleet was destroyed, with the loss to the American fleet of but one man.

There is no comparison between the military resources of the U. S. and Mexico, and the European "expert" who undertakes to make one so. The population of the United States is approximately 100,000,000, that of Mexico is 15,000,000. The American army is small, but is splendidly equipped; the regular army of the United States is smaller, and is miserably equipped. This is but a small part of the story, however. The United States can get upon its feet in a matter of hours, and has at its disposal thousands of volunteer soldiers—the best material in the world. The Mexicans, unless something happens to arouse the national feeling, can only get troops by forcibly drafting half starved peasants into the ranks.

Every man with any idea of the situation, knows, therefore, that an American expedition could march to Mexico City and dispossess General Huerta in a few weeks after the beginning of hostilities, but that is a very different thing from "pacifying" the country. The Mexicans come of a stock that fight only indifferently well in the open field, but are dangerous partisans in guerrilla warfare. A century ago the French armies swept Spain from the mountains to the sea in six weeks, and the Spanish army in blood and money in battling with Spanish guerrillas than it cost to subdue the 400,000 men in the standing army of the Austrian Empire.

The pacification of the subjugation of Mexico would be a gigantic undertaking. It required the services of 500,000 English soldiers to subdue the South African Boers, although the latter put in the field less than 50,000 fighting men. The Mexicans might enlist several hundred thousand men in a guerrilla war. In the end the work could be done in Mexico just as surely as it was done in South Africa, but the subjugation might only have a temporary effect in restoring order.

By far the best chance is to give the Mexicans every opportunity to work out their own salvation.—Louisville Post.

Thumb-Nail Sketches.
Lets make 1914 a record breaker on the side of community progress.

If Vic Huerta doesn't hurry up he'll have to head his army in Texas.

A crank is generally an expert in line in which you are not interested.

The Mexicans have no use for jails, as they execute prisoners and save board bills.

Some of the fellows are just waiting for the Santa Fe wagon to turn a sharper corner so they can fall off.

After carefully hiding away the fussy gift calendars, the tired business man goes forth to buy a calendar he can use.

In case of war with Mexico, many prominent citizens express a willingness to enlist to go as far as Palm Beach or Los Angeles.

The Huntington, V. Va., youth, who has just married the seventh time at 31, evidently lives in living up to his past resolutions.

Street car companies are putting on lower steps to accommodate women with narrow skirts, but they neglect to raise the roofs to fit the hat plumes.

When a girl comes out in one of those long coat coats, it is hard to believe her when she says she doesn't want her name in the papers.

Having gnawed its lash, the high cost of living comes panting in, and the poor fellow is wagging its tail as though it, too, belonged in 1911.

The dancing teachers are making a lot of money teaching the new steps. Who says the people will not make sacrifices for the cause of education?

As a result of the "Father and Son Movement," it is hoped that many fathers will be inclined to follow the example of their boys and avoid harmful vices.

The life insurance people want to have people take medical examinations regularly, as nothing contributes so much to long life as knowledge that you have an incurable disease.

NO MORE CHEAP MEAT.

Those who have read with hope of beef boycotts, and those who hoped for a flooded meat market as a result of tariff revision, are told tersely by the Breeders' Gazette that cheap meat is a thing of the past, and none need expect it to return to the markets.

Promises, or prophecies, of cheap meat, are in the opinion of the Breeders' Gazette, "obviously designed to placate consumers whose buying capacity is now taxed to the limit," and "the fact may as well be understood that the meat will never again be as cheap in the sense which they were during the period of surplus production."

The cost of meat-making—the breeder's cost—has enhanced along with the cost of everything included in the comprehensive term "cost of living." It costs more for a steer to be boarded nowadays than it formerly did. The expense of conversion, and distribution is also "upon a lofty basis," and there is scant prospect of reduction.

In the opinion of the Breeders' Gazette promises of cheaper meat are not only wrong because they mislead the consumer, but also because, insofar as they are taken seriously, they discourage the production of beef, pork and mutton. Increasing "the constant menace of increasing scarcity." The price of the choice cut in the butcher's shop and the price on the hoof are pretty wide apart, but that must always be true. Of course, the cost of distribution might be somewhat reduced. The cost of conversion doubtless includes a somewhat unreasonable profit to the converter. Here is a problem of considerable interest. But land is worth twice as much as it was ten years ago—the Government statistics say this—feed is worth much more than it formerly was, farm labor costs one third more in 1914 than it did in 1904. All this means is, really, Nobody wants to see land value shrink or farm products that are used in part as feed fall off in price or labor sustain a cut in wages. And how, these farmers in the production of meat on the hoof will not be secured at a lessened cost.

Tariff revisionists—or some of them—hoped for more radical changes in the cost of dinner table maintenance than can be effected by free admission of commodities. On the other hand, "landsharks" who predicted flooded markets and the pauperization of home labor as a result of any "tinkering" the Democrats might do, are now shouting that steak and mushrooms cost as much today as they did during the Republican supremacy. The market, it is said, to add, has not been flooded. There has been no pauperization of farmers.

If the demonstration of the inability of tariff doctors to pull down the price of meat awakens the home producer to the opportunities that are his we may have a larger production of cattle, sheep and hogs. The cost of the dinner table will not perhaps be directly affected, or greatly affected, but the cost of agriculture would be considerable. A source of profit now too much neglected would be developed, and there would be an increase of welfare in the country which would be reflected in cities.

The price of meat, and the fact that foreign shipments will not cut the price and destroy the profits of breeders, make it plain that range cattle, which once were produced in large numbers upon free or very cheap Western lands, must be reared by animals produced in wider territory and in smaller groups. Tillage that is not strictly scientific depletes soil and causes as someone has said, "the streams to run red with the blood of butchered acres." Cattle, sheep and hogs add to soil fertility. It will be better for agriculture if we have more great cattle raising ranches in the West and when there are many more small breeding enterprises attached from New England to the Pacific coast.

That there will not be, as a result, a return to low prices for meat seems altogether probable, no matter how much it may be to those who are consumers and cannot be interested as much in the profits of production as in the cost of converted and distributed commodities.

Thus Saith the Knocker.

It is easy to see why a woman thinks she has a pretty ankle. Some married men act as if they had been disappointed in love.

A story always has a sad ending if it lands in the waste basket.

The busy bee is all right in his way—but one should keep out of his way.

If a woman could only make herself look as sweet as her retouched photograph!

We always feel sorry for an heiress; she simply has to marry in self-defense.

The sins of omission are more plentiful than sins of commission—because they require less effort.

Every time we hear a man say he loves his enemies or likes to work we are tempted to speak up and say what we think.

The old-fashioned woman who used to care what she wanted acquired a lot more than the modern militant suffragette.—Chicago News.

NOTES from MEADOWBROOK FARM

Don't burn the straw.
Sheep are good foragers.
Hogs suffer for the want of water.

For winter lambs the ewes should be bred in July.

Eggs in winter mean money and the lack of them means loss.

Good roads mean good schools; good schools good citizenship.

Good roads bring the producer and consumer in contact.

Marketing the products of the farm is of equal importance as their production.

In order to obtain eggs it is necessary to have healthy, vigorous stock properly fed.

Butter churned too soft cannot be properly washed and so contains a great deal of buttermilk.

Turkeys should always be allowed free range because they are unprofitable when placed in confinement.

Considerable loss is occasioned on many farms every year by allowing crops to become too ripe before harvesting.

One bushel of oats, four pounds of rape, and a bushel of field peas makes a splendid acre seedling for temporary pasture.

Cement has come to be regarded as one of the cheapest, as well as the best and most durable materials for stable floors.

Regular careful milking permanently improves the animal as a milk producer, aside from directly increasing the milk flow.

Cows should be given all the pure water they can drink, not less than twice a day. It has a decided effect upon the milk production.

A good cold weather protector or storm door for the house, can be made by tacking a piece of oilcloth, muslin or roofing over the screen door.

Before you rid the dairy herd of the "robber cow" make sure that she is having a fair show by being supplied with the proper rations, care and shelter.

There is no better time than now to get rid of the poorer cow. It is too high to waste it on cows that could not pay their board when feed was cheap.

No other farm animal requires so much kindness as the dairy cow. Handling the heifer in a roughshod manner is an excellent way to make an unruly, nervous cow.

The dairy farmer can raise hogs cheaper than anyone else and naturally more important than the cost of feed this makes a better profit for him than on any line.

When we put blinds on the bridle of the nervous horse we only add fuel to the flames. Do not forget this important fact when you go to work that "fool horse" or that "onery cuss."

Your chickens require plenty of air but not of the drafty kind. It is much better to have the whole side of your house open than to have the air streaming in through a knothole.

To prevent bad flavors in butter great care must be used in milking, in handling the milk and cream, and in making the butter. Everything used must be kept in a sanitary condition.

The White Holland turkey although somewhat smaller than the Bronze, is noted as a good layer and economical meat producer, and their feathers are worth considerable more than those from the Bronze.

In developing the pigs for breeding one should handle them rather differently than when he is feeding them for market. Such pigs need feed richer in protein, in other words, more flesh-forming foods.

An acre of soil nine inches deep, if of ordinary fertility, is estimated to weigh about 3,000,000 pounds, and contains about 2,000 pounds of nitrogen, 3,000 pounds of phosphoric acid and 6,000 pounds of potash.

When the new stock sow or boar is received at the farm, put by itself for a month or six weeks at least. If at that time it seems perfectly healthy and has been improving in flesh, it is safe to put it with the other stock. This is a safe preventive of the introduction of disease on the farm.

Don't crowd the poultry.

Deep plowing in the fall.

Rape has a high feeding value.

Lime prevents poultry diseases.

Cotts should be weaned when five months old.

Few hen houses are equipped with enough nest boxes.

Kindness to live stock has a money value often overlooked.

It is best to milk the cows in the barn, even in hot weather.

A good cow should have a good flow of milk ten months out of twelve.

When proper care is exercised the life of a peach tree is from 12 to 15 years.

Good roads in your vicinity add to the selling price of the products of your farm.

The amount of humus in the soil indicates in great measure its richness in nitrogen.

Keep the horses well cleaned, but remember that you can be cruel with the curry comb.

Dispose of all the old unprofitable hens for turkey feed. They will be profit eaters during the winter.

In fattening turkeys, better feed lightly the first ten days, gradually increasing their rations.

Never work a team of colts together unless they are thoroughly broken, as they will worry each other.

A handful of shelled grain is always more effective than a club in inducing a pig to travel where you want it.

The poultry houses must be a scene of constant effort to prevent lice and vermin from this time until spring.

You cannot expect a cow to give large quantities of milk unless she has plenty of feed and quantities of water.

Young trees heeled in over-winter should be in a location where water cannot collect, and stand about the roots.

It is not advisable to keep the late hatched turkey for breeders. The more mature the fowl the better the breeder.

In most localities the building should face the south, as this insures the greatest amount of sunlight during the winter.

It is all right to dehorn calves as soon as the button starts, either with caustic potash or any of the prepared dehorning compounds.

Time spent in clearing up an orchard in the fall of the year will be amply rewarded with better and cleaner fruit the next season.

The young heifer that is not kept growing, that is not kept in good condition during the early months of her life will never make up for it later.

The horse that is all the time being tapped with the whip never knows what his master means by it, and comes to think he means just nothing.

Keep the drinking fountains not only well rinsed out, but from time to time wash off the slime that will accumulate with sand, a rag and warm water.

Wheat makes good hog feed, fully equal pound for pound to corn, but it should be either ground or soaked. The hogs cannot make good use of wheat fed dry.

If you build hoppers to feed your birds in this winter, build them in such a manner that there are no rough protrusions to injure the combs of the birds.

The season for studying the feed ration is at hand. Be sure that you feed your cattle most economically and in such a way that they can make the best use of their feed.

Sheep are very particular about the condition of their feed. They will not touch hay that has been nosed by other stock, neither will they eat grain over which rats or mice have played.

Did you know that one-half of an egg is nutriment while only one-fourth of meat is so? Therefore it is easily seen that one pound of eggs is equal in food value to two pounds of meat.

The value of grains as poultry food, and which they relish the best, are: wheat, oats, corn, barley and buckwheat. Rye is of the least value, and fowls seldom eat it, and then only when very hungry.

Clean out the orchard and plan to let the hogs or calves run in it next year, if you cannot keep weeds down. The better plan is to plow it up and plant to some crop that will not rob the soil of the elements needed for the fruit trees.

Immediately after dressing poultry it should be thrown in ice-cold water and allowed to remain until all the animal heat has left the body. Neglect to do this is apt to cause the carcass to turn green in parts by the time the destination is reached.

Julian Rodriguez and his wife, the Spanish peasants who came some time ago to assist Mr. and Mrs. George Branhon on their farm, have decided to quit their job and return to their native land. They found everything in this country very different from what they were used to. They could not adapt themselves to the changes. They could not resist the call of the home land and its sunny skies, so decided to get themselves back—Midway Clipper.

An old wooden bridge which had spanned Highland Creek, on the boundary line between Henderson and Union counties, for fifty years, was condemned by the Henderson Fiscal Court on Thursday of last week, and on Thursday night the old bridge fell to pieces and dropped into the creek. It had carried the burdens of traffic for a half century, but the condemnation of the Henderson Fiscal Court was too much for it, and it broke down under the weight.—Owensboro Inquirer.

Mr. Flem Clardy reports a small flock of birds, seen feeding on his wheat fields, that have the general appearance of geese, but are a little smaller than the ordinary wild geese and of a different color, being almost entirely white. The description given corresponds with that of the "snow goose," or "white brandt." It is said to be very abundant in the West, but is seldom seen in this locality, although the Mississippi Valley is one of the courses of its migrations.—Hopkinsville New Era.

If there is good to be obtained from any measures which the Kentucky Assembly passed it will probably accrue from the Good Roads Bill, making a 5-cent levy for the county roads. There is no escaping its provisions, hence there will be some work done on these county highways in 1915 at the latest, and there is no gain saying that they are all in need of it. The plan does not contain any grave national defects, and it appears to be operative in simple fashion. A state is known by her roads, and the most important ones should be first. The bill provides in requiring that roads connecting county seats be improved first. This would mean substantial improvement for the most important highways around Paducah, and should result in the most traveled routes connecting Benton, Midway and Mayfield with Paducah, being made into roads at great deal better than they are at present.—Paducah Sun.

The time has come in Warren county when the electric chair is badly needed if the majesty of the law is to be upheld. Two murders in one week ought to be ample to make an example, and we know of no better time to do so. Capital punishment has not been inflicted on any murderer in Warren county for thirty odd years, but it is not because it should not have been invoked. We long for the day when the courts will drop maudlin sentiment and do their duty, but it probably never will be done until there is a radical change in the jury system of trying murderers. Any man charged with murder, if by any hook or crook he can secure his liberty by giving bond, is sure to find witnesses who will prove him innocent or reduce the gravity of the charge to the minimum. The time has come when a change is needed, and the News hopes to see the law hereafter vindicated and its majesty upheld.—Bowling Green News.

Every Part of "Thornhill" Wagons Must Pass Extreme Tests

Out at the saw mill the makers of this wagon select the pick of the oak and hickory. From three to five years they keep it under shelter—so piled that the air can circulate freely. When finally it is ready to go into a "Thornhill" Wagon, it is as dry as a bone—tough—well nigh unbreakable.

The straight grained hickory for spokes and axles is steel-like in its strength. The oak for hubs and felloes is as sturdy as tough oak grows. As it goes thru the mill, each part is inspected again and again. All defective parts are thrown out. Each part must have the O. K. of scores of men. The steel and iron must pass extreme tests—twice as severe as ordinary service will ever demand. Machines, sensitive to the thousandth part of an inch, gauge the work for accuracy—perform the work that can best be done by machinery. It is this excess of caution—this surplus of strength—in every part—that makes the "Thornhill" come pretty close to utter perfection. Before anyone buys a wagon, they should find out about the six big points of superiority built into the "Thornhill". Let us show you this wagon.

In the last two weeks (the Mexicans have made considerable headway in their war of extermination)

It is said that the war in Mexico will result in the survival of the fittest, which if true will find that country just about depopulated when it is over Smallpox has prevailed in Kenton, Grant and Gallatin counties the past month, and as yet there has not been a case in Boone, the healthiest and best county in Kentucky.

A large number of statesmen are just now playing politics for all the game is worth. Some are taking advantage of the war in Mexico while others are harping on the Panama Canal toll question.

Speaker Champ Clark is ONE member of Congress who declares he will not stultify himself, and he does not let an opportunity escape to make proclamations that indicate he considers himself the Democratic Moses.

They are having about as hot times in Washington among the members of Congress as they are having in Mexico, but the volume of wind that are being discharged at short range are not so deadly as the machine guns.

Toot! Toot! New railroad along Licking river. Survey to commence in April. Renewal of a survey which was begun several years ago for the Virginia and Hocking Valley Railroad Co. It is said to follow the Licking River its full length. We will give more space to this subject as soon as the trains start.—Pendleton Reformer.

A fellow in a county seat—not many miles from this—was tried last week in the circuit court for an offense committed before the enactment of the indeterminate sentence law, and when the jury returned into court a verdict fixing his punishment at two years confinement in the penitentiary, he exclaimed, "good," and when asked by his attorney what he meant by that, answered, "I was afraid they might send me to the legislature."

The farmer who owns a farm is the particular person who is fixed. Banks may fail and factories close, workmen strike and mines suspend, merchants fail and towns burn, times may be panicky and even crops may be short—but the farmer who owns his acres will get along. He will live in comfort and quiet with plenty to eat drink and wear. He is the best man on earth. Yet there are lots of them who do not appreciate their situation.

Pollution of the Ohio river by sewerage and factory waste is the subject of a searching inquiry opened by the United States Public Health Service, and which will extend from Pittsburgh to the mouth of the river. J. K. Hoskins, a Government representative, has recently been seeking information in Kentucky relative to the matter, and headquarters will be established at Cincinnati. The investigation will last several months, and cities which depend on the Ohio for their supply of drinking water will welcome the contemplated benefits.

Having contracted a severe case of warlike an exchange says:

The life of an American citizen is dear to him and his family. As we see these lines we imagine we see Vergara's wife and children as they sit about the lonesome hearstone with tear-stained faces and broken hearts, wondering—was he not a son of the Stars and Stripes, and to what advantage?

Why not draw on the imagination for something like this: The United States is at war with Mexico; several hundred thousand American troops are in Mexico beset by disease and confronted by thousands of relentless and bloodthirsty bandits while hundreds are suffering from mortal wounds received in battle, while yet other hundreds are wounded and crippled for life, while thousands of wives and children sit about lonesome hearstones with tear-stained faces and broken hearts because of the sufferings and deaths of husbands and fathers who were sent to the front to protect the lives and property of the few, comparatively speaking, whom greed prompted to turn their backs on their native land and to locate in a territory that has a record for rapine, lust and murder beginning with its history.

It is an easy matter to show on paper a burst of sympathy, but "war is hell," and very few of those who are displaying such eagerness for this country to engage in war with Mexico would be found at the front. Someone else and their sons would be expected to bear the brunt of battle.

A war with Mexico, to say nothing of the cost in lives, would result in a badly injured country that would be handed down to unborn generations of its citizens.

CHILLING NOT ALWAYS FATAL KENTUCKY BOOMING.

The process of incubation can be held in check for several days, yet a fairly good hatch result. The popular idea that when chilled, the embryo in the egg is dead, is I believe, an erroneous one. Time after time, the writer has saved a valuable hatch, after a perverse hen had left the nest, by either putting the eggs in an incubator or putting them under another hen. Last season and early in the season at that—a hen changed her mind and left the nest after sitting patiently on the eggs for twelve weeks. She left the nest late in the afternoon and the fact was not discovered until about noon of the following day. I remember it, the night was quite chilly and when discovered, the eggs were cold, having received no heat for nearly twenty-four hours. Another hen was placed on the eggs. Twenty-four days from the time the eggs were placed under the first hen eight chicks broke out of the shell, all of which were raised to maturity. I have had the same experience with incubators. Two years ago, when I began my rounds in the incubator cellar, I found a small out and the eggs quite cold. As soon as discovered, prompt measures were taken. The lamp was lighted and got into position. Flannel cloths were immersed in hot water wrung out and placed on the eggs. Even with these better measures, it was four hours before the eggs had gained their normal temperature. The eggs began to pip in the morning of the twenty-second day and on the evening of the twenty-third day I counted one hundred and seventy-seven chicks.

From my experience I am led to believe that chilling, unless prolonged, does not destroy the embryo, but its development is merely held in check. The fact is a strong argument in favor of the farmer keeping a small incubator. Many times, a valuable hatch could be saved if the farmer had a small incubator to take up the work of incubation in the event a perverse hen leaves the nest.—T. R. in Indiana Farmer.

SEEDING AND PLOWING.

To speculate upon the possibility of a loss before it is time to do so may seem foolish, but here it is not so foolish as it appears at first. In speaking of the corn crop for instance, the principle applies very well. I come through the testing of the seed corn. If the seed has been tested, it is probable that there will be little complaint about the missing hill theory, providing the testing comes to the standard. And on the other hand no testing invites the unseen loss. One hundred acres of corn planted with seed that would germinate say 85 per cent leaves 15 per cent that is short, or that a full crop was seven and one-half bushels an acre short if the full yield under better testing had been 50 bushels an acre. Seven and one-half bushels for each acre in one hundred means 750 bushels loss for that field, and if the price is seventy-five cents a bushel the figure comes to $562.50.

All grains of corn are not supplied with the necessary amount of vitality to germinate under the same conditions. It is the vitality of those grains. This rule will apply to every other kind of grain that the farmer plants, and it favors both the testing methods and the careful selection of seed. Every inch and foot that falls to produce a crop after many acres in the aggregate, and if these acres had produced, as they might have done under a fair test, there could have been a fair return for all extra work in the increased yield.

AN UP-TO-DATE FARMER.

A representative of the RECORDER visited one of the progressive farmers in this part of the county, last Saturday afternoon, he being no less a person than W. H. Rouse, who lives over on Gunpowder creek. Mr. Rouse occupies the homestead of the late Yancey Clore, and is surrounded with everything that is calculated to make his life a desirable one and a pleasure. He has numerous out-buildings such as barns and sheds in which to protect his stock from the chilling winter blasts and they certainly show the effects of such protection and the untiring attention given them by their owner. Besides a generous supply of provender you will find in his commodious barn all kinds of farm implements which were put away last fall after having been gone over and carefully cleaned and oiled for their winter's rest. Last fall he filled a 55-ton silo off of four acres and a half of corn which has furnished food for twelve head of stock for the last five months, and he figures that he will have enough silage to last him until next June. His stock is in excellent condition which he attributes to the liberal use of silage and the relish his stock shows for that kind of food which he has furnished. Among other things Mr. Rouse has for making a visit to his home a pleasure is to be found a liberal supply of fishing tackle always ready for use. While close at hand can be found a man who always has instructions to be ready to bring forth the fishing tackle and dig a supply of bait for those who may come that way and desire to try their luck angling for the finny monsters that inhabit Gunpowder creek.

Mrs. Elizabeth McGlasson, wife of William McGlasson, on Elijah's creek, and a daughter of the late Elisha Rouse, died Monday afternoon.

A fifteen months old child of H. L. Tanner, of Pt. Pleasant neighborhood, died Monday about 10 a. m. It had been sick three or four weeks.

L. A. Conner and Bert Sullivan last week, and while they reached the river the wind was playing hurry-scurry with the water and the white caps, to which the boys are not so much as uninviting and threatening to them that they retraced their steps towards Burlington, where the wind and water combination does not interfere with business.

Howard Kelly sold his farm of 24 acres opposite the Harvest Home ground, to Edward Anderson. Consideration not known.

To my friends in East Bend and vicinity:

Having rented the W. F. Kirtley farm on the river, I have decided to open the Steamboat Landing to the public at the following rates:

- Hogs, each..... .05c
- Sheep or Lambs, each..... .01c
- Cattle, each..... .20c
- Calves, each..... .10c
- Cow and calf..... .25c
- Crate of Poultry..... .10c

On anything shipped to this landing a charge of 35 cents will be made for each two horse wagon load or fraction thereof.

This is one of the best way landings on the river, and I have planned everything required to care for the stock in a satisfactory manner.

Ship with me, boys, and I will guarantee satisfaction.

MILK RECORD FRAME

Gives Accurate Knowledge of Cow's Producing Ability.

Also Puts Man in Class Where Those on Outside Would Classify Him Progressive Dairyman—How to Make One.

The keeping of milk records is not such a difficult task. It is really an easy matter and takes but little time. The main advantage is that it enables a man to have an accurate knowledge of the producing ability of his cows, writes F. L. Austin of Indiana in the Orange Judd and Farmer. It not only shows up the cows, but shows something of what the man is made of. It puts him in a class where those on the outside looking in would classify him as a progressive dairyman.

Such a dairyman I visited recently, and his method of keeping tab on his cows was of particular interest because of its simplicity. He had a milk record frame hanging on the wall near the center of the stable that was as handy as any frame I have ever seen. There are a number of different styles of milk record frames in use, some more or less complicated and expensive in make-up than others, while some are mere makeshifts, but this one is homemade and its cost is practically nothing.

This frame, as shown in the illustration, is made by taking a board about 1 inch thick and cutting it approximately 3 feet square, or by tacking two boards together to get this dimension. On three of the edges tack 2-inch strips so that they set flush on one side and project an inch on the other. These strips form the border, or frame, inside of which is placed the record sheet. A thin board is then cut to fit closely inside the frame. The edge of the frame on which there is no border strip will be the lower part of the frame as it hangs on the wall. Bore a quarter-inch hole in the upper end of each upright border strip. Through each hole run a strong cord to the corners of the loose board. Cut the cord about 3/4 foot long, and to the opposite ends attach weights heavy enough to balance the board in any position. This loose board will cover up all of the lower part of the sheet and prevent it from getting soiled during milking. To prevent it from flopping stretch a wire tightly across from right to left border about 2 inches from the lower end of the frame, allowing space enough for the protecting board to slide up and down freely. Between milkings the sheet may be covered up entirely and kept well protected. A coat of paint will add to the attractiveness of the frame, or it may be simply whitewashed.

Milk Record Frame. a, cords supporting protecting board; b, b, weights, c, record sheets. The wire keeps the lower part of the record sheets in place.

Abuse and fright do not increase the milk flow.

A pair of milk scales and a Babcock tester will tell no tales.

The cow that gives a large flow of milk must have plenty of water.

The man who forgets to salt his cows is the one the cows forget.

Cream that is too old or too cold will cause trouble on churning day.

Butter paper is not expensive, and makes a nicer covering for butter than wax.

Lots of comfort for the cows during the day is an open shed facing the south.

Cream that has been properly handled and ripened will come without doctoring.

The quicker the milk is separated after it is drawn the better will be the results.

A variation in the way the separator is run will cause a loss in butterfat every time.

Before calving, the cow's food should be reduced in quantity and of a laxative nature.

MODERN DAIRY HOUSE

Inside Arrangement and Appearance of Building Shown.

Size Can Be Varied According to Requirements, but Adjustment Is Especially Good—Vestibule Is Needed.

The accompanying drawings show the inside arrangement and the outside appearance of an excellent dairy building for a market milk dairy. The size can be varied according to the requirements, but the arrangement is especially good, says the Farm and Home. The building should be connected with the dairy barn by a covered vestibule. This vestibule should have double doors to prevent the passing of dust from the cows into the milk room.

The milkers bring the milk into the weighing room, where it is weighed and emptied into a receiver, a. From this it passes into a mixer, b. This insures the mixing of the milk from all the cows of the herd, which is quite a necessary thing in supplying milk to the city trade.

Inside Arrangement.

The milk is bottled on the table, c. A separator, d, is for separating any surplus. At e is the refrigerator and at f a cooling tank. If there is ice on the farm it may be used in the refrigerator, but if there is none, a pipe running from a good well into the tank, e, will be sufficient for cooling the milk. The hot water and steam are furnished by a boiler, j; l is a tank for washing bottles and utensils and h is a bottle washer. f is a sterilizer for sterilizing the milk utensils, and g is a Babcock tester; m is a rack on the outside of the buildings for sunning pails and cans.

DAIRY NOTES

Abuse will never encourage the cow to make the greatest milk flow.

Alfalfa hay is about the best roughage that can be given the cow.

The use of a dairy thermometer means fewer churning troubles in winter.

High prices should not tempt the dairy farmer to part with his best cows.

A good supply of feed in a barn is a sign of a careful and provident dairyman.

Breeding is of importance in the dairy cow but individuality is what really counts.

The horse man says "no foot no horse." With dairymen it should be, "no udder no cow."

Fine corn meal for the skim milk calf is a good substitute for the more expensive oil meal.

An inexperienced man has no place on a dairy farm unless he is willing and anxious to learn.

There is little danger of overfeeding a cow so long as she readily consumes all the feed given her.

The young calf should be trained to lead. This habit will be decidedly appreciated in later years.

There is no season of the year that bran cannot be made a profitable part of the milk cow's ration.

To double the amount of milk per acre and cut the cost of milk production in two—build a silo.

Dairy farming stimulates work from the shoulders up as well as from the shoulders down.

For good churning quantities and uniform grade of butter, avoid mixing cream or different skimnings.

Every 100 pounds of milk contains 87 pounds of water. No wonder a cow needs a lot of pure, fresh water.

The better bred too early always remains stunted in growth and her milk flow is shortened for all time.

Saving the heifer calves from the best cows is the right method of keeping up the efficiency of the herd.

KILLING WORMS IN HORSES

Good Plan to Keep Mixture of Equal Parts of Salt and Hardwood Ashes Before the Animals.

(By M. H. REYNOLDS, Veterinarian, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.)

Horses have different kinds of worms inhabiting different parts of the intestines and requiring somewhat different treatments. There is no one specific or best treatment for worms. It is a good plan to keep a mixture of equal parts of salt and sifted hardwood ashes constantly before horses.

For the white worms six to twelve inches long, and other common worms living free in the intestines, try the following treatment: First, give mild physic, such as a pint of a quart of raw linseed oil. Feed little or no hay for three days. On the fourth day give two to three ounces, that is, from five to seven tablespoonsful, of turpentine in a pint of raw linseed oil. Repeat the same dose of turpentine and linseed oil on the fifth day, and repeat the whole process beginning on the fifteenth day from the start.

This dose is for a thousand-pound horse, and should be given about in proportion to weight. Judgment should be used concerning the condition and strength of the horse and how easily any particular horse is affected by cathartic medicines. Never give a severe physic to any horse that is thin and weak.

most of the teaming at odd times. As a combination barn for cows and horses, with a shed in one corner, the arrangement is a handy one for a small farm, says a writer in the Missouri Valley Farmer. In size the barn is 34 by 38 feet, and the driveway during the greater part of the year makes a convenient storage for wagons and farm implements. As the distance is not too great to back out with an empty wagon, there are doors at only one end of the driveway. This should make the barn warmer in winter. A space is left over the driveway for putting hay up into the mow overhead. This mow is capable of holding 15 or 20 tons of hay.

Push Immature Animals.

All immature animals should be kept gaining in weight through the winter. They may not carry their fat through; that is not always profitable; but they should carry their weight through, and more. What they lose in fat they should gain in growth, and make a profitable increase—with steers at least half a pound a day during the winter months. This does not necessarily apply to females, unless they are being grown for beef. If they are being grown for milk, it is not desirable to keep them in too high condition. Excessive fat and precocity of maturity are, to some extent, at least incompatible.

Feed for Pigs.

Some pigs require more feed than others, and it is not easy to gauge the daily ration to each. One-third pound of ground corn is a good proportion, and a little bran or middlings may be added with a little oilmeal of either kind. Feeding this carefully, the feeder will soon see how much should be given at a time; no more than they will eat is a good rule. Bran and middlings are best for brood sows to fatten, and a very little cornmeal, but ground oats may be added to the bran, about one-third of the latter.

William J. Bryan.

William Jennings Bryan, owner of an individual half of the democratic party of this nation, was born in Illinois in 1860, and began the discussion of politics a few months later. At the age of nineteen, he was winning oratorical contests for Illinois college. At the age of twenty-seven he was addressing a few seething remarks to the Republican party in Nebraska, from which he has never entirely recovered. At the age of thirty-one, he began trying out new and deadlier forms of oratory upon congress; and at the age of thirty-six he rose in the Democratic national convention and swept the party into his pocket with a few deft words.

Mr. Bryan ran for president that year, a habit of which he has only recently and with the greatest difficulty broken himself. He was almost the first presidential candidate to run for the office instead of sitting on his front porch and receiving the homage of his party. When Mr. Bryan runs for president he does not do so in an easy chair. He climbs onto the back platform of a train and for months afterwards the section hands along his line of march pick large reverberating words out of the surrounding scenery. Mr. Bryan holds the long distance record for oratory, having often spoken for 1,000 miles at a stretch, with only short pauses between stations.

Mr. Bryan is now fifty-four years old. He is a short, heavy-set man with a wide gauge face and a forehead which extends well down the other side of his dome of reason. He wears his remaining hair long and dark and is not addicted to whippers. He is a plainly dressed man with plain unvarnished ways and half the people of the west have talked with him at one time or another on the local trains on which he has spent so much of his life.

Mr. Bryan has been a lawyer, soldier, author and traveler, as well as a candidate. At present, he is an editor, farmer, chautauque lecturer and cabinet officer. He is also one of the few orators remaining in captivity and in all history few men have known more of the art of producing a shimmering sentence of silver eloquence and coiling it around the unwary listener. At present, he is shouting capture. As secretary of state he is one of the greatest lecturers extant and among lecturers he is our greatest secretary of state.

Weather for the Week.

Washington, March 23.—Unsettled weather with frequent rains over nearly all parts of the country was predicted by the Weather Bureau tonight for the coming week.

"Temperatures during the next several days," said the bulletin, "will average above the normal over the Eastern and Southern States and near the normal along the northern border and in the Rocky Mountain region and on the Pacific slope. A disturbance central Sunday morning over the Southern Plains States will move slowly northeastward and be attended by general rains the first part of the week in the Mississippi Valley and the districts east thereof."

"Another disturbance that is approaching the North Pacific coast will move eastward over the Northern States and cross the great central valley Tuesday or Wednesday and the Eastern States Thursday or Friday; this disturbance will be attended by rains and will be followed by a change to considerably better weather in Northern and Central states east of the Rocky Mountains."

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Caton, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good. I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of wonderful success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

Miss Willeve Tillman who has been visiting friends and relatives in Newport and Covington for several weeks returned home Wednesday.

W. P. Johnson was at Maxwell, Indiana, a part of the week, attending the funeral of his uncle Berry Johnson, who died there quite suddenly last Friday. The deceased was about 85 years old and was a former resident of this county.

The sale of farming implements, etc., of W. H. Tillman, last Saturday, was well attended and prices of a satisfactory nature.

Mr. Tillman, who has been farming some of Judge J. G. Tomlin's land has concluded to give up agricultural pursuits on account of his health, and was having a sale of the effects for this purpose.

Carl Neumeister has sold his residence property in Walton to Wm. H. Tillman who formerly owned it. The purchase price was $1,700.

Mr. Neumeister will move back to his farm and Mr. Tillman will move to the purchase from C. J. G. Tomlin property which will be occupied by Everett L. Aylor who will move from W. L. Gaines' place near Richmond.

The appointment was made from the civil service examination recently taken, and Mr. Johnson received the best general average. There were about sixteen applicants who took the examination, and some of them were very greatly disappointed in not receiving the appointment as a reward for political services.

The sale of the personal property of Scott Smith near town, last Thursday, was largely attended and everything sold at high prices.

The sheep sold at $1.25 per head and the cows at from $50 to $80 per head. The success of the sale was due to the extensive advertising, Mr. Smith carrying a large advertisement in all the neighboring county papers. Mr. Smith will move to Cincinnati in a short time to take a position in the office of the L. & N. Railway.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Sturgeon entertained with a delightful dinner Monday in honor of Mrs. Louisa Stephenson's birthday anniversary. All of the children were present except Jas. Stephenson who was detained by his duties in Cincinnati with the L. & N. Railroad.

Mr. Joseph Fisher, son George and daughter Miss Sheba of Verona, Mrs. Lizzie Johnson of Liberty, Indiana, Mrs. Elsie of Covington, J. T. Stephenson of Lima, and Mrs. Minnie Stephenson and daughter Miss Emma of Walton.

Hon. John J. Howe, of Carrollton, Commonwealth's Attorney for this Fifteenth Judicial District, spent last Saturday here on business pertaining to the term of the Boone Circuit Court which closes at Burlington next week.

Mr. Howe is proving himself to be a splendid representative of the public's best interests and is winning encomiums of praise at every court he has attended, and his faithful discharge of his duties has made him worthy of all the good things said about him. He is filling an unexpired term and the present trend is to give him the full term without opposition. Mr. Howe has been important to enter the race for Congress in this district this year, the solicitation coming from the various counties and particularly from Kenton and Campbell, but it is very doubtful if he will consent for his name to be used in that connection, as he feels that having just entered on the discharge of the duties of Commonwealth's Attorney, to which office he was elected by an overwhelming vote, it would be hardly the proper thing to do at this time for another office at this time.

K. L. Varney, of Danville, and E. R. Eudaly, of Chattanooga, Tenn., were here last Saturday, holding a meeting in the interest of the agricultural department of the Southern Railway, being field agents of that railroad for the promotion of improved farming in the territory contiguous to the railroad. These gentlemen are making a special effort to interest the farmers in improved methods for the upbuilding of the farms, realizing that with increased production the business of the railroad will advance correspondingly. Demonstration fields have been planned all along the railway to show the value of the lands and what can be done toward prosperous conditions on the farm. Messrs. Varney and Eudaly made a very interesting talk to the people and left a very favorable impression. As an evidence of something being faulty in this line, the fact that it is only necessary to call attention to the importation and purchase by the farmers of this locality with in the past four months of over $10,000 worth of wheat with which to feed their livestock. It seems as if this locality ought to not only raise enough feed to supply their own necessity, but have some for sale to other sections. The matter should be thought over carefully by our people and study it out so as to improve such conditions.

Up Against It.

The Clipper office has been "up against it" this week.

With one printer kept away on account of the smallpox scare, and the other incapacitated by an accidental injury to his hand, the work of getting out the paper has devolved upon the editor. He has had to fill the positions from the "devil" on up. In addition, as though we were not having our proper share of trouble some of the people got busy Tuesday and industriously circulated the report that the editor was "laid up" with the smallpox. We console ourselves with the thought that as we are having all our troubles at once, perhaps they will all leave us at once.—Blue Grass Clipper.

Bob Thomas' bill appropriating $59,000 for investigating tobacco worms has passed. Not every scientist is eligible to serve. Only those who can tell which end of a tobacco worm is the head should be allowed to conduct the investigation.—Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

General Garnett Vindicated.

The Era of last week carried in its columns a letter in plate form, signed by Mr. James Goebel, which came to us in the usual way of such matter, and in which the writer severely attacked the State Board of Valuation and Assessment over the shoulders of Attorney General James Garnett.

The reply of General Garnett, which was published in the daily paper a few days thereafter was a complete vindication of the actions of the Board and himself, and was written in a dignified and correct manner.

Knowing the members of the Board and General Garnett, as we do, and having confidence in their personal and official integrity, we cannot for a moment believe that Mr. Goebel's charges were true in any part, and while we deplore the controversy, it is safe to say that a statement from the members of the Board having the same tenor as General Garnett's letter would have the effect of putting a quietus on the unjust and uncalled for charges.

It is just a little bit difficult to understand Mr. Goebel's motive in seeking to injure the members of the Board, or General Garnett, unless it is for the purpose of destroying them or some of them, thereby enhancing his personal interests, and we dare say that the parties assaulted will close the incident once and for all, because as indicated in the dialogue between Judge Cochran and the Attorneys interested the Judge pointed out that personal grievances should not be thrust into already heated cases to some extent—Oldham Era.

An Echo Of The Richwood Bank Failure.

Three suits growing out of the Richwood Bank failure were filed in the Boone Circuit Court Clerk's office last Tuesday, seeking to hold Joseph C. Hines, Jas. A. Ryan, Garvey Robinson, Samuel C. Hicks, Benj. F. Bedinger and John L. Jones, who were the directors of the bank at the time of its failure, responsible to the individual stockholders for the amount of the capital stock of the bank lost to them by reason of its failure. The parties suing were Ida Grubbs Hunt, for $500; W. E. Dixon, for $200; T. E. Dixon, for $200.

The parties suing charge that the bank's failure was because of the neglect of duty on the part of the above named directors. Clure, Dickerson and Clayton, for plaintiffs.

FARM AND HOME.

With a manure spreader, five loads will top dress an acre of ground and this will greatly increase the hay crop oats or corn.

A man who does not have a warm house, a warm feed barn and a warm hog house is losing money and feed.

Drill your corn, putting 200 pounds of fertilizer to the acre with drill. Sow cowpeas and plow them in the last plowing of the corn.

Hog your rye down, turn the stubble and sow in cowpeas or soy beans turn the peas in the fall and sow again to rye. You will have ground in three years if you keep this up.

Onions are 5c per pound, why not raise them? Fine onions may be raised from the seed. Good land and attention are required.

Geo. Washington was a farmer and lived upon his plantation at Mt. Vernon, he learned that it was a bad policy to continue to cultivate land without rest.

Kentucky leads in the production of tobacco, Illinois in the production of wheat, and Ohio and North Dakota first in wheat.

We believe that farmers having plenty of feed would make money by feeding late lambs for early spring markets. These lambs may be found upon the Kansas City and Chicago markets where they are shipped from Western states and only weigh an average of 35 to 40 pounds.

The suggestion has been made that the 2,000,000 Baptists in the South give all of the eggs their hens lay on Sunday for six Sundays in order to raise $250,000 for missions. The proposition would probably have met with more favor last winter when the hens were laying.—Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

INDIGESTION OVERCOME

Overcome by Simple Remedy.

Hurried and careless habits of eating, irregular meals and foods that do not harmonize, tend to weaken the digestive organs and result in different forms of stomach trouble.

If you are one of the unfortunate who have drifted into this condition, eat simple foods only, slowly, regularly and take Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic.

Mr. H. J. Smith, Thomasville, Ga., says: "I suffered from a stomach trouble, was tired, worn out and nervous. A friend advised me to take Vinol. My stomach trouble soon disappeared and now I eat heartily and have a perfect digestion and I wish every tired, weak woman could have Vinol, for I never spent any money in my life that did me so much good."

The recovery of Mrs. Smith was due to the combination of the medicinal elements of the cod's liver—aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron, which are contained in Vinol. We will return the purchase money every time Vinol fails to benefit.

The Death Angel has again visited our community, and called Mrs. Martha Jane McNeely home to rest. Martha Jane Norris was born September 7, 1825, and departed this life March 28, 1914, aged 88 years, six months and 21 days old at the time of her death. She was united in marriage to Perry McNeely and to this union were born twelve children, seven boys and six girls. She is survived by two boys, Capt. H. P. McNeely, of New Orleans, La., and Marion McNeely, of Cairo, Ill., and two great grand children. She died in the M. E. church in 1840, and although she was unable to attend church for many years, she possessed many characteristics of a true and devoted Christian. In the death of Mrs. McNeely the family loses a devoted parent and the community a good neighbor. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. S. J. Bradley at the M. E. church, Monday afternoon, after which the remains were buried in the cemetery below town in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing relatives, friends and neighbors.

The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community, but we gladly point them to one who can heal all wounds and sorrows and hope that they will all be given strength to say "Thy will be done."

SET THE BOY TO THINKING

Youngster Had Fears as to the Effects of His Constant Diet of "Dripping."

What is dripping? Dripping, as everybody knows, is the staple food of the young British hiltiteer. George Olesund and his heroes all fed on bread and dripping till success smiled on them. George Moore was once a drippiteer. The poet, Alfred Noyes, was said to resort to dripping when his poems had had luck.

Yes, everybody knows that dripping is supposed to be the juices, the savory essences, that fall from roasting meats.

That is the supposition. But what really is dripping—dripping that the poet of England bay by the pound and smear upon their bread in lieu of butter?

The question, perhaps, will never be answered, but a partial solution is given to it by the fact that a London housewife recently bought at $7 a ton 32 tons of dripping from a soap works.

Alfred Noyes used to tell a dripping story.

"A little boy," he would begin, "complained bitterly about the bread and dripping that formed his daily breakfast."

"'It'll kill me,' he whined at last. 'I know it'll kill me.'"

"'Kill me?' What do you mean?" "Why, I've been feeling bad lately, and now I know it's all this dripping what's the cause of the trouble. I read it in a book."

"Some pure food rubbish," I dare say! And what, precisely, did you read in this vile book, silly?"

"I read," whined the urchin, "that constant dripping wears away a stone!"

CAT AN EXPERT "FISHERMAN"

Has Learned Meaning of Line in Water, and Has the Patience of the Perfect Angler.

Cats are known to be fond of fish, but it is not every cat that is willing to go out and catch enough fresh fish to furnish his own meal and supply the family breakfast table with the same food. Such an animal exists in Miami, Fla., however, and daily watches a hand line which his owner places in the water. When the cork bobbles the cat dashes to the office of an amusement company and sets up a loud meowing. Following the cat's footsteps to the place where the line has been dropped, whoever is on duty at the office hauls in the fish to the tune of purring of the proud and satisfied cat. Some months ago the cat, named Isaac, was on duty at the office when a fish was pulled in. He leaped that his favorite food came from the water and was caught on the end of a line. Since that day, with one end in the water and one on the dock has been a source of unfailing interest to the cat. The cat's patience would put the renowned Isaac Walton to shame, for he will spend hours sitting by a line without stirring. Sometimes the cat will sit by the side of a fisherman and will tell his human companion by his meowing when a fish is beginning to nibble at the bait before the fisherman has suspected that the bait is being dangled with.

King's Grapevine

The great vine at Hampton court palace is a slip off one at Valentines, near Wanstead, which was planted in 1758. Owing to its roots having penetrated the bed of the river, which is only 60 feet from the end of the vinehouse, the Hampton court vine grew with extraordinary rapidity. In 1800—20 years after it was planted—its main branch was 114 feet long. Now its branches cover a space of 2,300 square feet, but the principal branch only stretches 90 feet—the length of the vinehouse. Had the vines been enlarged the vine would probably cover four times as much space. As it is, the vines at Cumberland Lodge, Marlborough House, Froehampton and Billwood park, Sunninghill, surpass it; while the one at Kinnel house, Broadbalken—the largest in Great Britain—covers nearly twice as great a superficial area.

Canals of the World.

China has led the world in the matter of canal making, and to this day stands first among the nations for the skillful utilization of her inland waterways. One great canal maintains communication between Peking and Canton, a distance of 1,200 miles, and the total extent of the canals of China is more than 5,000 miles. Russia owns the longest canal in the world, extending from St. Petersburg to the Chinese frontier, a distance of 4,472 miles, and also the second longest, covering 1,424 miles between Astrakhan and St. Petersburg. As regards numbers of separate canals, Holland claims precedence, but her total mileage of inland waterways is only 930 miles.

What His Fee Was For.

He was always boasting about his ancestors and one day employed a genealogist to hunt them up. "In due time the connoisseur of pedigree returned and was cordially received by the patron.

"So you have succeeded in tracing back my ancestors. What is your price?"

"Two hundred dollars."

"Isn't that high?" objected the patron. "What's that for?"

"Principally," responded the genealogist, "for keeping quiet about them."

Great Shortage in Hogs.

The Southern States at one time years ago produced large numbers of hogs and cured practically all of the bacon necessary to feed the people. At the present time the same cannot be said of a single Southern State and of but few counties in any of these states. There is one county in Georgia, however, that is showing others what can be done in raising hogs. Brooks county Georgia, holds the distinction of producing and selling more bacon than any other county in Georgia. Recently twenty-two wagon loads of cured bacon were delivered at Quitman in one day. This amounted to 45,000 pounds.

Last year Brooks county raised five times as much cured bacon for consumption, shipped out several carloads of hogs, and in addition sold 150,000 pounds of bacon at an average price of fourteen cents a pound. This year it is estimated that Brooks county will sell 250,000 pounds of bacon in addition to the quantity already shipped. The hogs shipped to the markets. About 1,000 head of fat cattle will also be marketed from the county. The delivery of five truck loads has not been accomplished at a sacrifice of other crops, but has been produced in addition to the regular crops, with the result that those who have taken up this line of work are becoming the leading and most prosperous farmers in the county. This cash receipts from the sale of hogs and bacon from the county is near $100,000.

What is being done in Brooks county is being followed in other counties in every county in the South. This would put the farmer on a better financial footing, because he would not be dependent upon cotton or tobacco as his sole cash crop. Bacon can be made a most profitable cash crop which can be marketed in early spring when farmers are so often in need of ready money.

The boys of Brooks county have manifested great interest in the organization of pig clubs, and an exceedingly creditable exhibit will probably be made by the boys at the county fair in the fall.

Mr. Charles K. Poindexter, of Merced, who is well known to Danville citizens, returned Monday from a visit to relatives in Oklahoma. He brought with him a box of prairie dogs and the little animals are attracting much attention. Mr. Poindexter, who owns a large farm at Marcelus, will domesticate, or "tame" the dogs and begin raising them on a large scale.

It has been found according to Mr. Poindexter, that the prairie dog, when given a little training, is far superior to the terrier in exterminating rats. In fact, they can be tamed to live about barns and under houses, making their dog of the rod when the latter are plentiful. It is his intention to train and sell the prairie dogs, and as they grow rapidly, Mr. Poindexter expects to make much money from their sale.—Danville Messenger.

Mining News Nuggets.

The following is a description of the Fortune Gold Mine, in Arizona, as published in a recent issue of Prescott, Arizona, Courier: Last Monday afternoon a Courier representative was invited to take a joy ride to the properties of the Fortune Mining Company, a V. T. Lewis, superintendent of the company, being at the wheel, and Messrs. Homer Wood and Lewis also being guests. It had been more than a year since we had seen the workings of the mine and as men have been steadily boring into the mountain in the interim we found things much changed since the first visit. At that time the main working tunnel was about 300 feet in length, the dump showed moderate sized piles of ore, and the paystake was in evidence mainly upon the surface of the ground. At that time we were convinced that the ore chute would prove to be a very long one, owing to the surface indications. Since then the tunnel has been lengthened about 600 feet, and instead of walking upon the dump and surmising what is apt to be found beneath one's feet, one may walk 900 feet upon and under ore exposed at a depth of over 100 feet in most places. Beginning at the portal of the tunnel, where the ore is about a foot in width, the streak quickly widens until at the intersection of the shaft with the tunnel the ore streak has increased to over two feet. Near this point is a slight fault in the vein, setting the streak slightly over to one side, but the continuity of the ore, so far as the length of the ore chute is concerned, is never broken thereby. The ore is 900 feet with the ore streak still strong and well defined in the present breast of the tunnel. For more than 200 feet the roof of the tunnel is entirely in ore, while in places the streak is six feet in width. Without going into the tunnel, an experienced miner would know that it had been driven mainly in ore; for the dump consists of a comparatively small pile of waste, with big piles of ore dumped to one side of the vein. At first the attempt was made to pile up the ore by means of a wall formed of the larger chunks of ore, but this method involved too much hanging after the piles were built high above the car track, and now the ore is dumped from the car in a pile by itself. The ore tonnage of this dump is not known exactly. It may be estimated by those who are fond of figures, upon the basis of a streak of ore 900 feet long, 7 feet high and 2½ feet thick as a cross section, that this ore chute will continue to the end line of the claim, 500 feet distant, seems almost certain, as the outcrop of the unopened portion of the ground indicates that it will. Indeed, an old shaft sunk upon this portion of the vein many years ago, yielded a considerable quantity of the best ore ever taken from the mine. It is the purpose of the company to utilize this old shaft in making air circulation, when the tunnel has been advanced as far as the shaft. Being a heavy iron sulphide, with some copper pyrite showing in places, we could form no correct judgment as to the values contained in the ore, but it looked good to us. We were informed by one of the miners that a sample taken by him across the streak where it is six feet wide, yielded $16 per ton, while in other places the ore has shown averages varying from $8 to $12 per ton. The Fortune impressed us as being the real thing. Roughly figuring, it would take a ten-stamp mill two weeks to work the available tonnage upon the dump and exposed by the tunnel at its present length. For work below the tunnel level, the mine is already equipped with a hoist, and the shaft has been sunk to a depth of 70 feet below the tunnel. The tunnel is well ventilated by means of a five-inch pipe extending from the shaft to the breast.

Stringent Law.

A dispatch from Frankfort says: "No man can vote in a primary election hereafter, unless he actually participated in the last preceding general election and voted the party ticket straight."

The amended primary law defines the term "party affiliation" and puts a severe penalty on one voting in the primary who is not qualified. The law also does away with petitions. Any one may get his name on the ballot in Kentucky. The amended law must be so stamped and returned to the County Clerk.

THREE FINE HORSES

BELL'S FITZSIMMONS

2844 A. S. B. A.

Bracken Chief 2148

Harrison Chief 1608

Roderick 104

Membrino LeGrand 99.

Dark bay horse, 16 hands, weight 1300 pounds, with three white feet, snip and snout, abundant hair, lots of style and action, with all the step you want in harness and under the saddle; has the longest neck, shortest back, and the best legs and feet.

By Bracken Chief 2148

by Harrison Chief 1608 by Clark Chief 1608, dam, Kit Hard, (2830) by Indian Chief (1718). 1st dam, Miss Perry 4034 by Rhoderick 104, by Membrino LeGrand (99) 2 dam by Well's Yellow Jacket 112. 3 dam by Gray Eagle (thor). Miss Perry is also the dam of Woodland Chief, one of the finest show horses in Kentucky. Woodland Chief is a full brother to Bell's Fitzsimmons and a full brother to Rhoderick, and one of the finest geldings the Fagan Brothers ever showed, and sold to a party in Texas for $1,000.

You have all seen Bell's Fitzsimmons, colts shown in Northern Kentucky for the last three years, and they have proven to be the best in the State. There was one suckling colt owned by Robert Chambers, of Walton, last fall that was shown all through the State and said to be by such men as Messrs. Hub Buckner, Ward Tukes, C. C. Harris, John Dolan, L. T. Anderson, Mat. C. J. E. Williams, of Walton, for $500.

It was said by all horsemen present at the Florence Fair, when they were shown for the season of Bell's Fitzsimmons, never saw a ring of colts showed like them. Mr. Harris and Mr. Buckner said they never judged a ring of colts like them, although they judged the Futurity at Lexington where 100 colts were shown.

Now is the time for the breeders of Northern Kentucky to work up to the fact that there are no horses like the Harrison Chief and his sons and his grandsons are still breeding on.

We have all been told the best horsemen in the State that Bell's Fitzsimmons should be numbered as one of the best breeders in the State today.

Will make the season of 1913 at C. R. Best's stable in Walton, Kentucky, at the Season Fee of $20 to insure a living colt, or money due when mare is parted with.

THE MAGNIFICENTLY BRED SADDLE STALLION, CAMPBELL CHIEF 5039

By Emerald Chief, 2132.

Will make the season of 1914 at C. R. Best's stable, Walton, Boone County, Kentucky, to cover a limited number of mares at the fee of $20 to insure a living colt. Money due when mare is parted with or bred to other stock.

CAMPBELL CHIEF is a handsome stallion, he stands 16 hands high, weighs 1,600 pounds; foaled 1907, and bred by J. E. Hony, Mt. Sterling, Kentucky.

He has been handled by Charles Wells, of Massville, Mason County, up to 1913, and proved himself a successful show horse.

He has great type of the saddle as there is in the State, a natural fair gaited horse with as much all and style as any horse living.

Kentucky's best sire without show he comes on the sire's side in a direct line from Harrison Chief, the great progenitor of saddlers, and on his dam's side from horses that have picked successfully with his strain and all backed by good trotting and thoroughbred blood.

They are taking no chances in breeding to horse of such natural beauty, style and action, bred in such stout lines that has proven himself a successful sire and a sure foalgetter.

Progenitor—CAMPBELL CHIEF is by Emerald Chief 2132; he by Bourbon Chief 976 and out of Kate O'Hara 4777; Bourbon Chief by Harrison Chief 1608 and out of Kate O'Hara 4777; Harrison Chief by Clark Chief 89 out of Luto Boy.

1st dam, Old Mat 6550 by Roseco 2471; 2d dam, Daughter of Tomahawk 2471; 3d dam, Daughter of Tomahawk 2471; 4th dam, Daughter of Tomahawk 2471; 5th dam, Daughter of Tomahawk 2471.

Warfield 82; 3d dam, Daughter of Pharoah 24; a Thoroughbred.

THE PREMIUM PERCHERON HORSE, JEAN FAIRBANKS 4478

Will make the season of 1914 at C. R. Best's stable, Walton, Ky., at the Season Fee of $20 to insure a living colt, or money due when colt is foaled or mare is parted with or bred to other stock. A lien retained on colt until money is paid. Care taken to prevent accidents but will not be responsible should any occur.

We will meet halfway mares from a distance.

Season to best colt shown at Florence Fair, 1913.

Care will be taken in handling the above stock but we will not be responsible should any occur.

Also prepared to break and handle Saddle and Harness Horses.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

Get the grain seed early.
Winter spraying is valuable.
Sunlight is a good disinfectant.
The hen may be rolled upon, but her son never sets.

Remove manure as far from the cow stable as possible.
Successful lamb rearing is the key to success with sheep.

When horses are not thrifty it may be due to sameness of diet.

Fowls having a free range will find their own feather-making food.
Know the soil and the crops to fit the soil. Low yields soon bring ruin.

A bunch of good shoats will make the best market for skim milk this winter.

Much of the disease among live stock may be attributed to injudicious feeding.

Do not condemn a breed simply because a few fowls do not come up to your expectations.

Feeding a little linseed meal occasionally to stock is beneficial, keeping the system regulated.

After the dairy utensils have been cleaned, invert them in the pure air and where the sun will strike them.

Churning at too high a temperature or churning too long will produce a greasy butter in which the grain is injured.

So far as possible each animal should have just the kind of food which is suited to its condition and appetite.

Do not allow the milk cans to remain in stables while they are being filled, and avoid contamination of the milk bacteria.

Those spongy places in the road may be successfully drained with tile. Drainage is the first essential in the improvement of a road.

On the majority of farms the money invested in good breeding animals will earn much better interest than if deposited in the bank.

When purchasing a cow be sure to know whether she is free from tuberculosis. Have her tested. This last rule applies to cattle of all breeds.

Hens are better than pullets for breeders. Hens lay larger eggs than pullets and I have noticed that the chicks hatched are stronger and more vigorous.

The male that is always alert, ready to defend himself and his mates, and apparently full of life, is the one that should be kept to head the breeding pen next spring.

Separate the cream while the milk is still warm and in cold weather first run hot water through the separator to warm it. Strain the milk into the separator through a wire gauze.

Buying cows and selling them as fast as they stop milking never built up a high class dairy business. The city milk producer is not a true dairyman; he is more a speculator in feeds and cows.

The strawy stalky manure makes an ideal mulching fertilizer for both young and old apple trees. A great many are literally dying from starvation. This coarse manure will conserve moisture and fertility.

The usefulness and value of a horse depend upon his early training. He should be handled and taught when a colt. This will develop his intelligence from the start and very much increase his subsequent usefulness.

Now that the plowing is all done, wipe off all dirt from wood and iron work. Give a good coating of oil to the metal parts next spring, so there will be no delay in getting the plows to scour.

When cows are salted only once a week they eat too much at a time and it causes looseness of the bowels. They will eat a little salt nearly every day if it is kept where they can get at it, especially when the grass is fresh and abundant.

The manure spreader is almost indispensable on the farm. By taking manure from the barn as fast as a load accumulates and spread on the land at once, nearly all of the fertility is saved, and by the use of the spreader will go farther and prevent waste.

Store only sound fruit.
Use a metallic milk strainer.
Hens need a variety of feed.
Disinfectants are cheaper than disease.
Regular attention to all live stock is very important.
The first requisite in feeding cattle for profit is good stock.

During the fall and winter is a good time to dig that pit ditch.
It is said that sheep will eat 4,330 different kinds of weeds.

Fresh air night and day is vital to poultry. But drafts are fatal.

The ultimate success of the farmer depends on diversified farming.

In selecting a location for a poultry yard, choose a light, sandy soil.

The falling over of the rooster's comb shows him to be in bad health.

There are few crops raised on the farm that vary as little in price as wool.

Meal should be mixed dry and crumbly, since it causes illness when fed wet.

Fill the pig's stomach while he is young, and he will fill your purse when he is grown.

Do not attempt to churn poor or thin cream at a low temperature, or there will be trouble.

Don't burn the straw. Use it for bedding for the stock, and return it to soil to renew fertility.

Young chickens need animal food, but they will not thrive well if given too large rations of rich food.

Above the food of production that goes to milk, a cow demands food of support in proportion to her size.

Keep an eye on the seed corn and see that plenty of ventilation is afforded the room in which it is stored.

Keep the windows of the hen house clean so that the inside of the house may get all of the light that is possible.

Eggs from hens that have made a fair showing in laying this winter will be more fertile than those that did heavy laying.

Save every ounce of grain and every pound of fodder this fall. What you don't need can be sold for good prices before spring.

Do not forget to salt the horse once a week; or better still, keep salt always before him. He knows best how much he needs.

Too many farmers have not learned that it is all wrong to feed a sow on feed that produces heat instead of bone and muscle.

Young birds are good breeders only when they are practically full grown and well matured. Immature birds should never be used.

Never feed more than hogs will eat up freely. Many farmers do not practice this, but keep a quantity of uneaten food lying about the lot at all times.

Peanuts make a splendid feed for both hogs and cows and whenever they can be grown they should be used, for they furnish nourishment and variety.

Build the line fence strong enough to keep your own and your neighbors' stock on the right side, but do not have it so high that it will prevent you from being a neighborly.

Laying hens must have bread or milk; eggs cannot be produced without nitrogenous material in some shape. Keep a supply of bone meal or oyster shell convenient.

Remember that fowls that "look alike" will attract better attention and sell better than the hit-and-miss kind. Furthermore, the pure-bred stock will average about the same in size bird for bird.

Tankage is a highly profitable winter food for fall pigs. Use one gallon for each 50 pigs, fed in the slop. You will get your money back, with compound interest, and get more for your home-grown feed.

When you use a trough in grinding in cold weather, let the water out after you are done. To let the lower part of the stone stay in water, freezing and thawing, is a pretty sure way to ruin the place which touches the water.

Poultry products may replace the meat shortage. They may help fill the gap, for poultry can be raised anywhere in the United States. The population is increasing while the supply of meat-producing animals show practically no increase.

Now there is a greater incentive for the utmost painstaking with our poultry as the price of eggs is constantly increasing. Of course feed is higher than we could wish, but the poultryman who does his best among all discouragements is the winner.

Farmers Interest Seed Corn

Will Increase Your Yield 10 to 30 Bu. Per Acre

We care not what corn you have, if you plant FARMERS INTEREST WHITE DENT along side of it it will beat it 10 to 30 bushels per acre.

FARMERS INTEREST has been bred for 18 years. Barren stalks have been eliminated, the ears grow very large and the quality is high. The variety has always won the highest honors at the great International Corn Expositions, open to the world, from the first one held in Chicago in 1907, down to and including this year, 1914.

The selection, breeding and improvement of this corn has conferred on farmers, and all the people, great benefits than all the work of Luther Burbank, the plant Wizard of California.

The least expensive and most certain way to improve a corn crop is to let others do the breeding and you buy the result at a small price per bushel. For a farmer to produce a bushel of corn like we will sell him for a couple of dollars would require the work of years—worth a thousand dollars or more.

Send your name for a FREE sample and further particulars and photo a production of grand sweepstakes exhibits. Better write NOW. The photographs of prize-winning corn are well worth seeing. Named and introduced by: O. K. SEED STORE, Dept. Indianapolis, Indiana. Price and in every city—Mention BOONE COUNTY RECORDER when you write.

Raise Better Quality.

It will soon be too late to burn out beds and prepare for a large crop of burley but it should not affect the farmer much as he is better off to raise 10 acres of good tobacco than to plant 20 acres and put in ground that should have gone into corn, millet or broom corn. Good ground will grow a crop that will command a good price and it will take less time and work to grow it. In many tobacco fields in the county may be found spots that would grow cane or corn that in tobacco it only grows the tag end which brings nothing but work, no profit. A good quality of tobacco—always—brings a good price and is easily sold. Owen County Democrat.

That You Save Money

In buying new WHEELS is because the repairing costs nearly as much and sometimes more than new wheels. Here is an example: A customer wanted new rims and new tires on his wheels. The cost of this work is at least $10.00 and the price of spokes added to it. I sold that man four good NEW wheels for $8.00. Putting shaft in a buggy costs you sometimes $2.00. I sell you a complete, new, well ironed shaft for $2.50 to $2.75; also good ironed Buggy and Spring Wagon poles for $1.75 and $4.50. This material sold twice as high five years ago, but automobiles cause these low prices. Come and look at the wheels.

Every Part of "Thornhill" Wagons Must Pass Extreme Tests
Out at the saw mill the makers of this wagon select the pick of the oak and hickory. From three to five years they keep it under shelter—so piled that the air can circulate freely. When finally it is ready to go into a "Thornhill" Wagon, it is as dry as a bone—tough—well right unbreakable.
The straight grained hickory for spokes and axles is steel-like in its strength. The oak for hubs and felloes is as sturdy as tough oak grows. As it goes thru the mill, each part is inspected again and again. All defective parts are thrown out. Each part must have the O. K. of scores of men. The steel and iron must pass extreme tests—twice as severe as ordinary service will ever demand. Machines, sensitive to the thousandth part of an inch, gauge the work for accuracy—perform the work that can best be done by machinery. It is this excess of caution—this surplus of strength—in every part—that makes the "Thornhill" come pretty close to utter perfection. Before anyone buys a wagon, they should find out about the six big points of superiority built into the "Thornhill". Let us show you this wagon.

Judging from various reports the spring crop outlook throughout the country is quite encouraging. In all sections moisture in the soil is abundant and the long, late fall allowed more than ordinary crop preparation. The only important requisite now seems to be good weather.

Little Melvin is Dead.

"Melvin is dead!" This brief message was flashed over the local wires of the home-neighborhood March 30th, wherein the little fellow lived his brief life and died. To those who did not know him such a message could not mean so much but to the father, and the mother it meant everything; it meant that their baby, their boy, their only son, was no more. The little fellow was idolized, so unusually sunny was his disposition that strangers were attracted to him. He was laid to rest in Hopeful cemetery among his ancestors on April 1st. The writer was an early arrival on the grounds and was impressed by the presence of about twelve men who having come as of yore, in an unpretentious pioneer way, thru the most undesirable weather, were working under the most trying circumstances, preparing the last resting place of the little one each face bore lines of sorrow, and every man was anxious to testify by the labor of his hands that he was a sorrowful sympathizing friend, a "real friend," and the last act of these brawny men not usually given to tears, was to place flowers on a little grave. The service was brief, marked by its simplicity, with the assistance of Wilford Mitchell it was conducted by friends "real friends" for none had gone there that day because there was a big funeral at the church as the weather was beautiful, it was anything but that. Instead it was a little crowd of sorrowful sympathizing friends, "real friends" and relatives. At the close was chanted a few verses of "Thy will be done."

Melvin-Tanner was a descendant of some of the oldest families in Boone county. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey L. Tanner, a grandson of Amanda Tanner, a great great grandson of Martha Souther, a great great grandson of John E. Utz, deceased, whose wife was Judy Clore, a sister to Yancy Clore.

The plans for the road so far take it from Madison along the river through Brooksville, Lamb, Craig, Markland, Florence, Patriot, North Rising Sun, French, Aurora, Lawrenceburg, Whitewater Park and to Miami town, Ohio, where the road crosses the Big Miami river. Then it strikes east and runs south to the Queen City avenue terminus in Cincinnati. The building and equipment will cost between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000, it is estimated. Gasoline and electric locomotives will be used. The road will be through a territory of more than 500,000 acres, it is stated "a veritable garden spot with not a sterile rail near them."

A Breakdown.

The printing of the Recorder was delayed this week by the stripping of the felt roller on the press, which had to be sent to the city for repairs.

Tobacco plants are up in some of the early sowed beds.

Elmer Kirkpatrick sold to Perry Barlow, a good work horse, last Monday.

Rev. G. P. Simmons will preach at Bullittville Christian church next Sunday morning at the usual hour.

Miss Lizzie Rogers died at the home of her father B. F. Rogers, near Bellevue, Wednesday at 5 a. m.

John R. Whitson, Dave Brown and several other Florence parties were transacting business in Burlington last Saturday.

Rev. Edgar Riley is now occupying his new home, which, after the general renovation he gave it, is one of the best equipped residences in Burlington.

All the water courses were on the rampage last week, and the carrier on Burlington rural route No. 2 was again interrupted in his work of serving the good people.

Phil Lambert, of Florence, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Saturday. Mr. Lambert has resided in this country six years and now intends taking out his naturalization papers.

G. S. Walrath, of Bellevue, was in Burlington a short while, last Thursday afternoon, enroute home from Cincinnati, where he had been purchasing a stock of spring merchandise.

Of the 115 who took the civil service examination for postoffices in this Congressional District, February 28, Mrs. Maud Fowler, of Burlington, said to have made the best grade—93.5.

E. E. Kelly has installed in front of his store the large gasoline tank he secured in the recent deal with Newton Sullivan. It occupies the site of the ettle which was razed to make room for the tank.

As Bert Rouse was coming to Burlington, last Wednesday, he found a large pocketbook on the pike near W. L. Kirkpatrick's gate, which the owner can have by calling at his residence and proving property.

The Recorder has on its table a clipping from a Milwaukee, Wisconsin, paper, containing a picture of Edwin M. Gaines, local manager of the National Cash Register Co., who has made good with that company and is one of its most popular managers.

The fiscal court was in session Tuesday, all the justices of the peace being present. The road propositions were about the only matters before the court, and it looks very much like the Pecoverburg and Bellevue; the Hebron and North Bend, Limaburg and Hebron and the Walton and Beaver road will be built this year.

The crowd in town last Monday was the largest that has attended county court in a long time, and every branch of business needed a rushing business, the Recorder getting its share of the property that struck the town that day. About twenty-five autos were counted on the street. The horse show was very small.

The April term of the Boone Circuit Court will convene next Monday morning. The docket is some larger than usual, which with the murder case sent here from Grant county will make quite a busy term, and if the weather is suitable for farm work the tillers of the soil will have to be called from home to do jury service.

George Afterkirk, aged 46 years died at his home in Beaver last Sunday afternoon after an illness of about ten days of pneumonia and other diseases. He leaves a widow who was the daughter of the late Henry Underhill, also three children, the oldest of which is about ten years old. Mr. Afterkirk was well known in the county, having driven a medicine wagon for the past two years.

Circuit Clerk Maurer has leased subroas for between and 10 witnesses in the Kelle murder trial which will be called in the Boone circuit court next Thursday. The trial will be a sensational proceeding, and should some developments that have been hinted at come out in the testimony the trial will be the most sensational in the history of Northern Kentucky.

GARDEN SEED PROBLEM.

While the Washington correspondents are making merry over the rhetorical defense of the allotment of 20,000 packages of garden and flower seed to each congressional district, made by Representative Fowler of Illinois, the coming readers observe that the appropriation of $257,000 for seed distribution, which does not include cost of carriage, went thru the house. While the other members yollied Mr. Fowler, they did not oppose the appropriation. This requisite is a too valuable politically for congressmen to surrender it at request of the department of agriculture or as a result of the shafts of satire hurled at them by the city press or city congressmen.

The value of the garden seed to the recipient is inconsequential. But to be personally remembered by the members of congress is another matter. The average citizen, even though scoffing at the practice, feels some pride when he finds that the congressman considers him of sufficient importance to try to gain his favor. And human beings rejoice in getting something for nothing, even if they indirectly pay for it through taxation. The congressman who stays long on his job never neglects these little things. He usually employs a private secretary, who is an indefatigable worker and who judiciously sends out garden literature. He is careful to attend to every request by mail and to foster the belief that he especially delights to honor a particular constituent. The tenure of office of such congressmen is much longer than that of members who expect a grateful people to reward them for their fights on the floor. The members who devote much of their debate and to constructive legislation have these little things attended to by their secretaries, if they are wise.

Mr. Fowler was franker than some of his colleagues in openly defending the garden seed privilege. But there is some question as to whether he was wise in opposing the plan to have the distribution made by the department of agriculture directly, using lists of addresses furnished by congressmen. There might have been some advantage in such an arrangement. The congressman could assure his constituents by an imitation typewritten circular letter that he had placed their names on the list and requested the department of agriculture to send them seed from time to time. He could request that he be notified of any remises on the part of that department. He could also request that he be advised of the failure of any of the seed to germinate so that he might have the matter investigated. This would further flatter the vanity of the constituent, who would feel himself in cooperation with his congressman in seeing that a great department of the government was properly performing its functions. And in the event the seed failed to germinate or turned out to be something different from representations of the label, the congressman would be held blameless. —Lawrenceburg Press.

Support for County Fairs.

The Bourbon County Fair, which claims the honorable distinction of being "the oldest fair west of the Alleghenies," is about to go out of business. In recent years there has been a lack of popular interest in the annual meetings and the fair has not been a financial success.

The county fair is an institution of much value. It is a strong influence for county development. Bourbon is a prosperous county, a rich agricultural section, a notable producer of livestock and is the home of many progressive farmers. It has all the material necessary for the conduct of a first-class annual exhibit of livestock and agricultural products. It may not need a fair as badly as some other counties, but it should have a fair, nevertheless, for the fair will help proclaim its agricultural greatness and prosperity to the world.

Fair directors do not like to give money-losing exhibitions and nobody can blame them for feeling that way about it, but Bourbon county people should not permit their fair to die because of the fact that it has not always paid expenses. Not many of the county fairs are big money makers, but it does not follow that they should be abandoned on that account. Their value to a community is not always to be gauged by their financial success or lack of success.

Patronage is necessary to make and maintain a good fair. County fairs can secure this patronage if there is co-operative and energetic effort in their behalf by those who will be benefited. Primarily the fair is for the benefit of the farmers, but things that help the farmers help all other classes of humanity. When a helpful institution is languishing the people ought to get together and go to its support. —C-J.

And it won't be many weeks now until we will have to sit weekly and hear our friends tell us just how long, how wide and the weight of a certain big fish which dropped back into the water just as it was being pulled out. —Perry Citizen.

The late Legislature passed a hotel or lodging house bill, laying all sorts of restrictions on length of sheets, number of towels in a room, etc., but the bug proposition was evidently overlooked. We cannot see why an animal bug inspector was not provided for in the bill. —Hartford Herald.

PRODUCE CLEAN MILK

Sanitary Conditions Are Factors of First Importance.

Unless Some Precaution Is Taken at Milking Time, Dirt and Dust Will Be Sure to Fall Into Pail or Receptacle.

(By I. H. FRANKSON.)

It is not easy to say just what is the most important feature in the production of clean milk. Special stress may be placed upon some particular step, yet if carelessness is allowed to rule at other steps much of the most painstaking care would count for naught in the final results.

Clean and sanitary conditions are factors of first importance upon which too much stress cannot be had. It is impossible to produce good milk or good cream if dirt of any kind is allowed to get into it. Unless some precaution is taken at milking time, dirt and dust will be sure to fall into the pail or the receptacle. The greater part of this filthy matter dissolves in the milk, giving it not only undesirable odors and tastes but also inoculating it with bacterial germs.

These germs may have been gathered from stagnant water, muddy pools or mirey yards. While the majority of them may not be disease-producing or especially harmful should they be transmitted to the human system, yet to say the least, they are factors in bringing about decomposition of the milk. Filth and disease germs go hand in hand; the same carelessness that allows the one is likely to give access to the other. Hence, it is of the highest importance that the cow be kept as nearly clean as possible.

The milk should be disinfected largely by brushing off all the loose dirt and dust from the flanks and udder but, if at all convenient, it is even better to wipe the udder with a damp cloth. This will take but a moment and will prevent large quantities of dirt from getting into the milk.

The milker interested in a pure, wholesome product should insist on wearing a special suit while milking. This suit need not be a white one, but such a one has the advantages of at least showing when it has become soiled, and furthermore, if the milkster is to keep it clean he will soon be forced to keep everything about him clean. The warm milk as it comes from the cow offers a splendid medium for the favorable growth of all kinds of bacteria which may gain access to it. In order to lessen this development, the milk should be cooled rapidly and quickly as possible and the milk strained through a metallic strainer for even under good conditions this soon becomes a hot-bed for bacteria. Milk bottles are frequently returned from homes where contagious diseases exist. To prevent the spread of epidemics the important work of washing milk utensils should not be entrusted to little children.

Children Caring for Milk and Utensils.

The dairy department of the College of Agriculture of West Virginia is building up a new herd of cattle at the university farm. The herd previously kept at the farm were grades and many of them were getting quite old and unprofitable. Quite a few pure bred Holsteins have been added to the herd and the old herd will be fully replaced by them in course of time. The dairy department has also installed at the university a modern buttermaking equipment and will purchase cream from the farmers of the northern section of the state and high grade creamery products will be made. This will be quite an instructive feature to the agricultural students.

Loss in Hurling. Hurrying the cow checks the flow of milk. Some cows do not get over it till too late for them to give down before milking is over. That means your loss.

Dairy Aids Fertility. While grain raising depletes the fertility of the farm, the dairy is a sure agency to restore it, if judgment is used in applying the manure back to the soil.

The Early & Daniel Co., Covington, Ky.

Gentlemen:—Here is what Tuxedo Chop and Ce-re-a-lia Sweets is doing for me. You can see by this letter-head the business I am in, and no teams are loaded any heavier than mine, and in harness every day and keep in fine condition and eat Tuxedo Chop.

We keep seven cows and since we began feeding Ce-re-a-lia Sweets have gained twenty pounds milk per day, and gained from 4 8-10 test up to 5 4-10. The gain in test just pays for the feed and I heartily recommend it to my neighbors.

FARM STOCK

FEED CUTTER PROVES GOOD

Kafir and Corn Thoroughly Mixed in Cutting and Calves Clean It Up Without Any Waste.

I bought 24 calves last summer, which I put in my feed lot on August 15. Some of these calves had been on pasture with their mothers, relates a Kansas farmer in Mail and Breeze. Others had been hand-fed, and it was quite a problem to get them used to a change of feed. The feed I had for these calves was green corn, kafir and prairie hay. I soon found there was too much waste in hauling this feed into the lot and allowing them to do their own picking. I then went to my workshop and made the feed cutter illustrated in the drawing.

The body is made of a 1x12-inch board four feet long, with sides of 1x8-inch pieces. One leg was used at the back and two in front, the latter extending eight inches above the frame.

The knife lever was bolted to the top of the left-hand leg to allow using the right hand for cutting. The knife was cut up in one-half to one-inch lengths and fed in troughs. Kafir and corn were thoroughly mixed in cutting and the calves cleaned up the mixture without waste. They had this green feed until frost killed it, and did well on it.

FREQUENT LITTERS OF PIGS

Experience Shows That Sow Growing Eight Youngsters to Maturity Twice Yearly Is Best.

A litter of eight good pigs from a pure-bred sow, mated with a choice sow, will require less feed, and when grown will produce 50 pounds of meat per pig more than scrubby ones, thus making 400 pounds of additional meat without additional expense.

Experience shows that a sow that grows eight pigs to maturity twice a year is more profitable than one that produces more pigs and fails to develop them. Usually the sow has sufficient milk for eight, and when they are allowed to suckle six to eight weeks the pigs are in prime condition to wean without having any setback.

The sow can generally be bred successfully on the third day after weaning, and it is no trouble to have her produce two litters a year if you give her the proper attention. Watch her on the twenty-first day after breeding, and if necessary turn her with the boar again.

Feed for Stock.

Two kinds of feed so widely different as the clovers and the straws should be fed together, and it is a mistake to balance up with feeds that have the muscle-making elements, of which clover and alfalfa are the very best. Corn may be used, but more sparingly than is the ordinary custom. Corn itself does not contain the elements necessary for the proper growth of any kind of young stock.

Cotts Growing Wild.

Many cotts are allowed to grow wild in the true sense of the term. They are turned loose in a pasture or lot with perhaps some shelter, and there they are "roughed through" the winter on a ration of cornstalks, hay, scenery and a little grain, which usually is corn. That is one of the reasons why we have so many plugs on the farms today.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Be sure that your horses are free from worms.

The colt is the greatest argument in favor of the horse.

A horse afflicted with worms is never thrifty, and feed is wasted.

Do not allow young horses to wear a set of shoes more than a month.

Never let a mare up in a stall overnight. The open field for him always.

Exercise, pasture and growth are the factors for success in the bacon hog.

Be careful about feeding corn to brood sows. It can be put to more profitable use.

Wheat in Kentucky.

According to the Agricultural Department's figures the average price of wheat received by the producer in Kentucky from 1909 to 1913 was $1.03 a bushel as compared with 83.1 cents a bushel for the country at large.

These figures would hardly indicate to the casual reader that wheat is a diminishing crop in Kentucky, but such is the case. Kentucky's wheat crop at present is only about half what it was ten, twenty or thirty years ago. Only one small section of the State, composed of five counties showed an increase in wheat by the figures of the 1910 census. In 1899 Kentucky had 1,431,027 acres in wheat. In 1909 the acreage had been reduced to 681,323.

If it paid Kentucky farmers in the past to raise wheat it ought to pay them now when the average price per bushel is larger in Kentucky than in the United States as a whole. Wheat is a staple crop. It is always in demand; always saleable at a good price, provided it is of good quality. Only about a score of counties have an acreage of wheat amounting to 10,000 acres and upward. Christian county, which is the principal wheat county in the State, devotes approximately 10,000 acres to wheat, while the only county with an acreage half so great is Union with something over 25,000 acres.

The Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station is conducting a wheat growing campaign with a view to bringing the State back to its former standards of wheat production. There is no question that Kentucky can produce good wheat and there is no apparent reason why Kentucky farmers should be neglecting this great staple crop.

Unfair to the Legislature.

We believe that the press of the State is unfair to the Legislature. It was not altogether bad. In fact it passed some excellent measures. The bill against carrying concealed deadly weapons, which has been passed for two years and convicts as a felony for the second offense will go a long way toward putting a stop to a custom which has cost many lives. The anti-cigarette law is a protection to boys and is in line with acts in many of the other States. The 2-cent railroad bill was a most excellent law, and will materially reduce insurance premiums. Had legislature had passed a good revenue and taxation law, the body would have been fairly up to the average, if not a little over it. The House butchered this bill and it was as much the fault of the Governor and his associates as it was the House. It should also be remembered that this was also the most economical legislature Kentucky has had in many years, and this is evidence of wisdom in the face of the condition of the State treasury. We want to lay these flowers on the grave of the late departed.—Blenchtown News.

All Kentuckians are proud of the Hon. Swager Sherley, Representative in Congress from the Louisville district. His speech on the repeal of the tariff exemption for the Kentucky tobacco industry, Speaker Clark have given him nation-wide fame. The press of the East is "booming" the brilliant Kentuckian for Speaker of the House. There is a large number in Kentucky who would take pleasure in voting for him for United States Senator.—Owensboro Messenger.
